

UNIVERSITY OF TORONTO

3 1761 01072573 7

Presented to the LIBRARY of the UNIVERSITY OF TORONTO
by Mrs. H. J. Cody

THE CATECHISM
OF
THE COUNCIL OF TRENT.

E. G. O'Brien

THE

Toronto

"CATECHISM

November
1845

OF

THE COUNCIL OF TRENT,"

PUBLISHED BY COMMAND

OF

POPE PIUS THE FIFTH.

---

TRANSLATED INTO ENGLISH

BY THE

REV. J. DONOVAN,

PROFESSOR, &c., ROYAL COLLEGE, MAYNOOTH.

---

DUBLIN:

PRINTED FOR THE TRANSLATOR

BY W. FOLDS AND SON, GREAT STRAND-STREET.

PUBLISHED BY RICHARD COYNE, CAPEL-STREET, DUBLIN; AND BY KEATING AND BROWNE, LONDON.

---

1829.

6 p. 03 p.m.

THE

CATHOLICISM

DEPARTMENT OF THE UNIVERSITY OF CHICAGO

THE COUNCIL OF TRENT

This is a book of the series of the Council of Trent...
It is a book of the series of the Council of Trent...
It is a book of the series of the Council of Trent...
It is a book of the series of the Council of Trent...
It is a book of the series of the Council of Trent...

ENTERED AT STATIONERS' HALL.

It is a book of the series of the Council of Trent...
It is a book of the series of the Council of Trent...
It is a book of the series of the Council of Trent...
It is a book of the series of the Council of Trent...
It is a book of the series of the Council of Trent...

Bx 1958
E 5
1829

PRINTED BY THE UNIVERSITY OF CHICAGO PRESS
BY THE UNIVERSITY OF CHICAGO PRESS
BY THE UNIVERSITY OF CHICAGO PRESS
BY THE UNIVERSITY OF CHICAGO PRESS
BY THE UNIVERSITY OF CHICAGO PRESS

DECREE OF THE COUNCIL OF TRENT.

---

THAT the faithful may approach the Sacraments with greater reverence and devotion, the Holy Synod commands all Bishops not only to explain, in a manner accommodated to the capacity of the receivers, the nature and use of the Sacraments, when they are to be administered by themselves; but also to see that every Pastor piously and prudently do the same, in the vernacular language, should it be necessary and convenient. This exposition is to accord with a form to be prescribed by the Holy Synod for the administration of all the Sacraments, in a Catechism, WHICH BISHOPS WILL TAKE CARE TO HAVE FAITHFULLY TRANSLATED INTO THE VERNACULAR LANGUAGE, AND EXPOUNDED TO THE PEOPLE BY ALL PASTORS.

Conc. Trid. Sess. 24. de Reform. c. 7.

THE

TRANSLATOR'S PREFACE.

---

THE ROMAN CATECHISM, of which an English translation is now submitted to the Public, was composed by decree of the Council of Trent; and the same venerable authority commands all Bishops "to take care that it be faithfully translated into the vernacular language, and expounded to the people by all pastors." <sup>a</sup>

The Fathers of the Council had examined with patient industry, and, in the exercise of their high prerogative, had defined, with unerring accuracy, the dogmas of faith which were then denied or disputed: but the internal economy of the Church, also, solicited and engaged their attention; and, accordingly, we find them employed in devising measures for the instruction of ignorance, the amelioration of discipline, and the reformation of morals.

Amongst the means suggested to their deliberative wisdom for the attainment of these important ends, the Roman

<sup>a</sup> Conc. Trid. Sess. 24. de Reform. cap. 7.

Council of Trent was exclusively Roman or Liber - See Porri - or Campa history of Council of Trent

Catechism has been deemed not the least judicious or effective. The ardor and industry of the "Reformers" were actively employed, not only in the publication of voluminous works, "to guard against which required, "perhaps, little labour or circumspection;" but, also, in the composition of "innumerable smaller works, which, "veiling their errors under the semblance of piety, deceived with incredible facility the simple and the incautious." <sup>b</sup> To meet the mischievous activity of such men, and to rear the edifice of Christian knowledge on its only secure and solid basis, the instruction of its authorised teachers; to afford the faithful a fixed standard of Christian belief, and to the Pastor a prescribed form of religious instruction; to supply a pure and perennial fountain of living waters to refresh and invigorate at once the Pastor and the flock, were amongst the important objects, contemplated by the Fathers of Trent in the publication and translation of the Roman Catechism. <sup>c</sup>

They, too, are amongst the objects, which were contemplated by those, who urged the present undertaking, and which influenced the Translator's acceptance of the task. Coincidence of circumstances naturally suggests a concurrence of measures; and it requires little discernment to discover the coincidence that exists between the present circumstances of this country and those which awakened and alarmed the vigilance of the Fathers of Trent. Ireland, indeed the Empire, has been inundated with pernicious tracts, teeming with vituperative misrepresentation of the dogmas of the Catholic faith, and loaded with unmeasured invective against the principles of Catholic morality. "Innumerable smaller

<sup>b</sup> Pref. page 4.

<sup>c</sup> Pref. pages 3, 4.

Catholic - Universal - what becomes of the Greek Church - Armenian - Coptic - Ethiopian Anglican - Scotch - Swedish - and various German churches

“ works, veiling their errors under the semblance of piety,” have been scattered with unsparing hand “ amongst the “ ignorant and the incautious :” efforts are still made (the object is avowed) “ to promote the principles of the Reformation,” by unsettling the religious convictions of the people; and we are fortified by the example of the Fathers of Trent in the hope, that an antidote eminently calculated to neutralize the poison, which has been so industriously diffused, to abate prejudice, instruct ignorance, promote piety, and confirm belief, will be found in a work containing a comprehensive summary of the dogmas of the Catholic Faith, and a no less comprehensive epitome of the principles of Catholic morality.

To another, and, happily, an increasing class of the community, the present Volume cannot fail to prove a useful acquisition—to those who, anxious only for truth, desire to know the real principles of Catholics, could they arrive at a knowledge of them through the medium of a compendious and authoritative exposition. Whilst inquiry struggles to burst the bonds in which prejudice and interested misrepresentation have long bound up its freedom, and would still oppress its energies, it would not become Catholics to look on with indifference. We owe it to truth to aid these growing efforts of enlightened reason : the voice of charity bids us assist the exertions of honest inquiry : we owe it to ourselves to co-operate in removing the load of obloquy, under which we still labor ; and, if it were possible for us to be insensible to these claims, there is yet an obligation from which nothing can exempt us—it is due to religion to make her known as she really is. To these important ends we cannot, perhaps, contribute more effectually than by placing within the reach of all, a Work explanatory of

Catholic doctrine, and of universally acknowledged authority in the Catholic Church.<sup>d</sup>

To the Pastor, upon whom devolves the duty of public instruction, the “Catechismus ad Parochos” presents peculiar advantages. In its pages he will discover a rich treasure of theological knowledge, admirably adapted to purposes of practical utility. The entire economy of religion he will there find developed to his view—the majesty of God, the nature of the divine essence—the attributes of the Deity, their transcendent operations—the creation of man, his unhappy fall—the promise of a Redeemer, the mysterious and merciful plan of redemption—the establishment of the Church, the marks by which it is to be known and distinguished—the awful sanction with which the Divine Law is fenced round, the rewards that await and animate the good, the punishments that threaten and awe the wicked—the nature, number and necessity of those supernatural aids instituted by the divine goodness to support our weakness in the arduous conflict for salvation—the Law delivered in thunder on Sinai, embracing the various duties of man, under all the relations of his being—finally, the nature, necessity and conditions of that heavenly intercourse that should subsist between the soul and its Creator; the exposition of that admirable prayer composed by the Son of God—all this, comprehending as it does, the whole substance of doctrinal and practical religion, and at once instructive to Pastor and people, the reader will find in the “Catechismus ad Parochos,” arranged in order, expounded with perspicuity, and sustained by convincing argument.

<sup>d</sup> On this subject the following observations, from the pen of a Protestant Clergyman, are as candid as they are just:—“The religion of the Roman Catholics ought always, in strictness, to be considered apart from its professors, whether kings, popes, or inferior bishops; and its tenets, and its forms, should be treated of separately. To the acknowledged creeds, catechisms, and other formularies of the Catholic Church, we should resort for a faithful description of what Roman Catholics do really hold, as doctrines essential to salvation; and as such, held by the faithful in all times, places, and countries. Though the Catholic forms in some points may vary in number and splendor, the Catholic doctrines cannot;—though opinions may differ, and change with circumstances, articles of faith remain the same. Without a due and constant consideration of these facts, no Protestant can come to a right understanding respecting the essential faith and worship of the Roman Catholics. It has been owing to a want of this discrimination, that so many absurd, and even wicked tenets, have been palmed upon our brethren of the Catholic Church: that which they deny, we have insisted they religiously hold; that which the best informed amongst them utterly abhor, we have held up to the detestation of mankind, as the guide of their faith, and the rule of their actions. This is not fair: it is not doing to others as we would have others do unto us.”—The Religions of all Nations, by the Rev. J. Nightingale, p. 12.

Besides a general index, one pointing out the adaptation of the several parts of the Catechism to the Gospel of the Sunday will, it is hoped, facilitate the duty of public instruction, and render this Catechism, what it was originally intended to be, the manual of Pastors.

Such are the nature and object of the present work: a brief sketch of its history must enhance its worth, and may, it is hoped, prove acceptable to the learned reader.

It has already been observed, that the Roman Catechism owes its origin to the zeal and wisdom of the Fathers of Trent: the Decree of the Council for its commencement was passed in the twenty-fourth session; and its composition was confided to individuals recommended, no doubt, by their superior piety, talents and learning. That, during the Council, a Congregation had been appointed for the execution of the work, is matter of historic evidence; † but whether, before the close of the Council, the work had actually been commenced, is a point of interesting, but doubtful inquiry. ‡ It is certain, however, that amongst

after the independent theories with more

* Pogianus, vol. 2. p. xviii.

† Palavicino, lib. xxiv. c. 13.

those who, under the superintending care of the sainted Archbishop of Milan, were most actively employed in its composition, are to be numbered three learned Dominicans, Leonardo Marini, subsequently raised to the Archiepiscopal throne of Lanciano, <sup>s</sup> Francisco Foreiro, the learned translator of Isaias, <sup>h</sup> and Ægidius Foscarari, Bishop of Modena, <sup>i</sup> names not unknown to history and to literature. <sup>k</sup> Whether to them exclusively belongs the completion of the Catechism, or whether they share the honor and the merit with others, is a question which, about the middle of the last century, enlisted the zeal and industry of contending writers. The Letters and Orations of Pogianus, published by Lagomarsini, seem however to leave the issue of the contest no longer doubtful. Of these letters one informs us, that three Bishops were appointed by the Sovereign Pontiff to undertake the task: <sup>l</sup> of the three Dominicans already mentioned, two only had been raised to the episcopal dignity; and hence a fourth person, at least, must have been associated to their number and their labors. That four persons had been actually appointed by the Pontiff appears from the letter of Gratianus to Cardinal Commendon; <sup>m</sup> and after much research, Lagomarsini has discovered that this fourth per-

<sup>g</sup> Epistolæ et orationes Julii Pogiani, editæ a Lagomarsini, Romæ 1756, vol. 2. p. xx.

<sup>h</sup> Oltrochius de vita ac rebus gestis, S. Caroli Borromæi, lib. 1. c. 8. annot. 3. apud. Pogianum, vol. 2. p. xx.

<sup>i</sup> Tabularium Ecclesiæ Romanæ. Leipsic 1743.

<sup>k</sup> Foreiro's translation and commentary on Isaias may be seen in the "Recueil des grands critiques."

<sup>l</sup> "Datun est negotium a Pontifice Maximo tribus episcopis," &c. Pog. Ep. et Orat. vol. 3, p. 449.

<sup>m</sup> ..... "ad eam rem quatuor viros Pius delegit," &c. Pog. vol. 1. xvii.

the whole thing under the pope - and Roman not Orthodox and all looking promotion
from Rome

son was Muzio Calini, Archbishop of Zara. <sup>n</sup> The erudite and accurate Tiraboschi has arrived at the same conclusion: he expressly numbers Calini amongst the authors of the Roman Catechism. <sup>o</sup> The MSS. notes, to which Largomarsini refers in proof of this opinion, mention, it is true, the names of Galesinus and Pogianus with that of Calini: Pogianus, it is universally acknowledged, had no share in the composition of the work; and the passage, therefore, must have reference solely to its style. With this interpretation the mention of Calini does not conflict: the orations delivered by him in the Council of Trent prove, that in elegance of Latinity he was little inferior to Pogianus himself; and the style, therefore, might also have employed the labor of his pen.

Other names are mentioned as possessing claims to the honor of having contributed to the composition of the Trent Catechism, amongst which are those of Cardinal Seripandus, Archbishop of Salerno, and legate at the Council to Pius the Fourth, Michael Medina, and Cardinal Antoniano secretary to Pius the Fifth; but Tiraboschi omits to notice their pretensions; and my inquiries have not been rewarded with a single authority competent to impeach the justness of the omission. Their names, that of Medina excepted, he frequently introduces throughout his history: in no instance, however, does he intimate that they had any share in the composition of the Roman Catechism; and his silence therefore I am disposed to interpret as a denial of their claim.

<sup>n</sup> Calini assisted at the Council, as Archbishop of Zara, and died Bishop of Terni, in 1570. It would appear from Tiraboschi that he belonged to no religious order. He is called "uomo di molte lettere e molta pietà." See MSS. notes found in the library of the Jesuit College in Fermo; also MSS. letters of Calini, apud Pogian. vol. 2. xxii. Palavicino Istoria del C. di Trento, l. 15. c. 13.

<sup>o</sup> See Tiraboschi Storia della Letteratura Italiana, T. vii. part 1. p. 304, 308. vid. Script. Ordin. Prædic. vol. 228. Romæ, 1784.

The Work, when completed,<sup>p</sup> was presented to Pius the Fifth, and was handed over by his Holiness for revision to a Congregation, over which presided the profound and judicious Cardinal Sirlet.<sup>q</sup> The style, according to some, was finally retouched by Paulus Manutius:<sup>r</sup> according to others, and the opinion is more probable, it owes this last improvement to the classic pen of Pogianus.<sup>s</sup> Its uniformity, (the observation is Lagomarsini's) and its strong resemblance to that of the other works of Pogianus, depose in favour of the superiority of his claim.<sup>t</sup> The work was put to press under the vigilant eye of the laborious and elegant Manutius,<sup>u</sup> published by authority of Pius the Fifth, and by command of the Pontiff translated into the languages of Italy, France, Germany, and Poland.<sup>v</sup> To the initiated no apology is, I trust, necessary for this analysis of a controversy which the Translator could not, with propriety, pass over in silence, and on which so much of laborious research has been expended. To detail, however, the numerous approvals that hailed the publication of the work, recommended its perusal, and promoted its

<sup>p</sup> It was finished anno 1564. Catechismum habemus jam absolutum, &c. Letter of S. Charles Borromeo to Cardinal Hosius, dated December 27th, 1564, Pog. 2. xxxxxvii.

<sup>q</sup> Ibid. To Cardinal Sirlet, Biblical literature owes the variaz lectiones in the Antwerpian Polyglot.

<sup>r</sup> Graveson Hist. Eccl. T. 7. p. 156. Ed. Venet. 1738. Apostolus Zeno. Anotat. in Bibl. Elog. Ital. T. 11. p. 136. Ed. Venet. 1733.

<sup>s</sup> Lagomarsini Not. in Gratian. Epist. ad Card. Commend. Romæ, 1756.

<sup>t</sup> Vol. 2. p. xxxiv.

<sup>u</sup> Pog. vol. 2. p. xxxix.

<sup>v</sup> It was printed by Manutius before the end of July, 1566, but not published until the September following, when a folio and quarto edition appeared at the same time, accompanied with an Italian translation, from the pen of P. Alessio Figliucci, O. P. Sabutin. in vitâ Pii V. Pog. vol. 2. xl.

circulation, would, perhaps, rather fatigue the patience, than interest the curiosity of the reader.<sup>w</sup> Enough, that its merits were then, as they are now, recognised by the Universal Church; and the place given amongst the masters of spiritual life to the devout A'Kempis, "second only," says Fontenelle, "to the books of canonical Scripture," has been unanimously awarded to the Catechism of the Council of Trent, as a compendium of Catholic theology.

Thus, undertaken by decree of the Council of Trent, the result of the aggregate labors of the most distinguished of the Fathers who composed that august assembly, revised by the severe judgment, and polished by the classic taste of the first scholars of that classic age, the Catechism of the Council of Trent is stamped with the impress of superior worth, and challenges the respect and veneration of every reader.

In estimating so highly the merits of the original, it has not, however, escaped the Translator's notice, that a Work purely theological and didactic, treated in a severe, scholastic form, and therefore not recommended by the more ambitious ornaments of style, must prove uninviting to those who seek to be amused, rather than to be instructed. The judicious reader will not look for such recommendation: the character of the work precludes the idea: perspicuity, and an elaborate accuracy, are the leading features of the original; and the Translator is, at least, entitled to the praise of not having aspired to higher excellencies. To express the entire meaning of the author, attending rather to the sense, than to the number of his words, is the rule by which the Roman Orator was guided in his translation of the celebrated orations of the two rival orators of Greece. * From this general rule, however just, and favourable to elegance, the Translator has felt it a conscientious duty not unfrequently to depart, in the translation of a work, the phraseology of which is, in so many instances, consecrated by ecclesiastical usage. Whilst, therefore, he has endeavoured to preserve the spirit, he has been unwilling to lose sight of the letter: studious to avoid a servile exactness, he has not felt himself at liberty to indulge the freedom of paraphrase: anxious to transfuse into the copy the spirit of the original, he has been no less anxious to render it an express image of that original. The reader, perhaps, will blame his severity: his fidelity, he trusts, may defy reproof; and on it he rests his only claim to commendation.

<sup>w</sup> Amongst these authorities are Bulls 102, 105, of Pius V. in Bullar. p. 305, 307; Brief of Greg. XIII. 1583; Epist. Card. Borrom. Synods of Milan, 1565; of Beneventum, 1567; of Ravenna, 1568; of Meaux, 1569; of Geneva, 1574; of Melun, (national) 1576; of Rouen, 1581; of Bourdeaux, 1583; of Tours, 1583; of Rheims, 1583; of Tolouse, 1590; of Avignon, 1594; of Aquileia, 1586, &c. &c.

By placing the work, in its present form, before the Public, the Translator trusts he shall have rendered some service to the cause of religion: should this pleasing anticipation be realised, he will deem the moments of leisure devoted to it well spent, and the reward more than commensurate to his humble labors.

* De opt. gen. orat. n. 14.

MAYNOOTH COLLEGE,

June 10th, 1829.

PREFACE

TO

THE CATECHISM

OF

THE COUNCIL OF TRENT.

---

INTENTION OF THE COUNCIL—OBJECT AND AUTHORITY OF THE WORK—ITS USE AND DIVISION.

SUCH is the nature of the human mind, so limited are its intellectual powers, that, although by means of diligent and laborious inquiry it has been enabled of itself to investigate and discover many divine truths; yet guided solely by its own lights it could never know or comprehend most of those things by which eternal salvation, the principal end of man's creation and formation to the image and likeness of God, is attained. "The invisible things of God, from the creation of the world, are," as the Apostle teaches, "clearly seen, being understood by the things that are made: his eternal power also and divinity." (1) But "the mystery which had been hidden from ages and generations" so far transcends the reach of man's understanding, that were it not "manifested to his saints to whom God," by the gift of faith, "would make known the riches of the glory of this mystery, amongst the Gentiles, which is Christ," (2) it had never been given to human research to aspire to such wisdom.

Insufficiency of human reason.

Necessity of Revelation.

(1) Rom. i. 20.

(2) Coloss. i. 26, 27.

And of authorized Teachers.

But, as "faith cometh by hearing," (3) the necessity of the assiduous labour and faithful ministry of a legitimate teacher, at all times, towards the attainment of eternal salvation is manifest, for it is written, "how shall they hear without a preacher? And how shall they preach unless they be sent?" (4) And, indeed, never, from the very creation of the world, has God most merciful and benignant been wanting to his own; but "at sundry times and in divers manners spoke, in times past, to the Fathers by the Prophets;" (5) and pointed out, in a manner suited to the times and circumstances, a sure and direct path to the happiness of heaven. But, as he had foretold that he would give a teacher, "to be the light of the Gentiles and salvation to the ends of the earth;" (6) "in these days he hath spoken to us by his Son," (7) whom also by a voice from heaven, "from the excellent glory," (8) he has commanded all to hear and to obey; and the Son "hath given some Apostles, and some Prophets and others Evangelists and others Pastors, and Teachers," (9) to announce the word of life; that we be not carried about like children with every wind of doctrine, but holding fast to the firm foundation of the faith, "may be built together into a habitation of God in the Holy Ghost." (10)

The Pastors of the Church to be heard.

That none may receive the word of God from the ministers of the Church as the word of man but as the word of Christ, what it really is; the same Saviour has ordained that their ministry should be invested with such authority that he says to them; "he that hears you hears me; and he that despises you despises me;" (11) a declaration which he would not be understood to make to those only to whom his words were addressed, but likewise to all who, by legitimate succession, should discharge the ministry of the word, promising to be with them "all days, even to the consummation of the world." (12)

(3) Rom. x. 17.

(4) Rom. x. 14, 15.

(5) Heb. i. 1.

(6) Is. xlix. 6.

(7) Heb. i. 2.

(8) 2 Pet. i. 17.

(9) Eph. iv. 11.

(10) Eph. ii. 22.

(11) Luke, x. 16.

(12) Matt. xxviii. 20.

As this preaching of the divine word should never be interrupted in the Church of God, so in these our days it becomes necessary to labour with more than ordinary zeal and piety to nurture and strengthen the faithful with sound and wholesome doctrine as with the food of life: for "false prophets have gone forth into the world (13) "with various and strange doctrines" (14) to corrupt the minds of the faithful; of whom the Lord hath said "I sent them not, and they ran; I spoke not "to them, yet they prophesied." (15) In this unholy work, to such extremes has their impiety, practised in all the arts of Satan, been carried, that it would seem almost impossible to confine it within bounds; and did we not rely on the splendid promises of the Saviour, who declared that he had built his Church on so solid a foundation, that the gates of hell should never prevail against it, (16) we should be filled with most alarming apprehension lest, beset on every side by such a host of enemies, assailed by so many and such formidable engines, the Church of God should, in these days, fall beneath their combined efforts. To omit those illustrious states which heretofore professed, in piety and holiness, the Catholic faith transmitted to them by their ancestors, but are now gone astray, wandering from the paths of truth, and openly declaring that their best claims to piety are founded on a total abandonment of the faith of their fathers: there is no region however remote, no place however securely guarded, no corner of the Christian republic, into which this pestilence has not sought secretly to insinuate itself. Those, who proposed to themselves to corrupt the minds of the faithful, aware that they could not hold immediate personal intercourse with all, and thus pour into their ears their poisoned doctrines, by adopting a different plan, disseminated error and impiety more easily and extensively. Besides those voluminous works, by which they sought the subversion of the Catholic faith;

Peculiar necessity of pastoral instruction in these days.

does not this equally apply to the false doctrines of Activity of the "Reformers."

Rome

& return to the faith of their fathers, the Church of Rome with the innovators

(13) 1 John, iv. 1.

(14) Heb. xiii. 9.

(15) Jerem. xxiii. 21.

(16) Matt. xvi. 18.

to guard against which, however, containing, as they did, open heresy, required, perhaps, little labor or circumspection; they also composed innumerable smaller books, which, veiling their errors under the semblance of piety, deceived with incredible facility the simple and the incautious.

Object and authority of this work.

The Fathers, therefore, of the general Council of Trent, anxious to apply some healing remedy to an evil of such magnitude, were not satisfied with having decided the more important points of Catholic doctrine against the heresies of our times, but deemed it further necessary to deliver some fixed form of instructing the faithful in the truths of religion from the very rudiments of Christian knowledge; a form to be followed by those to whom are lawfully intrusted the duties of pastor and teacher. In works of this sort many, it is true, have already employed their pens, and earned the reputation of great piety and learning. The Fathers, however, deemed it of the first importance that a work should appear, sanctioned by the authority of the Holy Synod, from which pastors and all others on whom the duty of imparting instruction devolves may draw with security precepts for the edification of the faithful; that as there is "one Lord, one Faith," (17) there may also be one standard and prescribed form of propounding the dogmas of faith, and instructing Christians in all the duties of piety.

Its subject matter.

As, therefore, the design of the work embraces a variety of matter, the Holy Synod cannot be supposed to have intended to comprise, in one volume, all the dogmas of Christianity, with that minuteness of detail to be found in the works of those who profess to treat of all the institutions and doctrines of religion. Such a task would be one of almost endless labor, and manifestly, ill-suited to attain the proposed end. But, having undertaken to instruct pastors and such as have care of souls in those things that belong peculiarly to the pastoral office and are accommodated to the capacity of the faithful; the Holy

(17) Eph. iv. 5.

Synod intended that such things only should be treated of as might assist the pious zeal of pastors in discharging the duty of instruction, should they not be very familiar with the more abstruse questions of theological disputation.

Such being the nature and object of the present work, its order requires that, before we proceed to develop those things severally which comprise a summary of this doctrine, we premise a few observations explanatory of the considerations which should form the primary object of the pastor's attention, and which he should keep continually before his eyes, in order to know to what end, as it were, all his views and labors and studies are to be directed, and how this end, which he proposes to himself, may be facilitated and attained.

Principal things to be observed by the Pastor in communicating instruction.

The first is always to recollect that in this consists all Christain knowledge, or rather, to use the words of the Apostle, "this is eternal life, to know thee, the only true God, and Jesus Christ whom thou hast sent." (18) A teacher in the Church will, therefore, use his best endeavours that the faithful desire earnestly "to know Jesus Christ and him crucified," (19) that they be firmly convinced, and with the most heart-felt piety and devotion believe, that "there is no other name under heaven given to men whereby they can be saved," (20) "for he is the propitiation for our sins." (21)

First.

But as "by this we know that we have known him, if we keep his commandments," (22) the next consideration, and one intimately connected with the preceding, is — to press also upon their attention that their lives are not to be wasted in ease and indolence, but that "we are to walk even as Christ walked," (23) "and pursue," with unremitting earnestness, "justice, godliness, faith, charity, patience, mildness:" (24) for, "he gave himself for us, that he might redeem us from all iniquity, and might cleanse to himself a people acceptable, a pursuer of good works." (25) These things the Apostle commands pastors "to speak and to exhort."

Second.

(18) John, xvii. 3. (19) 1 Cor. ii. 2. (20) Acts, iv. 12. (21) 1 John, ii. 2. (22) 1 John, ii. 5. (23) 1 John, ii. 6. (24) 1 Tim. vi. 11. (25) Tit. ii. 14.

Third.

But as our Lord and Saviour has not only declared, but has also proved by his own example, that "the Law and "the Prophets depend on love," (26) and as, according to the Apostle, charity is the end of the commandments, and the fulfilment of the law, (27) it is unquestionably a paramount duty of the pastor, to use the utmost assiduity to excite the faithful to a love of the infinite goodness of God towards us; that burning with a sort of divine ardor, they may be powerfully attracted to the supreme and all perfect good, to adhere to which is true and solid happiness, as is fully experienced by him who can say with the Prophet: "What have I in heaven but thee? and besides thee "what do I desire upon earth?" (28) This, assuredly, is that more excellent way (29) pointed out by the Apostle, when he refers all his doctrines and instructions to charity "which never faileth;" (30) for whatever is proposed by the pastor, whether it be the exercise of faith, of hope, or of some moral virtue; the love of God should be so strongly insisted upon by him, as to shew clearly that all the works of perfect Christian virtue can have no other origin, no other end than divine love. (31)

Fourth.

But as in imparting instruction of any sort, the manner of communicating it is of considerable importance, so in conveying instruction to the people, it should be deemed of the greatest moment.—Age, capacity, manners and condition demand attention, that he who instructs may become all things to all men, and be able to gain all to Christ, (32) and prove himself a faithful minister and steward, (33) and like a good and faithful servant, be found worthy to be placed by his Lord over many things. (34) Nor let him imagine that those committed to his care are all of equal capacity or like dispositions, so as to enable him to apply the same course of instruction, to lead all to knowledge und piety; for some are, "as "it were, new-born infants," (35) others grown up in

(26) Math. xxii. 40. (27) 1 Tim. i. 5. Rom. xiii. 8.

(28) Psal. lxxii. 25. (29) 1 Cor. xii. 31. (30) 1 Cor. xiii. 8.

(31) 1 Cor. xvi. 14. (32) 1 Cor. ix. 22. (33) 1 Cor. iv. 1, 2.

(34) Math. xxv. 23. (35) 1 Pet. ii. 2.

Christ, and others, in some sort, of full maturity. Hence the necessity of considering who they are that have occasion for milk, who for more solid food, (36) and of affording to each such nutriment of doctrine as may give spiritual increase, "until we all meet in the unity of faith" and of the knowledge of the Son of God into a perfect man, into the measure of the age of the fulness of Christ. (37) This the example of the Apostle points out to the observance of all, for, "he is a debtor to the Greek and the Barbarian, to the wise and to the unwise;" (38) thus giving all who are called to this ministry, to understand that in announcing the mysteries of faith, and inculcating the precepts of morality, the instruction is to be accommodated to the capacity and intelligence of the hearers; that, whilst the minds of the strong are filled with spiritual food, the little ones be not suffered to perish with hunger, "asking for bread, whilst there is none to break it to them." (39)

Nor should our zeal in communicating Christian knowledge be relaxed, because it is sometimes to be exercised in expounding matters apparently humble and unimportant, and, therefore, comparatively uninteresting to minds accustomed to repose in the contemplation of the more sublime truths of religion. If the wisdom of the eternal Father descended upon the earth in the meanness of our flesh, to teach us the maxims of a heavenly life, who is there whom the love of Christ does not compel (40) to become little in the midst of his brethren; and, as a nurse fostering her children, so anxiously to wish for the salvation of his neighbour, that, as the Apostle testifies of himself, he desires to deliver not only the Gospel of Jesus Christ to them, but even his own life for them. (41)

But all the doctrines of Christianity, in which the faithful are to be instructed, are derived from the word of God, which includes Scripture and Tradition. To the study of these, therefore, the pastor should devote his days and his

Where the doctrines of Christianity are contained.

(36) 1 Cor. iii. 2. Heb. v. 12. (37) Eph. iv. 13. (38) Rom. i. 14.

(39) Heb. v. 14. Lam. iv. 4. (40) 2 Cor. v. 14. (41) 1 Thess. ii. 7, 8.

nights, always keeping in mind the admonition of St. Paul to Timothy, which all who have the care of souls should consider as addressed to themselves: "Attend to reading, to exhortation, and to doctrine, (42) for all Scripture divinely inspired, is profitable to teach, to reprove, to correct, to instruct in justice, that the man of God may be perfect, furnished to every good work." (43)

Scripture of Tradition

Division of the work.

But as the truths revealed by Almighty God, are so many and so various, as to render it no easy task to comprehend them, or having comprehended them, to retain so distinct a recollection of them as to be able to explain them with ease and promptitude when occasion may require; our predecessors in the faith have very wisely reduced them to these four heads—The Apostle's Creed—The Sacraments—The ten Commandments—and the Lord's Prayer.

First Part.

The Creed contains all that is to be held according to the discipline of the Christian faith, whether it regard the knowledge of God, the creation and government of the world; or the redemption of man, the rewards of the good and the punishments of the wicked. The doctrine of the seven Sacraments comprehends the signs, and, as it were, the instruments of grace. The Decalogue, whatever has reference to the law, "the end whereof is charity." (44)

Second Part

Third Part.

Finally, the Lord's Prayer contains whatever can be the object of the Christian's desires, or hopes, or prayers.

Fourth Part

The exposition, therefore, of these, as it were, common places of sacred Scripture, includes almost every thing to be known by a Christian.

Application of the Catechism to the Gospel of the Sunday.

We, therefore, deem it proper to acquaint pastors that, whenever they have occasion, in the ordinary discharge of their duty, to expound any passage of the Gospel or any other part of Scripture, they will find its substance under some one of the four heads already enumerated, to which they will recur, as the source from which their exposition is to be drawn. Thus, if the Gospel of the first Sunday of Advent is to be explained, "There shall be signs in the sun and in the moon," &c. (45) whatever regards its explanation is contained under the article of the creed, "He shall come to judge the living and the dead," and by embodying the substance of that article in his exposition, the pastor will at once instruct his people in the creed and in the Gospel. Whenever, therefore, he has to communicate instruction and expound the Scriptures, he will observe the same rule of referring all to these four principal heads, which, as we have already observed, comprise the whole force and doctrine of Holy Scripture.

(42) 1 Tim. iv. 13. (43) 2 Tim. iii. 16, 17. (44) 1 Tim. i. 5.

He will, however, observe that order which he deems best suited to persons, times and circumstances. Walking in the footsteps of the Fathers, who to initiate men in Christ the Lord and instruct them in his discipline begin with the doctrine of faith, we have deemed it useful to explain first in order what appertains to faith.

Why it begins with the explanation of the Creed.

As the word faith has a variety of meanings in the Sacred Scriptures, it may not be unnecessary to observe that here we speak of that faith by which we yield our entire assent to whatever has been revealed by Almighty God. That faith thus understood is necessary to salvation no man can reasonably doubt, particularly as the Sacred Scriptures declare that "Without faith it is impossible to please God." (46) For as the end proposed to man as his ultimate happiness is far above the reach of the human understanding, it was, therefore, necessary that it should be made known to him by Almighty God. This knowledge is nothing else than faith, by which we yield our unhesitating assent to whatever the authority of our Holy Mother the Church teaches us to have been revealed by Almighty God: for the faithful cannot doubt those things of which God, who is truth itself, is the author. Hence we see the great difference that exists between this faith which we give to God, and the credence which we yield to profane historians. But faith, though comprehensive, and differing in degree and dignity, [for we read in Scripture these words "O thou of little faith, why didst thou

Faith, how understood here.

(45) Luke xxi. 25.

(46) Heb. xi. 6.

“doubt,” (47) and “great is thy faith,” (48) and “Increase our faith,” (49) also “Faith without works is dead,” (50) and “Faith which worketh by charity;” (51) is yet the same in kind, and the full force of its definition applies equally to all its degrees. Its fruit and advantages to us, we shall point out when explaining the articles of the creed. The first, then, and most important points of Christian faith are those which the holy Apostles, the great leaders and teachers of the faith, men inspired by the Holy Ghost, have divided into the twelve articles of the Creed: for as they had received a command from the Lord to go forth “into the whole world,” “as his ambassadors, and preach the Gospel to every creature, (52) they thought proper to compose a form of Christian faith, “that all “may speak and think the same thing;” (53) and that amongst those whom they should have called to the unity of faith, no schisms should exist; but that they should be perfect in the same mind, and in the same spirit. This profession of Christian faith and hope, drawn up by themselves, the Apostles called a “symbol,” either because it was an aggregate of the combined sentiments of all; or because, by it, as by a common sign and watch-word, they might easily distinguish false brethren, deserters from the faith “unawares brought in,” (54) “who adulterated the word of God,” (55) from those who had pledged an oath of fidelity to serve under the banner of Christ.

The Creed
why composed by the Apostles.

(47) Math. xiv. 31.

(49) Luke xvii. 5.

(52) 2 Cor. v. 18, 19, 20. Mark, xvi. 15.

(54) Gal. ii. 4.

(48) Math. xv. 28.

(51) Gal. v. 6.

(53) 1 Cor. i. 10.

(55) 2 Cor. ii. 17.

THE CATECHISM
OF
THE COUNCIL OF TRENT.

---

PART I.

ON THE TWELVE ARTICLES OF THE CREED.

---

ARTICLE I.

“ I BELIEVE IN GOD, THE FATHER ALMIGHTY, MAKER OF HEAVEN AND EARTH.”

AMONGST the many truths which Christianity proposes to our belief, and of which, separately, or collectively, an assured and firm faith is necessary, the first, and one essential to be believed by all, is that which God himself has taught us as the foundation of truth, and which is a summary of the unity of the divine essence, of the distinction of three persons, and of the actions which are peculiarly attributed to each. The pastor will inform the people that the Apostles' Creed briefly comprehends the doctrine of this mystery. For as has been observed by our predecessors in the faith, who, in treating this subject, have given proofs at once of piety and accuracy, the Creed seems to be divided into three principal parts, one describing the first Person of the divine nature, and the stupendous work of the creation—another, the second Person, and the mystery of mans' redemption—a third, comprising in several most appro-

Division of
the Creed.

appropriate sentences, the doctrine of the third Person, the head and source of our sanctification. These sentences are called articles, by a sort of comparison frequently used by our forefathers; for as the members of the body are divided by joints, (articulis) so in this profession of faith whatever is to be believed distinctly and separately from any thing else, is appositely called an article.

Import of the words
"I believe
"in God."

"I BELIEVE IN GOD"] The meaning of these words is this; I believe with certainty, and without a shadow of doubt profess my belief in God the Father, the first person of the Trinity, who by his omnipotence created from nothing, preserves and governs the heavens and the earth and all things which they encompass: and not only do I believe in him from my heart, and profess this belief with my lips, but with the greatest ardor and piety tend toward him, as the supreme and most perfect good. Let it suffice thus briefly to state the substance of this first article: but as great mysteries lie concealed under almost every word the pastor must now give them a more minute consideration, in order that, as far as God has permitted, the faithful may approach, with fear and trembling, the contemplation of the glory of the divine Majesty.

Certainty
of Faith.

The word "believe," therefore, does not here mean "to think," "to imagine," "to be of opinion," but, as the Sacred Scriptures teach, it expresses the deepest conviction of the mind, by which we give a firm and unhesitating assent to God revealing his mysterious truths. As faith, therefore, as regards the use of the word here; he, who firmly and without hesitation is convinced of any thing is said "to believe." (1) Nor is the knowledge derived through faith to be considered less certain, because its objects are not clearly comprehended; for the divine light in which we see them, although it does not render them evident, yet sheds around them such a lustre as leaves no doubt on the mind regarding them, "For God, who commanded the light to shine out of darkness, hath shone in

(1) Rom, iv. 18-21.

“our hearts,” (2) “that the Gospel be not hidden to us,
“as to those that perish.” (3)

From what has been said, it follows that he, who is gifted with this heavenly knowledge of faith, is free from an inquisitive curiosity: for when God commands us to believe, he does not propose to us to search into his divine judgments, or inquire into their reasons and their causes, but demands an immutable faith, by the efficacy of which, the mind reposes in the knowledge of eternal truth. And indeed, if, whilst we have the testimony of the Apostle, that “God is true and every man a liar:” (4) it would argue arrogance and presumption to disbelieve the asseveration of a grave and sensible man affirming any thing as true, and urge him to support his asseveration by reasons and authorities; what temerity and folly does it not argue in those, who hear the words of God himself, to demand reasons for the heavenly and saving doctrines which he reveals? Faith, therefore, excludes not only all doubt, but even the desire of subjecting its truths to demonstration.

Excludes
curiosity.

But the pastor should also teach, that he who says, “I believe,” besides declaring the inward assent of the mind, which is an internal act of faith, should also openly and with alacrity profess and proclaim what he inwardly and in his heart believes: for the faithful should be animated by the same spirit that spoke by the lips of the prophet, when he said: “I believe and therefore did I speak,” (5) and should follow the example of the Apostles who replied to the princes of the earth: “We cannot but speak the things which we have seen and heard.” (6) This spirit should be excited within us by these admirable words of St. Paul: “I am not ashamed of the Gospel, for it is the power of God unto salvation, to every one that believeth;” (7) sentiments which derive additional force from these words of the same Apostle: “With the heart

Open profession of.

(2) 2 Cor. iv. 6. (3) Ibid v. 3. (4) Rom. iii. 4. (5) Ps. cxv. 1.
(6) Acts. iv. 20. (7) Rom. i. 16.

“ we believe unto justice ; but with the mouth confession “ is made unto salvation.” (8)

Christian philosophy superior to human wisdom.

“ IN GOD”] From these words we may learn, how exalted are the dignity and excellence of Christian philosophy, and what a debt of gratitude we owe to the divine goodness ; we to whom it is given at once to soar on the wings of faith to the knowledge of a being surpassing in excellence and in whom all our desires should be concentrated. For in this Christian philosophy and human wisdom differ much, that guided solely by the light of nature, and having made gradual advances by reasoning on sensible objects and effects, human wisdom, after long and laborious investigation, at length reaches with difficulty the contemplation of the invisible things of God, discovers and understands the first cause and author of all things : whilst on the contrary Christian philosophy so enlightens and enlarges the human mind, that at once and without difficulty it pierces the heavens, and illumined with the splendors of the divinity contemplates first the eternal source of light, and in its radiance all created things ; so that with the Apostle we experience with the most exquisite pleasure, “ and believing rejoice with joy unspeakable,” (9) that “ we have been called out of darkness into his admirable light.” (10) Justly therefore do the faithful profess first to believe in God, whose majesty with the prophet Jeremiah, we declare “ incomprehensible,” (11) for, as the Apostle says, “ He dwells in light inaccessible, which no man hath seen or can see :” (12) and speaking to Moses, he himself said “ No man shall see my face and live.” (13) The mind, to be capable of rising to the contemplation of the Deity whom nothing approaches in sublimity, must be entirely disengaged from the senses ; and this the natural condition of man in the present life renders impossible.

Human reason, however, capa-

“ God,” however, “ left not himself without testimony ; doing good from heaven ; giving rains and fruit-

(8) Rom. x. 10.

(9) 1 Pet. i. 8.

(10) 1 Pet. ii. 9.

(11) Jerem. xxxii. 19.

(12) 1 Tim. vi. 16.

(13) Exod. xxxiii. 10.

“ful seasons, filling our hearts with food and glad“ness.” (14) Hence it is that philosophers conceived no mean idea of the Divinity; ascribed to him nothing corporeal, nothing gross, nothing compound; considered him the perfection and fulness of all good, from whom, as from an eternal, inexhaustible fountain of goodness and benignity, flows every perfect gift to all creatures; called him the wise, the author of truth, the loving, the just, the most beneficent; gave him, also, many other appellations expressive of supreme and absolute perfection; and said that his immensity filled every place, and his omnipotence extended to every thing. This the Sacred Scriptures more clearly express, and more fully develope, as in the following passages: “God is a spirit;” (15) “Be ye perfect, “even as your Father, who is in heaven, is also perfect;”
 (16) “all things are naked and open to his eyes;” (17) “Oh! the depth of the riches of the wisdom and of the “knowledge of God;” (18) “God is true;” (19) “I am
 “the way, the truth and the life;” (20) “Thy right hand
 “is full of justice;” (21) “Thou openest thy hand, “and fillest with blessing every living creature;” (22)
 and finally: “Whither shall I go from thy spirit, or whi“ther shall I flee from thy face? If I ascend into heaven, “thou art there; if I descend into hell thou art there; if I “take wing in the morning, and dwell in the uttermost “parts of the sea; even there also shall thy hand lead me,
 “and thy right hand shall hold me, &c.” (23) and “Do “I not fill heaven and earth, saith the Lord?” (24) These are great and sublime truths regarding the nature of God;
 and of these truths philosophers attained a knowledge, which, whilst it accords with the authority of the inspired volume, results from the investigation of created things.

ble of attaining a knowledge of God from his works.

(14) Acts xiv. 16.

(15) John iv. 24.

(16) Math. v. 48.

(17) Heb. iv. 13.

(18) Rom. xi. 33.

(19) Rom. iii. 4.

(20) John xiv. 6.

(21) Ps. xlvii. 11.

(22) Ps. cxliv. 16.

(23) Ps. cxxxviii. 7, 8, 9, 10, &c.

(24) Jer. xxiii. 24.

The knowledge derived from faith more easy and secure.

But we must, also, see the necessity of divine revelation, if we reflect that not only does faith, as we have already observed, make known at once to the rude and unlettered those truths, a knowledge of which philosophers could attain only by long and laborious study; but also impresses this knowledge with much greater certainty and security against all error, than if it were the result of philosophical enquiry. But how much more exalted must not that knowledge of the Deity be considered, which cannot be acquired in common by all from the contemplation of nature, but is the peculiar privilege of those who are illumined by the light of faith?

This knowledge is contained in the articles of the Creed, which disclose to us the unity of the divine essence, and the distinction of three persons; and also that God is the ultimate end of our being, from whom we are to expect the fruition of the eternal happiness of heaven: for we have learned from St. Paul, that "God is a rewarder of them that seek him." (25) The greatness of these rewards, and whether they are such as that human knowledge could aspire to their attainment, (26) we learn from these words of Isaias uttered long before those of the Apostle; "From the beginning of the world they have not heard, nor perceived with the ears: without thee, O God, the eye hath not seen what things thou hast prepared for them that wait for thee." (27)

Unity of
God.

From what has been said, it must also be confessed that there is but one God, not many Gods; for as we attribute to God supreme goodness and infinite perfection, it is impossible that what is supreme and most perfect could be common to many. If a being want any thing that constitutes this supreme perfection, it is therefore imperfect and cannot be endowed with the nature of God. This is also proved from many passages of the Sacred Scripture; for it is written, "Hear, O Israel, the Lord our God is one Lord;" (28) again, "Thou shalt not have

(25) Heb. xi. 6.

(26) 1 Cor. ii. 9-14.

(27) Isa. lxiv. 4.

(28) Deut. vi. 4.

“strange gods before me,” (29) is the command of God: and again he often admonishes us by the prophet “I am the first, and I am the last, and besides me there is no God.” (30) The Apostle also expressly declares; “one Lord, one faith, one baptism.” (31) It should not, however, excite our surprise if the Sacred Scriptures sometimes give the name of God to creatures: (32) for when they call the prophets and judges gods, they do so not after the manner of the Gentiles who, in their folly and impiety, formed to themselves many gods; but in order to express, by a manner of speaking then not unusual, some eminent quality or function conferred on them by the divine munificence. Christian faith, therefore, believes and professes, as is declared in the Nicene Creed in confirmation of this truth, that God in his nature, substance and essence is one; but soaring still higher it so understands him to be one that it adores unity in trinity and trinity in unity. Of this mystery we now proceed to speak, as it comes next in order in the Creed.

“THE FATHER”] As God is called “Father” for more reasons than one, we must first determine the strictly appropriated meaning of the word in the present instance. Some also on whom the light of faith never shone, conceived God to be an eternal substance from whom all things had their beginning, by whose providence they are governed and preserved in their order and state of existence. As, therefore, he, to whom a family owes its origin and by whose wisdom and authority it is governed, is called a Father; so by analogy from things human, God was called Father, because acknowledged to be the creator and governor of the universe. The Sacred Scriptures also use the same appellation, when, speaking of God, they declare that to him the creation of all things, power, and admirable providence, are to be ascribed: for we read, “Is not he thy Father that hath possessed thee, and made thee, and created thee?” (33) And again, “Have Propriety of the word “Father” as applied to God.

(29) Exod. xx. 3. (30) Is. xlv. 6. xlviii. 12. (31) Eph. iv. 5. (32) Ps. lxxxix. 1. Exod. xxii. 28. 1 Cor. viii. 5. (33) Deut. xxxii. 6.

“we not all one Father? Hath not one God created us?” (34)

God in a special manner the “Father” of Christians.

But God, particularly in the New Testament, is much more frequently, and in some sense peculiarly called the Father of Christians, who “have not received the spirit of bondage in fear, but have received the spirit of adoption of sons, whereby they cry abba Father;” (35) “for the Father hath bestowed on us that manner of charity, that we should be called, and be the sons of God:” (36) “and if sons, heirs also, heirs, indeed, of God, and joint-heirs with Christ,” (37) “who is the first-born amongst many brethren, (38) for which cause he is not ashamed to call them brethren.” (39) Whether, therefore, we look to the common title of creation and conservation; or to the special one of spiritual adoption, the term “Father,” as applied to God by Christians, is alike appropriate.

The name of “Father” implies plurality of persons.

But the pastor will teach the faithful that, on hearing the word “Father,” besides the ideas already unfolded, their minds should rise to the contemplation of more exalted mysteries. Under the name of “Father,” the divine oracles begin to unveil to us a mysterious truth which is more abstruse, and more deeply hidden in that inaccessible light in which God dwells—a mysterious truth which human reason not only could not reach, but even conceive to exist. This name implies, that in the one essence of the Godhead is proposed to our belief, not only one person, but a distinction of persons: for in one Divine nature there are three persons; the Father, begotten of none; the Son, begotten of the Father before all ages; the Holy Ghost, proceeding from the Father and the Son from all eternity.

The Trinity.

The Father the first person.

But in the one substance of the Divinity the Father is the first person, who with his only begotten Son and the Holy Ghost is one God and one Lord, not in the singularity of one person, but in the trinity of one substance. These three persons, (for it would be impiety to assert that

(34) Mal. ii. 10.

(35) Rom. viii. 15.

(36) 1 John iii. 1.

(37) Rom. viii. 17.

(38) Rom. viii. 29.

(39) Heb. ii. 11.

they are unlike or unequal in any thing) are understood to be distinct only in their peculiar relations. The Father is unbegotten, the Son begotten of the Father, and the Holy Ghost proceeds from both; and we confess the essence of the three Persons, their substance, to be so the same, that we believe that, in the confession of the true and eternal God, we are piously and religiously to adore distinction in the Persons, unity in the essence and equality in the Trinity. When we say that the Father is the first person, we are not to be understood to mean that in the Trinity there is any thing first or last, greater or less—let no Christian be guilty of such impiety, for Christianity proclaims the same eternity, the same majesty of glory in the three Persons—but the Father, because the beginning without a beginning, we truly and unhesitatingly affirm to be the first person, who, as he is distinct from the others by his peculiar relation of pater-nity, so of him alone is it true that he begot the Son from eternity: for, when in the Creed we pronounce together the words “God” and “Father,” it intimates to us that he is God and Father from eternity.

But as in nothing is a too curious enquiry more dangerous, or error more fatal, than in the knowledge and exposition of this, the most profound and difficult of mysteries, let the pastor instruct the people religiously to retain the terms used to express this mystery, and which are peculiar to essence and person; and let the faithful know that unity belongs to essence, and distinction to Persons. But these are truths which should not be made matter of too subtle disquisition, when we recollect that “he, who is a searcher of majesty, shall be overwhelmed by glory.” (40) We should be satisfied with the assurance which faith gives us, that we have been taught these truths by God himself; and to dissent from his oracles is the extreme of folly and misery. He has said: “Teach ye all nations, baptising them in the name of the “Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost;” (41)

Curiosity to be avoided in examining the mystery of the Trinity.

(40) Prov. xxv. 27.

(41) Math. xxviii. 19.

and again, "there are three who give testimony in heaven; the Father, the Word, and the Holy Ghost; and these three are one." (42) Let him, however, who by the divine bounty believes these truths, constantly beseech and implore God, and the Father, who made all things out of nothing, and orders all things sweetly, who gave us power to become the sons of God, and who made known to us the mystery of the Trinity; that admitted, one day, into the eternal tabernacles, he may be worthy to see how great is the fecundity of the Father, who, contemplating and understanding himself, begot the Son like and equal to himself; how a love of charity in both, entirely the same and equal, which is the Holy Ghost, proceeding from the Father and the Son, connects the begetting and the begotten by an eternal and indissoluble bond; and that thus the essence of the Trinity is one and the distinction of the three persons perfect.

Why the power and majesty of God are designated by many names, in the Sacred Scriptures.

That of Almighty most frequent.

["ALMIGHTY"] The Sacred Scriptures, in order to mark the piety and devotion with which the God of holiness is to be adored, usually express his supreme power and infinite majesty in a variety of ways; but the pastor should impress particularly on the minds of the faithful, that the attribute of omnipotence is that by which he is most frequently designated. Thus he says of himself, "I am the Almighty God;" (43) and again, Jacob when sending his sons to Joseph thus prayed for them, "May my Almighty God make him favourable to you." (44) In the Apocalypse also it is written, "The Lord God, who is, who was, and who is to come, the Almighty:" (45) and in another place the last day is called "the day of Almighty God." (46) Sometimes the same attribute is expressed in many words; thus: "no word shall be impossible with God:" (47) Is the hand of the Lord unable?" (48) "Thy power is at hand when thou wilt." (49) Many other passages of the same import might be adduced, all of

(42) 1 John, v. 7.

(43) Gen. xvii. 1.

(44) Gen. xliii. 14.

(45) Apoc. i. 8.

(46) Apoc. xvi. 14.

(47) Luke i. 37.

(48) Num. xi. 23.

(49) Wisd. xii. 13.

which convey the same idea which is clearly comprehended under this single word "Almighty." By it we understand that there neither is, nor can be imagined any thing which God cannot do ; for he can not only annihilate all created things, and in a moment summon from nothing into existence many other worlds—an exercise of power which, however great, comes in some degree within our comprehension—but he can do many things still greater, of which the human mind can form no conception. But though God can do all things, yet he cannot lie, or deceive, or be deceived ; he cannot sin, or be ignorant of any thing, or cease to exist. These things are compatible with those beings only whose actions are imperfect, and are entirely incompatible with the nature of God, whose acts are all-perfect. To be capable of these things is a proof of weakness, not of supreme and infinite power, the peculiar attribute of God. Thus, whilst we believe God to be omnipotent, we exclude from him whatever is not intimately connected, and entirely consistent with the perfection of his nature.

Its meaning.

But the pastor should point out the propriety and wisdom of having omitted all other names of God in the Creed, and of having proposed to us that alone of "Almighty" as the object of our belief ; for by acknowledging God to be omnipotent, we also of necessity acknowledge him to be omniscient, and to hold all things in subjection to his supreme authority and dominion. When we doubt not that he is omnipotent, we must be also convinced of every thing else regarding him, the absence of which would render his omnipotence altogether unintelligible. Besides, nothing tends more to confirm our faith, and animate our hope, than a deep conviction that all things are possible to God : for whatever may be afterwards proposed as an object of faith, however great, however wonderful, however raised above the natural order, is easily and at once believed, when the mind is already imbued with the knowledge of the omnipotence of God. Nay more, the greater the truths which the divine oracles announce, the more willingly does the mind deem them worthy of belief; and should we expect any favor from heaven, we are not discouraged by the greatness of the desired boon, but are cheered and confirmed by frequently considering, that there is nothing which an omnipotent God can not effect.

Omnipotence, why the only attribute of God mentioned in the Creed.

Necessity of faith in God
'Almighty.'

With this faith, then, we should be specially fortified whenever we are required to render any extraordinary service to our neighbour, or seek to obtain by prayer any favor from God. Its necessity in the one case, we learn from the Redeemer himself, who, when rebuking the incredulity of the Apostles, said to them, "If you have faith as a mustard-seed, you shall say to this mountain, remove from hence thither, and it shall remove; and nothing shall be impossible to you:" (50) and in the other, from these words of St. James, "Let him ask in faith, nothing wavering; for he that wavereth is like a wave of the sea, which is moved and carried about by the wind. Therefore, let not that man think that he shall receive any thing of the Lord." (51) This faith brings with it also many advantages. It forms us, in the first place, to all humility and lowliness of mind, according to these words of the Prince of the Apostles: "Be you humbled, therefore, under the mighty hand of God." (52) It also teaches us not to fear where there is no cause of fear, but to fear God alone, (53) in whose power we ourselves and all that we have are placed; (54) for our Saviour says, "I will show you whom you shall fear; fear ye him, who, after he hath killed, hath power to cast into hell." (55) This faith is, also, useful to enable us to know and exalt the infinite mercies of God towards us: he who reflects on the omnipotence of God, cannot be so ungrateful as not frequently to exclaim, "He that is mighty hath done great things to me." (56)

(50) Math. xvii. 20.

(51) James, i. 6, 7,

(52) 1 Pet. v. 6.

(53) Ps. xxxii. 8. 33. 10.

(54) Wisd. vii. 16.

(55) Luke, xii. 5.

(56) Luke, i. 49.

When, however, in this article we call the Father “Almighty,” let no person be led into the error of excluding, therefore, from its participation the Son and the Holy Ghost. As we say the Father is God, the Son is God, the Holy Ghost is God, and yet there are not three Gods, but one God, so, in like manner, we confess that the Father is Almighty, the Son Almighty, and the Holy Ghost Almighty, and, yet, there are not three Almighties, but one Almighty. The Father, in particular, we call Almighty, because he is the source of all origin; as we also attribute wisdom to the Son, because the eternal word of the Father; and goodness to the Holy Ghost, because the love of both. These, however, and such appellations may be given indiscriminately to the three Persons, according to the rule of Catholic faith.

Not three Almighties but one Almighty.

“CREATOR OF HEAVEN AND EARTH”] The necessity of having previously imparted to the faithful a knowledge of the omnipotence of God, will appear from what we are now about to explain with regard to the creation of the world. For when already convinced of the omnipotence of the Creator, we more readily believe the wondrous production of so stupendous a work. For God formed not the world from materials of any sort, but created it from nothing, and that not by constraint or necessity, but spontaneously and of his own free will. Nor was he impelled to create by any other cause than a desire to communicate to creatures the riches of his bounty; for essentially happy in himself, he stands not in need of any thing; as David expresses it: “I said to the Lord, thou art my God, for of my goods thou hast no need.” (57) But as, influenced by his own goodness, “he hath done all things whatsoever he would,” (58) so in the work of the creation he followed no external form or model; but contemplating and, as it were, imitating the universal model contained in the divine intelligence, the supreme Architect, with infinite wisdom and power, attributes peculiar to the Divinity, created all things in the beginning: "he spoke and they were made, he commanded "and they were created." (59) The words "heaven" and "earth," include all things which the heavens and the earth contain; for, besides the heavens, which the Prophe called "the work of his fingers," (60) he also gave to the sun its brilliancy, and to the moon and stars their beauty: and that they may be "for signs and for seasons, for days and for years, (61) he so ordered the celestial bodies in a certain and uniform course, that nothing varies more than their continual revolution, yet nothing more fixed than that variety.

From what, how, and why, God made the world.

(57) Ps. xv. 2.

(58) Ps. cxliii. 3.

Creation of Angels.

Moreover, he created from nothing spiritual nature, and angels innumerable to serve and minister to him; and these he replenished and adorned with the admirable gifts of his grace and power. That the devil and his associates, the rebel angels, were gifted at their creation with grace, clearly follows from these words of the Sacred Scriptures: "The devil stood not in the truth;" (62) on which subject St. Augustine says, "In creating the angels he endowed them with good will, that is, with pure love, by which they adhere to him, at once giving them existence, and adorning them with grace." (63) Hence we are to believe that the angels were never without "good will," that is, the love of God. As to their knowledge we have this testimony of Holy Scripture: "Thou, Lord, my King, art wise according to the wisdom of an Angel of God, to understand all things upon earth." (64) Finally, David ascribes power to them in these words; "Mighty in strength, executing his word;" (65) and on this account, they are often called in Scripture the "powers" and "the hosts of heaven." But although they were all endowed with celestial gifts, very many, however, having rebelled against God, their Father and Creator, were hurled from the mansions of bliss, and shut up in the dark dungeons of

Their fall.

(59) Ps. xxxii. 9. cxlviii. 5. (60) Ps. viii. 4. (61) Gen. i. 14.

(62) John viii. 44.

(63) Aug. lib. 12. de Civit. Dei, cap. 9.

(64) 2 Kings, xiv. 20.

(65) Ps. cii. 20.

hell, there to suffer for eternity the punishment of their pride. Speaking of them, the Prince of the Apostles says: "He spared not the angels that sinned; but delivered them, drawn down by infernal ropes, to the lower hell, into torments, to be reserved unto judgment." (66)

The earth, also, God commanded to stand in the midst of the world, rooted in its own foundation, and "made the mountains to ascend, and the plains to descend into the place which he had founded for them." That the waters should not inundate the earth, "he has set a bound which they shall not pass over, neither shall they return to cover the earth." (67) He next not only clothed and adorned it with trees, and every variety of herb and flower, but filled it, as he had already filled the air and water, with innumerable sorts of living creatures.

Creation of the Earth.

Lastly, he formed man from the slime of the earth, immortal and impassible, not however by the strength of nature, but by the bounty of God. His soul he created to his own image and likeness; gifted him with free will, and tempered all his motions and appetites, so as to subject them, at all times, to the dictate of reason. He then added the invaluable gift of original righteousness, and next gave him dominion over all other animals—By referring to the sacred history of Genesis the pastor will make himself familiar with these things for the instruction of the faithful.

Of Man.

What we have said, then, of the creation of the universe, is to be understood as conveyed by the words "heaven and earth," and is thus briefly set forth by the prophet: "Thine are the heavens, and thine is the earth: the world and the fulness thereof thou hast founded:" (68) and still more briefly by the Fathers of the Council of Nice, who added in their Creed these words, "of all things visible and invisible." Whatever exists in the universe, and was created by God, either falls under the senses, and is

God the Creator of all.

(66) 2 Pet. ii. 4.

(67) Ps. ciii. 8, 9.

(68) Ps. lxxxviii. 12.

included in the word "visible," or is an object of perception to the mind, and is expressed by the word "invisible."

The preserver and governor.

We are not, however, to understand that the works of God, when once created could continue to exist unsupported by his omnipotence: as they derive existence from his supreme power, wisdom and goodness, so, unless preserved continually by his superintending providence, and by the same power which produced them, they should instantly return into their original nothing. This the Scriptures declare, when they say, "How could any thing endure, if thou wouldst not? or be preserved, if not called by thee?" (69) But not only does God protect and govern all things by his providence; but also by an internal virtue impels to motion and action whatever moves and acts, and this in such a manner, as that although he excludes not, he yet prevents the agency of secondary causes. His invisible influence extends to all things, and, as the wise man says; "It reacheth from end to end, mighty, and ordereth all things sweetly." (70) This is the reason why the Apostle, announcing to the Athenians the God whom not knowing they adored, said; "He is not far from every one of us: for in him we live and move and have our being." (71)

Creation, the work of the three Persons.

Let thus much suffice for the explanation of the first article of the Creed: it may not, however, be unnecessary to add that the creation is the common work of the three Persons of the Holy and undivided Trinity—of the Father, whom, according to the doctrine of the Apostles, we here declare to be "Creator of heaven and earth;—of the Son, of whom the Scripture says, "all things were made by him;" (72) and of the Holy Ghost, of whom it is written, "The Spirit of God moved over the waters; (73) and again, "By the word of the Lord the heavens were established; and all the power of them by the Spirit of his mouth." (74)

(69) Wisdom, xi. 26. (70) Wisdom, viii. 1. (71) Acts, xvii. 27, 28.

(72) John, i. 5.

(73) Gen. i. 2.

(74) Ps. xxxii. 6.

ARTICLE II.

---

“AND IN JESUS CHRIST, HIS ONLY SON, OUR LORD.”

---

THAT wonderful and superabundant are the blessings which flow to the human race, from the belief and profession of this article we learn from these words of St. John; “Whosoever shall confess that Jesus is the Son of God, God abideth in him and he in God:” (1) and also from the words of Christ our Lord, proclaiming the Prince of the Apostles blessed for the confession of this truth; “Blessed art thou, Simon Bar-Jona: for flesh and blood have not revealed it to thee, but my Father who is in heaven.” (2) This sublime truth is the most firm basis of our salvation and redemption.

The great blessings which flow from the belief and profession of this article.

But as the fruit of these admirable blessings is best known by considering the ruin brought on man, by his fall from that most happy state in which God had placed our first parents, let the pastor be particularly careful to make known to the faithful, the cause of this common misery and universal calamity. When Adam had departed from the obedience due to God, and had violated the prohibition, “of every tree of Paradise thou shalt eat; but of the tree of knowledge of good and evil, thou shalt not eat, for in what day soever thou shalt eat it, thou shalt die the

How we may learn to estimate their value.

(1) 1 John, iv. 15.

(2) Math. xvi. 17.

“death;” (3) he fell into the extreme misery of losing the sanctity and righteousness in which he was created; and of becoming subject to all those other evils, which are detailed more at large by the holy Council of Trent. (4) The pastor, therefore, will not omit to remind the faithful that the guilt and punishment of original sin were not confined to Adam, but justly descended from him, as from their source and cause, to all posterity. The human race, having fallen from their elevated dignity, no power of men or angels could raise them from their fallen condition, and replace them in their primitive state. To remedy the evil, and repair the loss, it became necessary that the Son of God, whose merits are infinite, clothed in the weakness of our flesh, should remove the infinite weight of sin, and reconcile us to God in his blood.

Belief and profession of this article necessary to salvation.

The promise of a Saviour.

The belief and profession of this our redemption, as God declared from the beginning, are now, and always have been, necessary to salvation. In the sentence of condemnation, pronounced against the human race immediately after the sin of Adam, the hope of redemption was held out in these words, which denounced to the devil, the loss which he was to sustain by man’s redemption: “I will put enmities between thee and the woman, and thy seed and her seed: she shall crush thy head, and thou shalt lie in wait for her heel.” (5) The same promise he again often confirmed, and more distinctly signified his counsels to those chiefly whom he desired to make special objects of his predilection: amongst others to the patriarch Abraham, to whom he often declared this mystery, but then more explicitly when, in obedience to God’s command, he was prepared to sacrifice his son Isaac: “Because,” says he, “thou hast done this thing, and hast not spared thy only begotten son for my sake; I will bless thee and I will multiply thy seed, as the stars of heaven, and as the sand that is by the sea shore. Thy seed shall possess the gates of their enemies, and in thy seed shall all

(3) Gen. ii. 16, 17. (4) Sess. 5. Can. 1. & 2.—Sess. 6. Can. 1. & 2.

(5) Gen. iii. 15.

“the nations of the earth be blessed; because thou hast obeyed my voice.” (6) From these words it was easy to infer that he, who was to deliver mankind from the ruthless tyranny of Satan, was to be descended from Abraham; and that, whilst he was the Son of God, he was to be born of the seed of Abraham according to the flesh. Not long after, to preserve the memory of this promise, he renewed the same covenant with Jacob, the grandson of Abraham. When in a vision Jacob saw a ladder standing on the earth, and its top reaching to heaven, and the angels of God ascending and descending by it, (7) he also heard the Lord saying to him, as the Scripture testifies; “I am the Lord God of Abraham thy Father, and the God of Isaac; the land, wherein thou sleepest, I will give to thee and to thy seed; and thy seed shall be as the dust of the earth: thou shalt spread abroad to the west and to the east, and to the north and to the south; and in thee and thy seed all the nations of the earth shall be blessed.” (8) Nor did God cease afterwards to excite in the posterity of Abraham, and in many others, the hope of a Saviour, by renewing the recollection of the same promise; for, after the establishment of the Jewish republic and religion, it became better known to his people. Many types signified, and prophets foretold the numerous and invaluable blessings which our Redeemer, Christ Jesus, was to bring to mankind. And, indeed, the prophets, whose minds were illumined with light from above, foretold the birth of the Son of God, the wondrous works which he wrought whilst on earth, his doctrine, manners, kindred, death, resurrection, and the other mysterious circumstances regarding him; (9) and all these as graphically as if they were passing before their eyes. With the exception of the time only, we can discover no difference between the predictions of the prophets, and the preaching of the apostles, between the faith of the ancient patriarchs, Same promise renewed.

(6) Gen. xxii. 16, 17, 18. (7) Gen. xxviii. 12. (8) Gen. xxviii. 13, 14.

(9) Is. vii. 14. viii. 3. ix. 5. xi. 1-53 per totum.—Jer. xxiii. 5. xxx. 9.

Dan. vii. 13. ix. 24.

and that of Christians—But, we are now to speak of the several parts of this Article.

Meaning of the name Jesus, by whom and why given.

“JESUS”] This is the proper name of the man-God, and signifies Saviour; a name given him not accidentally, or by the judgment or will of man, but by the counsel and command of God. For the angel announced to Mary his mother: “Behold thou shalt conceive in thy womb and shalt bring forth a Son, and thou shalt call his name Jesus. (10) He afterwards not only commanded Joseph, who was espoused to the Virgin, to call the child by that name, but also declared the reason why he should be so called: “Joseph,” says he, “Son of David, fear not to take Mary thy wife, for that which is born in her is of the Holy Ghost; and she shall bring forth a Son, and thou shalt call his name Jesus, for he shall save his people from their sins.” (11) In the Sacred Scriptures we meet with many who were called by this name—the son of Nave, for instance, who succeeded Moses, and, by special privilege denied to Moses, conducted into the land of promise the people whom Moses had delivered from Egypt; (12) and Josedech, whose father was a priest. (13) But how much more appropriately shall we not deem this name given to him, who gave light and liberty and salvation, not to one people only, but to all men, of all ages—to men oppressed, not by famine, or Egyptian, or Babylonian bondage, but sitting in the shadow of death and fettered by sin, and rivetted in the galling chains of the devil—to him who purchased for them a right to the inheritance of heaven, and reconciled them to God the Father. In those men, who were designated by the same name, we recognize so many types of Christ our Lord, by whom these blessings were accumulated on the human race. All other names, which were predicted to be given by divine appointment to the Son of God, are to be referred to this one name Jesus, (14) for whilst they partially glanced a

(10) Luke, i. 31.

(11) Math. i. 20. 21.

(12) Eccl. xlvi. 1.

(13) Agg. i. 1.

(14) Is. vii. 14. viii. 8. ix. 6.—Jer. xxiii. 6.

the salvation which he was to purchase for us, this fully embraced the universal salvation of the human race.

“CHRIST”] To the name “Jesus” is also added that of “Christ,” which signifies “the anointed;” a name expressive of honor and office, and not peculiar to one thing only, but common to many; for, in the old law priests and kings, whom God, on account of the dignity of their office, commanded to be anointed, were called Christs: (15) —Priests, because they commend the people to God by unceasing prayer, offer sacrifice to him and deprecate his wrath.—Kings, because they are intrusted with the government of the people, and to them principally belong the authority of the law, the protection of innocence, and the punishment of guilt. As, therefore, both seem to represent the majesty of God on earth, those who were appointed to the royal or sacerdotal office, were anointed with oil. (16) Prophets also were usually anointed, who, as the interpreters and ambassadors of the immortal God, unfolded to us the secrets of heaven, and by salutary precepts, and the prediction of future events, exhorted to amendment of life. When Jesus Christ our Saviour came into the world, he assumed these three characters of Prophet, Priest, and King, and is, therefore, called “Christ,” having been anointed for the discharge of these functions, not by mortal hand, or with earthly ointment, but by the power of his heavenly Father, and with a spiritual oil; for the plenitude of the Holy Spirit, and a more copious effusion of all gifts, than any created being is capable of receiving, were poured into his soul. This the prophet clearly indicates, when he addresses the Redeemer in these words, “Thou hast loved justice, and hatest iniquity; therefore God, thy God, hath anointed thee with the oil of gladness before thy fellows.” (17) The same is also more explicitly declared by the prophet Isaiah: “The Spirit of the Lord,” says he, “is upon me, because the Lord hath anointed me; he hath sent me to preach to

The name Christ, why added to that of Jesus.

(15) 1 Kings, xii. 3. xvi. 6. xxiv. 7.

(16) Lev. viii. 30.—3 Kings, xix. 15, 16. (17) Ps. xlv. 8.

“the meek.” (18) Jesus Christ, therefore, was the great prophet and teacher, (19) from whom we have learned the will of God, and by whom the world has been taught the knowledge of the Father; and the name of Prophet belongs to him pre-eminently, because all others who were dignified with that name were his disciples, sent principally to announce the coming of that Prophet who was to save all men. Christ was also a Priest, not, indeed of the tribe of Levi, as were the priests of the old law, but of that of which the prophet David sang: “Thou art a Priest for ever according to the order of Melchisedech.” (20) This subject the Apostle fully and accurately develops in his epistle to the Hebrews. (21) Christ not only as God, but as man, we also acknowledge to be a King: of him the angel testifies; “He shall reign in the house of Jacob for ever, and of his kingdom there shall be no end.” (22) This kingdom of Christ is spiritual and eternal, begun on earth but perfected in heaven: and, indeed, he discharges by his admirable providence the duties of King towards his Church, governing and protecting her against the open violence and covert designs of her enemies, imparting to her not only holiness and righteousness, but also power and strength to persevere. But, although the good and the bad are contained within the limits of this kingdom, and thus all by right belong to it; yet those, who, in conformity with his commands, lead unsullied and innocent lives, experience, beyond all others, the sovereign goodness and beneficence of our King. Although descended from the most illustrious race of kings, he obtained not this kingdom by hereditary or other human right, but because God bestowed on him as man all the power, dignity and majesty of which human nature is susceptible. To him, therefore, God delivered the government of the whole world, and to this his sovereignty, which has already commenced, all things shall be made fully and entirely subject on the day of judgment. (23).

(18) Is. lxi. 1. (19) Deut. xviii. 15. (20) Ps. cix. 4.—Heb. v. 5.
 (21) Heb. v. & vii. (22) Luke, i. 33. (23) 1 Cor. 15. 25, 26, 27.

“HIS ONLY SON”] In these words, mysteries more exalted with regard to Jesus are proposed to the faithful, as objects of their belief and contemplation—that he is the Son of God, and true God, as is the Father who begot him from eternity. We also confess that he is the second person of the Blessed Trinity, equal in all things to the Father and the Holy Ghost; for, in the divine Persons nothing unequal or unlike should exist, or even be imagined to exist; whereas we acknowledge the essence, will and power of all to be one; a truth clearly revealed in many of the oracles of inspiration, and sublimely announced in this testimony of St. John: “In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was God, and the Word was with God.” (24)

Christ the Son of God, and true God.

But, when we are told that Jesus is the Son of God, we are not to understand any thing earthly or mortal of his birth; but are firmly to believe, and piously to adore that birth by which, from all eternity, the Father begot the Son; a mystery which reason cannot fully conceive or comprehend, and at the contemplation of which, overwhelmed, as it were, with admiration, we should exclaim with the prophet: “Who will declare his generation?” (25) On this point, then, we are to believe, that the Son is of the same nature, of the same power and wisdom with the Father; as we more fully profess in these words of the Nicene Creed: “And in Jesus Christ, his only begotten Son, born of the Father before all ages, God of God, true God of true God, begotten, not made, consubstantial to the Father, by whom all things were made.” Amongst the different comparisons employed to elucidate the mode and manner of this eternal generation, that which is borrowed from thought seems to come nearest to its illustration; and hence St. John calls the Son “the word:” (26) for as the mind, in some sort looking into and understanding itself, forms an image of itself, which Theologians express by the term “word;” so God, as far, however, as we may compare

His eternal generation incomprehensible.

(24) John, i. 1.

(25) Is. liii. 8.

(26) John, i. 1.

human things to divine, understanding himself, begets the eternal Word. Better, however, to contemplate what faith proposes, and, in the sincerity of our souls, believe and confess that Jesus Christ is true God and true man—as God, begotten of the Father before all ages—as man, born in time of Mary, his virgin mother. Whilst we thus acknowledge his twofold nativity, we believe him to be one Son, because his divine and human natures meet in one person. As to his divine generation he has no brethren or coheirs, being the only begotten Son of the Father, whilst we mortals are the work of his hands: but, if we consider his birth as man, he not only calls many by the name of brethren, but regards them as brethren—they are those who, by faith, have received Christ the Lord, and who really, and by works of charity, approve the faith which they internally profess; and hence it is that he is called by the Apostle: “the first born amongst many brethren.” (27)

Why called by different names.

“OUR LORD”] Of our Saviour many things are recorded in Scripture, some of which clearly apply to him as God, and some as man; because from his different natures he received the different properties which belong to each. Hence, we say with truth, that Christ is Almighty, Eternal, Infinite, and these attributes he has from his divine nature: again, we say of him that he suffered, died, and rose again, which manifestly are properties compatible only with his human nature.

Why called
“our Lord”

Besides these, there are others common to both natures; as when in this article of the Creed, we say: “our Lord;” a name strictly applicable to both. As he is eternal as well as the Father, so is he Lord of all things equally with the Father; and, as he and the Father are not, the one, one God, and the other, another God; but one and the same God: so likewise he and the Father are not, the one, one Lord, and the other, another Lord. As man, he is also, for many reasons, appropriately called “our “Lord;” and first, because he is our Redeemer, who delivered us from sin. This is the doctrine of St. Paul: “He humbled himself,” says the Apostle, “becoming obedient unto death; even to the death of the cross: for which cause God hath also exalted him, and hath given him a name that is above all names, that at the name of Jesus every knee should bend, of those that are in heaven, on earth and under the earth; and that every tongue should confess that the Lord Jesus Christ is in the glory of God the Father.” (28) And of himself he says, after his resurrection: “All power is given me in heaven and on earth.” (29) He is, also, called “Lord,” because in one person both natures, the human and divine, are united; and though he had not died for us, he had yet deserved, by this admirable union, to be constituted common Lord of all created things, particularly of those who, in all the fervor of their souls, obey and serve him.

It remains, therefore, that the pastor exhort the faithful to the consideration of these his claims to the title of “our Lord;” that we, who, taking our name from him are called Christians, and who cannot be ignorant of the extent of his favors, particularly in having enabled us to understand all these things by faith, may know the strict obligation we, above all others, are under, of devoting and consecrating ourselves for ever, like faithful servants, to our Redeemer and our Lord. This we promised when, at the baptismal font, we were initiated and introduced into the Church of God; for we then declared that we renounced the devil and the world, and gave ourselves unreservedly to Jesus Christ. But if, to be enrolled as soldiers of Christ, we consecrated ourselves by so holy and solemn a profession to our Lord, what punishments should we not deserve were we, after our entrance into the Church, and after having known the will and laws of God, and received the grace of the sacraments, to form our lives upon the laws and maxims of the world and the devil; as if, when cleansed in the waters of baptism, we had pledged our fidelity to the world and to the devil, and not to Christ our Lord and Saviour? What heart so cold as not to be inflamed with love by the benevolence and beneficence exercised towards us by so great a Lord who, though holding us in his power and dominion, a slaves ransomed by his blood, yet embraces us with such ardent love as to call us not servants, but friends and brethren?" (30) This, assuredly, supplies the most just and perhaps, the strongest claim to induce us always to acknowledge, venerate and adore him as "our Lord."

Matter for exhortation supplied by this Article.

(28) Phil. ii. 8, 9, 10, 11.

(29) Matt. xxviii. 18.

(30) John, xv. 14.

ARTICLE III.

“WHO WAS CONCEIVED OF THE HOLY GHOST, BORN OF THE VIRGIN MARY.”

“WHO WAS CONCEIVED OF THE HOLY GHOST”] From Incarnation of the Son of God.

what has been said in the preceding Article, the faithful are given to understand that, in delivering us from the relentless tyranny of Satan, God has conferred a singular and invaluable blessing on the human race: but, if we place before our eyes the economy of redemption, in it the goodness and beneficence of God shine forth with incomparable splendor and magnificence. The pastor, then, will enter on the exposition of this third Article, by developing the grandeur of this mystery, which the Sacred Scriptures very frequently propose to our consideration as the principal source of our eternal salvation. Its meaning he will teach to be, that we believe and confess that the same Jesus Christ, our only Lord, the Son of God, when he assumed human flesh for us in the womb of the Virgin, was not conceived, like other men, from the seed of man, but in a manner transcending the order of nature, that is, by the power of the Holy Ghost; (1) so that the same person, remaining God as he was from eternity, became man, (2) what he was not before. That such is the meaning of these words is clear from the confession of the Holy Council of Constantinople, which says: "who for us men, and for our salvation, came down from heaven, and became incarnate by the Holy Ghost of the Virgin Mary, and WAS MADE MAN." The same truth we also find unfolded by St. John the Evangelist, who imbibed from the bosom of the Saviour himself, the knowledge of this most profound mystery. When he had thus declared the nature of the divine Word: "In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God," he concludes, "And the Word was made flesh, and dwelt amongst us." (3) Thus, "the Word," which is a person of the divine nature, assumed human nature in such a manner that the person of both natures is one and the same: and hence this admirable union preserved the actions and properties of both natures, and, as we read in St. Leo, that great pontiff, "The lowliness of the inferior was not consumed in the glory of the superior, nor did the assumption of the inferior diminish the glory of the superior." (4)

(1) Math. i. 20.

(2) John, i. 14.

The work not of one, but of the three Persons of the Trinity.

But as an explanation of the words, in which this Article is expressed, is not to be omitted, the Pastor will teach that when we say that the Son of God was conceived by the power of the Holy Ghost, we do not mean that this Person alone of the Holy Trinity accomplished the mystery of the incarnation. Although the Son alone assumed human nature, yet all the Persons of the Trinity, the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost, were authors of this mystery. It is a principle of Christian faith, that whatever God does extrinsically, is common to the three Persons and that one neither does more than, nor acts without another. But that one emanates from another cannot be common to all; for the Son is begotten of the Father only, the Holy Ghost proceeds from the Father and the Son: but whatever proceeds from them extrinsically, is the work of the three Persons without difference of any sort, and of this latter description is the incarnation of the Son of God.

(3) John, i. 1—14,

(4) Serm. i, de Nat.

Of those things, notwithstanding, that are common to all, the Sacred Scriptures often attribute some to one person, some to another: thus, to the Father they attribute power over all things; to the Son, wisdom; to the Holy Ghost love; and hence, as the mystery of the incarnation manifests the singular and boundless love of God towards us, it is, therefore, in some sort peculiarly attributed to the Holy Ghost.

Why specially attributed to the Holy Ghost

In this mystery we perceive that some things were done which transcend the order of nature, some by the power of nature: thus, in believing that the body of Christ was formed from the most pure blood of his Virgin Mother, we acknowledge the operation of human nature, this being a law common to the formation of all human bodies. But what surpasses the order of nature and human comprehension is, that, as soon as the Blessed Virgin assented to the announcement of the angel in these words, "Behold the handmaid of the Lord, be it done unto me according to thy word," (5) the most sacred body of Christ was immediately formed, and to it was united a rational soul; and thus, in the same instant of time, he was perfect God and perfect man. That this was the astonishing and admirable work of the Holy Ghost cannot be doubted; for according to the order of nature, no body, unless after a certain period of time, can be animated with a human soul.

In what natural, and in what supernatural.

Again, and it should overwhelm us with astonishment; as soon as the soul of Christ was united to his body, the Divinity became united to both; and thus at the same time his body was formed and animated, and the Divinity united to body and soul. Hence, at the same instant, he was perfect God and perfect man, and the most Holy Virgin, having at the same moment, conceived God and man, is truly and properly, called Mother of God and

The Divinity united to the humanity of Christ.

The Virgin truly mother of God and man.

(5) Luke, i. 38.

man. This, the Angel signified to her when he said: "Behold, thou shalt conceive in thy womb, and shalt bring forth a Son, and thou shalt call his name Jesus; he shall be great, and shall be called the Son of the Most High." (6) The event verified the prophecy of Isaiah: "Behold a Virgin shall conceive, and bring forth a Son." (7) Elizabeth also, when, filled with the Holy Ghost, she understood the conception of the Son of God, declared the same truth in these words: "Whence is this to me, that the Mother of my Lord should come to me?" (8) But, as the body of Christ was formed of the pure blood of the immaculate Virgin without the aid of man, as we have already said, and by the sole operation of the Holy Ghost; so also, at the moment of his conception, his soul was replenished with an overflowing fulness of the Spirit of God, and a superabundance of all graces; for God gave not to him, as to others adorned with grace and holiness, his Spirit by measure, as St. John testifies; (9) but poured into his soul the plenitude of all graces so abundantly, that "of his fulness we have all received." (10)

The soul of Christ replenished from his conception, with all grace.

Christ the Son of God by nature, not by adoption.

Although possessing that Spirit by which holy men attained the adoption of sons of God, he cannot, however, be called the adopted Son of God; for being the Son of God by nature, the grace, or name of adoption can, on no account, be deemed applicable to him.

How we are to reap fruit unto salvation from the belief of this Article.

These heads comprise the substance of what appeared to us to demand explanation regarding the admirable mystery of the conception. To reap from them abundant fruit to salvation, the faithful should, particularly recall to their recollection, and frequently reflect, that it is God who assumed human flesh; but that the manner of its assumption transcends the limits of our comprehension, not to say, of our powers of expression: finally, that he vouchsafed to become man, in order that we mortals may be regenerated children of God. When to these subjects,

(6) Luke, i. 31, 32. (7) Isaiah, vii. 14. (8) Luke, i. 45.

(9) John, iii. 34. (10) John, i. 16.

they shall have given mature consideration, let them, in the humility of faith, believe and adore all the mysteries contained in this Article, nor indulge a curious inquisitiveness by investigating and scrutinizing them—an attempt scarcely ever unattended with danger.

“BORN OF THE VIRGIN MARY”] These words comprise another part of this Article of the Creed, in the exposition of which the pastor should exercise considerable diligence; because the faithful are bound to believe, that Christ our Lord was not only conceived by the power of the Holy Ghost, but was also “born of the Virgin Mary.” The words of the Angel, who first announced the happy tidings to the world, declare with what transports of joy, and emotions of delight, the belief of this mystery should be meditated by us: “Behold,” says he, “I bring you good tidings of great joy, that shall be to all the people.” (11) The song chanted by the heavenly host clearly conveys the same sentiments: “Glory,” say they, “to God in the highest: and on earth, peace to men of good will.” (12) Hence, also, began the fulfilment of the splendid promise made by Almighty God to Abraham, that in his seed all the nations of the earth should be blessed; (13) for Mary, whom we truly proclaim and venerate as Mother of God, because she brought forth him who is, at once, God and man, was descended from King David. (14) But as the conception itself transcends the order of nature, so also, the birth of the man-God presents to our contemplation nothing but what is divine.

Christ born of a Virgin.

Besides, a circumstance wonderful beyond expression or conception, he is born of his Mother without any diminution of her maternal virginity; and as he afterwards went forth from the sepulchre whilst it was closed and sealed, and entered the room in which his disciples were assembled, “the doors being shut;” (15) or, not to depart from natural events which we witness every day, as

Manner of his birth.

(11) Luke, ii. 10. (12) Luke, ii. 14. (13) Gen. xxii. 18.

(14) Math. i. 1, 6. (15) John, xx. 19.

the rays of the sun penetrate, without breaking or injuring, in the least, the substance of glass ; after a like, but more incomprehensible manner, did Jesus Christ come forth from his mother's womb without injury to her maternal virginity, which, immaculate and perpetual forms the just theme of our eulogy. This was the work of the Holy Ghost, who, at the conception and birth of the Son, so favoured the Virgin Mother as to impart to her fecundity, and yet preserve inviolate her perpetual virginity.

Christ compared to Adam, Mary to Eve.

The Apostle, sometimes, calls Jesus Christ the second Adam, and institutes a comparison between him and the first : for " as in the first all men die, so in the second all " are made alive ;" (16) and as in the natural order, Adam was the father of the human race ; so, in the supernatural order, Christ is the author of grace and of glory. The Virgin Mother we may also compare to Eve, making the second Eve, that is Mary, correspond with the first ; as we have already shown that the second Adam, that is, Christ, corresponds with the first Adam. By believing the serpent, Eve entailed malediction and death on mankind ; (17) and Mary, by believing the Angel, became the instrument of the divine goodness in bringing life and benediction to the human race. (18) From Eve we are born children of wrath ; from Mary we have received Jesus Christ, and through him are regenerated children of grace. To Eve it was said : " In sorrow shalt thou " bring forth children : " (19) Mary was exempt from this law, for preserving her virginal integrity inviolate, she brought forth Jesus the Son of God, without experiencing, as we have already said, any sense of pain.

Types and figures of his conception and nativity.

The mysteries of this admirable conception and nativity being, therefore, so great and so numerous, it accorded with the views of Divine Providence to signify them by many types and prophesies. Hence the Holy Fathers understood many things which we meet in the Sacred Scriptures to relate to them; particularly that gate of the sanctuary which Ezechiel saw closed; (20) the stone cut out of the mountain without hands, which became a great mountain and filled the universe; (21) the rod of Aaron, which alone budded of all the rods of the princes of Israel; (22) and the bush which Moses saw burn without being consumed. (23) The holy Evangelist describes in detail the history of the birth of Christ, (24) and, as the Pastor can easily recur to the Sacred Volume, it is unnecessary for us to say more on the subject.

(16) 1 Cor. xv. 21, 22. (17) Eccl. xxv. 33. (18) Eph. i. 3.

(19) Gen. iii. 16.

But he should labour to impress deeply on the minds and hearts of the faithful these mysteries, "which were written ten for our instruction:" (25) first, that by the commemoration of so great a benefit they may make some return of gratitude to God, its author; and next, in order to place before their eyes, as a model for imitation, this striking and singular example of humility. What can be more useful, what better calculated to subdue the pride and haughtiness of the human heart, than to reflect, frequently, that God humbles himself in such a manner as to assume our frailty and weakness, in order to communicate to us his grace and glory—that God becomes man, and that he "at whose nod," to use the words of Scripture, "the pillars of heaven fear and tremble," (26) bows his supreme and infinite majesty to minister to man—that he whom the angels adore in heaven is born on earth!! When such is the goodness of God towards us, what, I ask, what should we not do to testify our obedience to his will? With what promptitude and alacrity should we not love, embrace and perform all the duties of Christian humility? The faithful should also know the salutary lessons which Christ teaches at his birth, before he opens his divine lips;—he is born in poverty,—he is born a stranger under a roof not his own,—he is born in a lonely crib—

The lessons which this mystery conveys.

(20) Ezech. xlv. 2.

(21) Dan. ii. 35.

(22) Num. xvii. 8.

(23) Exod. iii. 2.

(24) Luke, ii.

(25) Rom. xv. 4.

(26) Job, xxvi. 11.

he is born in the depth of winter! These circumstances, which attend the birth of the man-God, are thus recorded by St. Luke: "And it come to pass, that, when they were there, her days were accomplished that she should be delivered, and she brought forth her first-born son and wrapped him up in swaddling clothes, and laid him in a manger, because there was no room for them in the inn."

(27) Could the Evangelist comprehend under more humble terms the majesty and glory that filled the heavens and the earth? He does not say, there was no room in the inn, but "there was no room for him who says: mine is the earth and the fulness thereof;" (28) and this destitution of the man-God another Evangelist records in these words, "He came unto his own, and his own received him not." (29)

The dignity which it confers on man.

When the faithful have placed these things before their eyes, let them also reflect, that God condescended to assume the lowliness and frailty of our flesh in order to exalt man to the highest degree of dignity; for this single reflection alone supplies sufficient proof of the exalted dignity of man conferred on him by the divine bounty—that he who is true and perfect God vouchsafed to become man; so that we may now glory that the Son of God is bone of our bone and flesh of our flesh, a privilege not given to angels, "for no where," says the Apostle, "doth he take hold of the angels; but of the seed of Abraham he taketh hold." (30)

The influence which it should have on his life.

We must also take care, that these singular blessings rise not in judgment against us; that, as at Bethlehem, the place of his nativity, he was denied a dwelling; so also, now that he is no longer born in human flesh, he be not denied a dwelling in our hearts, in which he may be spiritually born: for, through an earnest desire for our salvation, this is the object of his most anxious solicitude. As then, by the power of the Holy Ghost, and in a manner superior to the order of nature, he was made man and was born, was holy and even holiness itself; so does it become our duty "to be born, not of blood nor of the will of flesh, but of God;" (31)

(27) Luke, ii. 6, 7.

(28) Ps. xlix. 12.

(29) John, i. 11.

(30) Heb. ii. 16.

(31) John, i. 13.

to walk, as new creatures in newness of spirit; (32) and to preserve that holiness and purity of soul that become men regenerated by the Spirit of God. (33) Thus shall we reflect some faint image of the holy conception and nativity of the Son of God, which are the objects of our firm faith, and believing which we revere and adore "in a mystery, "wisdom of God which was hidden." (34)

(32) Rom. vi. 4, 5, and 7, 6. (33) 2 Cor. iii. 18. (34) 1 Cor. ii. 7.

How necessary the knowledge of this Article, and how necessary the pastor should be in stirring up in the minds of the faithful the frequent recollection of our Lord's passion, we learn from the Apostle when he says, that he knows nothing but Christ, and him crucified. (1) In illustrating this subject therefore, the greatest care and pains should be taken by the pastor, that the faithful, excited by the remembrance of so great a benefit, may be entirely devoted to the contemplation of the passion and love of God towards us.

The first part of this Article (of the second we shall treat hereafter) proposes to our belief, that when Pontius Pilate governed the province of Judaea, under the Roman Emperor, Christ the Lord was nailed to a cross. Having been seized as a malefactor, mocked, outraged, and tortured, in various forms, he was finally crucified. Nor can it be matter of doubt that his soul, as to its nature, part was not insensible to these torments; for as he really assumed human nature, it is a necessary conse-

ARTICLE IV.

---

“SUFFERED UNDER PONTIUS PILATE, WAS CRUCIFIED, DEAD, AND BURIED.”

---

Necessity of the knowledge and frequent exposition of this article.

“SUFFERED UNDER PONTIUS PILATE, WAS CRUCIFIED”] How necessary the knowledge of this Article, and how assiduous the pastor should be in stirring up, in the minds of the faithful, the frequent recollection of our Lord’s passion, we learn from the Apostle when he says, that he knows nothing but Christ, and him crucified. (1) In illustrating this subject, therefore, the greatest care and pains should be taken by the pastor, that the faithful, excited by the remembrance of so great a benefit, may be entirely devoted to the contemplation of the goodness and love of God towards us.

What this part of the article proposes to our belief.

The first part of this Article (of the second we shall treat hereafter,) proposes to our belief, that when Pontius Pilate governed the province of Judea, under Tiberius Cæsar, Christ the Lord was nailed to a cross. Having been seized as a malefactor, mocked, outraged, and tortured, in various forms, he was finally crucified. Nor can it be matter of doubt that his soul, as to its inferior part, was not insensible to these torments; for as he really assumed human nature, it is a necessary consequence that he really, and in his soul, experienced a most acute sense of pain. Hence these words of the Saviour: "My soul is sorrowful, even unto death." (2) Although human nature was united to the divine person, he felt the bitterness of his passion as acutely as if no such union had existed; because in the one person of Jesus Christ were preserved the properties of both natures, human and divine; and, therefore, what was passible and mortal remained passible and mortal; and again, what was impassible and immortal, that is his divine nature, continued impassible and immortal.

(1) 1 Cor. ii. 2.

But, if we find it here recorded with such historical minuteness, that Jesus Christ suffered when Pilate was procurator of Judea, (3) the pastor will explain the reason—it is, that by fixing the time, as the Apostle does, in the sixth chapter of his first Epistle to Timothy, so important and so necessary an event may be ascertained by all with greater certainty; and to show that the event verified the prediction of the Saviour; "They shall deliver him to the Gentiles, to be mocked, and scourged, and crucified." (4)

Why the time of the passion is specially recorded.

That he suffered the particular death of the cross is also to be traced to the economy of the divine councils, "that whence death came, thence life might arise." The serpent, which overcame our first parents by the fruit of the tree, was himself overcome by Christ on the wood of the cross. Many reasons, which the Holy Fathers have evolved in detail, may be adduced to show the congruity of the Saviour's having suffered the death of the cross, rather than any other; but enough that the faithful be informed by the pastor, that that species of death, because confessedly the most ignominious and humiliating, was chosen by the Saviour, as most consonant, and best suited to the plan of redemption; for not only amongst the Gentiles was the death of the cross deemed execrable and

Why Christ died on a cross.

(2) Mat. xxvi. 38. Mark, xiv. 34.

(3) 1 Tim. vi. 13.

(4) Mat. xx. 19.

loaded with disgrace and infamy, but also amongst the Jews; for in the law of Moses, the man is pronounced “accursed, who hangeth on a tree.” (5)

Historical part of this article not to be omitted.

But the historical part of this Article, which has been narrated by the Holy Evangelists with the most minute exactness, is not to be omitted by the pastor; in order that the faithful may be familiarly acquainted with, at least, the principal heads of this mystery, which are of more immediate necessity to confirm the truth of our faith. For on this Article, as on a sort of foundation, rest the religion and faith of Christians, and on this foundation, when once laid, the superstructure rises with perfect security. If any other truth of Christianity presents difficulties to the mind of man, the mystery of the cross must, assuredly, be considered to present still greater difficulties. We can scarcely be brought to think that our salvation depends on the cross, and on him, who for us, was fastened to its wood. But in this, as the Apostle says, we may admire the supreme wisdom of divine Providence; “for seeing that in the wisdom of God, the world by wisdom knew not God: it pleaseth God by the foolishness of our preaching, to save them that believe.” (6) We are not, therefore, to be surprised, that the Prophets, before the coming of Christ, and the Apostles after his death and resurrection, laboured so industriously to convince mankind that he was the Redeemer of the world, and to bring them under the power and obedience of him who was crucified.

Figures and prophecies of the passion and death of the Saviour.

Knowing, therefore, that nothing is so far above the reach of human reason as the mystery of the cross, Almighty God, immediately from the fall of Adam, ceased not, both by figures and by the oracles of the Prophets, to signify the death by which his Son was to die. Not to dwell on these figures, Abel who fell a victim to the envy of his brother, (7) Isaac who was commanded to be offered in sacrifice, (8) the lamb immolated by the Jews on their departure from Egypt, (9) and also the brazen serpent lifted up by Moses in the desert, (10) were all figures of the passion and death of Christ the Lord. That this event was foretold by many Prophets, is a fact too well known to require development here. Not to speak of David, whose Psalms embrace the principal mysteries of redemption, (11) the oracles of Isaias are so clear and graphic, (12) that he may be said rather to have recorded a past, than predicted a future event. (13)

(5) Deut. xxi. 23. Gal. iii. 15.

(6) 1 Cor. i. 21.

(7) Gen. iv. 8.

“DEAD AND BURIED”] When explaining these words, Christ really died. the pastor will propose to the belief of the faithful, that Jesus Christ, after his crucifixion, was really dead and buried. It is not without just reason that this is proposed as a separate and distinct object of belief: there were some who denied his death upon the cross. The Apostles, therefore, were justly of opinion, that to such an error should be opposed the doctrine of faith contained in this Article of the Creed, the truth of which is placed beyond the possibility of doubt, by the concurring testimony of all the Evangelists, who record that Jesus “yielded up the ghost.” (14) Moreover, as Christ was true and perfect man, he, of course, was, also, capable of dying, and death takes place by a separation of the soul from the body. When, therefore, we say that Jesus died, we mean that his soul was disunited from his body; not that his divinity was so separated. On the contrary, we His divinity united to his soul and body whilst separated by death. firmly believe and profess that, when his soul was dissociated from his body, his divinity continued always united both to his body in the sepulchre, and to his soul in Limbo. It became the Son of God to die, “that through death he might destroy him who had the empire of death, that is to say, the devil; and might deliver them, who

(8) Gen. xxii. 6, 7, 8.

(9) Exod. xi. 5, 6, 7.

(10) Num. xxi. 8, 9. John, iii. 14. (11) Psalm. ii. xxi. lxvi. cix.

(12) Isai. liii.

(13) Hier. Epist. ad Paulin. ante finem.

(14) Mat. xxvii. 50. Mark, xv. 37. Luke xxiii. 46. John, xix. 30.

“through fear of death, were all their life-time subjected to servitude.” (15)

His death
voluntary,

It was the peculiar privilege of the Redeemer to have died when he himself decreed to die, and to have died, not so much by external violence, as by internal assent: not only his death but also its time and place were ordained by him, as we learn from these words of Isaias: “He was offered, because it was his own will.” (16) The Redeemer, before his passion, declared the same of himself: “I lay down my life,” says he, “that I may take it again. No man taketh it away from me; but I lay it down of myself, and I have power to lay it down; and I have power to take it again.” (17) As to time and place, when Herod insidiously sought the life of the Saviour, he said: “Go, and tell that fox: behold I cast out devils, and perform cures this day and to-morrow, and the third day I am consummated.” But yet I must walk this day, and to-morrow, and the day following, because it cannot be that a prophet perish out of Jerusalem.” (18) He, therefore, offered himself not involuntarily or by external coercion; but of his own free will. Going to meet his enemies, he said: “I am he;” (19) and all the punishments which injustice and cruelty inflicted on him he endured voluntarily.

and, therefore, the stronger claim to our gratitude and love.

When we meditate on the sufferings and torments of the Redeemer, nothing is better calculated to excite in our souls, sentiments of lively gratitude and love, than to reflect that he endured them voluntarily. Were any one to endure, by compulsion, every species of suffering for our sake, we should deem his claims to our gratitude very doubtful; but were he to endure death freely, and for our sake only, having had it in his power to avoid it, this indeed is a favor so overwhelming, as to deprive even the most grateful heart, not only of the power of returning due thanks, but even of adequately feeling the extent of the obligation. We may hence form an idea of the (15) Heb. ii. 10, 14, 15.

(16) Isaias, liii. 7.

(17) John, x. 17, 18.

(18) Luke, xiii. 32, 33.

(19) John, xviii. 5.

transcendant and intense love of Jesus Christ towards us, and of his divine and boundless claims to our gratitude.

But if, when we confess that he was buried, we make this, as it were, a distinct part of the Article, it is not because it presents any difficulty which is not implied in what we have said of his death; for believing, as we do, that Christ died, we can also easily believe that he was buried. The word "buried" was added in the creed, first, that his death may be rendered more certain, for the strongest proof of a person's death is the interment of his body; and, secondly, to render the miracle of his resurrection more authentic and illustrious. It is not, however, our belief, that the body of Christ was alone interred: these words propose, as the principal object of our belief, that God was buried, as, according to the rule of Catholic faith, we also say with the strictest truth, that God was born of a virgin, that God died; for, as the divinity was never separated from his body which was laid in the sepulchre, we truly confess that God was buried.

Why the word "buried" is mentioned in this article.

As to the place and manner of his burial, what the Evangelists record on these subjects will be found sufficient for all the purposes of the pastor's instructions. (20) There are, however, two things which demand particular attention; the one, that the body of Christ was, in no degree, corrupted in the sepulchre, according to the prediction of the Prophet: "Thou wilt not give thy Holy One to see corruption;" (21) the other, and it regards the several parts of this Article, that burial, passion, and also death, apply to Jesus Christ, not as God, but as man: to suffer and die are incidental to human nature only, although they are also attributed to God, because predicated with propriety of that person who is, at once, perfect God and perfect man.

The body of Christ incorrupt in the sepulchre.

Burial, passion, and death, refer to Christ as man, not as God.

When the faithful have once attained the knowledge of these things, the pastor will next proceed to explain those Dignity of him who suffers.

(20) Mat. xxvii. 60. Mark, xv. 46. Luke, xxiii. 53. John, xix. 38.

(21) Psalm. xv. 10. Acts, ii. 31.

particulars of the passion and death of Christ, which may enable them, if not to comprehend, at least to contemplate the infinitude of so stupendous a mystery. And first, we are to consider who it is who suffers.—To declare, or even to conceive in thought, his dignity, is not given to man.—Of him, St. John says, that he is “the Word which was with God:” (22) and the Apostle describes him in these sublime terms: “this is he, whom God hath appointed heir of all things, by whom also he made the world; who being the brightness of his glory, and the figure of his substance, and upholding all things by the word of his power, making purgation of sins, sitteth on the right hand of the majesty on high.” (23) In a word, Jesus Christ, the man-God suffers! The Creator suffers for the creature—The Master for the servant—He suffers, by whom the elements of the heavens, men and angels were created, “of whom and by whom, and in whom, are all things.” (24)

Reflection. It cannot, therefore, be matter of surprise that, whilst he agonized under such an accumulation of torments, the whole frame of the universe was convulsed, and, as the Scriptures inform us, “the earth trembled, and the rocks were rent, and the sun was darkened, and there was darkness all over the earth.” (25) If, then, even mute and inanimate nature sympathised with the sufferings of her dying Lord, let the faithful conceive, if they can, with what torrents of tears they, “the living stones of the edifice,” (26) should evince their sorrow.

Reasons why he suffered: first reason, his love of us;

The reasons why the Saviour suffered are also to be explained, that thus the greatness and intensity of the divine love towards us may the more fully appear. Should it then be asked why the Son of God underwent the torments of his most bitter passion, we shall find the principal causes in the hereditary contagion of primeval guilt; in the vices and crimes which have been perpetrated from the beginning of the world to the present day

(22) John, i. 1, 2.

(23) Heb. i. 2, 3.

(24) Rom. xi. 36.

(25) Mat. xxvii. 51. Luke, xxiii. 44, 45.

(26) I Peter, ii. 5.

and in those which shall be perpetrated to the consummation of time. In his death and passion the Son of God contemplated the atonement of all the sins of all ages, with a view to efface them for ever, by offering for them to his Eternal Father, a superabundant satisfaction; and thus the principal cause of his passion will be found in his love of us.

Besides, to increase the dignity of this mystery, Christ not only suffered for sinners; but the very authors and ministers of all the torments he endured were sinners. Of this the Apostle reminds us in these words addressed to the Hebrews: "Think, diligently, on him who endured such opposition from sinners against himself; that you be not wearied, fainting in your minds." (27). In this guilt are involved all those who fall frequently into sin; for, as our sins consigned Christ our Lord to the death of the cross, most certainly, those who wallow in sin and iniquity, as far as depends on them, "crucify to themselves again the Son of God, and make a mockery of him." (28) This our guilt takes a deeper die of enormity when contrasted with that of the Jews: according to the testimony of the Apostle, "if they had known it, they never would have crucified the Lord of Glory:" (29) whilst we, on the contrary, professing to know him, yet denying him by our actions, seem, in some sort, to lay violent hands on him. (30)

Second reason, to atone for original and actual sin.

But that Christ the Lord was also delivered over to death by the Father and by himself, we learn from these words of Isaias: "For the wickedness of my people have I struck him;" (31) and a little before, when, filled with the Spirit of God, he sees the Lord covered with stripes and wounds, the same prophet says: "We all, like sheep, have gone astray, every one hath turned aside into his own way: and the Lord hath laid on him the iniquities of us all." (32) But of the Saviour it is written, "if he will lay down his life for sin, he shall see a long-lived seed." (33) This the Christ delivered over to death by the Father and by himself.

(27) Heb. xii. 3.

(28) Heb. vi. 6.

(29) 1 Cor. ii. 8.

(30) Tit. i. 16.

(31) Isaias, liii. 8.

(32) Isaias, liii. 6.

(33) Isaias, liii. 10.

Apostle expresses in language still stronger when, on the other hand, he wishes to show us how confidently we should trust in the boundless mercy and goodness of God: "He that spared not even his own Son," says the Apostle "but delivered him up for us all, how hath he not also "with him, given us all things?" (34)

Bitterness of his passion.

- The next subject of the pastor's instruction is the bitterness of the Redeemer's passion. If however we bear in mind that "his sweat became as drops of blood "trinkling down upon the ground;" (35) and this, as the sole anticipation of the torments and agony which he was soon after to endure, we must, at once, perceive that his sorrows admitted of no increase; for if, and this sweat of blood proclaims it, the very idea of the impending evils was so overwhelming, what are we to suppose their actual endurance to have been?
- I. That our Lord suffered the most excruciating torment of mind and body is but too well ascertained. In the first place, there was no part of his body that did not experience the most agonising torture—his hands and feet were fastened with nails to the cross—his head was pierced with thorns and smitten with a reed—his face was befouled with spittle and buffeted with blows—his whole body was covered with stripes—Men of all ranks and conditions were also gathered together "against the Lord and against his "Christ." (36)—Jews and Gentiles were the advisers, the authors, the ministers of his passion—Judas betrayed him (37)—Peter denied him (38)—all the rest deserted him (39)—and, whilst he hangs from the instrument of his execution, are we not at a loss which to deplore, his agony or his ignominy—or both? Surely no death more shameful, none more cruel could have been devised than that which was the ordinary punishment of guilty and atrocious malefactors only—a death the tediousness of which aggravated the protraction of its exquisite pain and excruciating torture! His agony was increased by the very
- II.
- III.
- IV.

(34) Rom. viii. 32.

(35) Luke, xxii. 44.

(36) Psal. ii. 2.

(37) Math. xxvi. 47.

(38) Mark, xiv. 68, 70, 71.

(39) Math. xxvi. 56

constitution and frame of his body. Formed by the power of the Holy Ghost, it was more perfect and better organised than the bodies of other men can be, and was, therefore, endowed with a superior susceptibility of pain, and a keener sense of the torments which it endured: and as to his interior anguish of mind, that, too, was no doubt extreme; for those amongst the saints who had to endure torments and tortures, were not without consolation from above, which enabled them not only to bear their violence patiently, but, in many instances, to feel, in the very midst of them, elate with interior joy. "I rejoice," says the Apostle, "in my sufferings for you, and fill up those things that are wanting of the sufferings of Christ, in my flesh for his body, which is the Church;" (40) and in another place, "I am filled with comfort; I exceedingly abound with joy in all our tribulation." (41) Christ our Lord tempered with no admixture of sweetness the bitter chalice of his passion; but permitted his human nature to feel as acutely, every species of torment, as if he were only man, and not, also, God.

V.

The blessings and advantages which flow to the human race, from the passion of Christ, alone remain to be explained. In the first place, then, the passion of our Lord was our deliverance from sin; for, as St. John says: "He hath loved us and washed us from our sins in his own blood;" (42) "He hath quickened you together with him;" says the Apostle, "forgiving you all offences, blotting out the hand writing of the decree that was against us, which was contrary to us, and he hath taken away the same, fastening it to the cross." (43) He has rescued us from the tyranny of the devil, for our Lord himself says: "Now is the judgment of the world; now shall the prince of this world be cast out; and I, if I be lifted up from the earth, will draw all things to myself." (44) He discharged the punishment due to our sins; and, as no sacrifice more grateful and acceptable could

The blessings of which it is the plentiful source.

I.

II.

III.

IV.

(40) Coloss. i. 24.

(41) 2 Cor. vii. 4.

(42) Rev. i. 5.

(43) Col. ii. 13, 14.

(44) John, xii. 31, 32.

V. have been offered to God, he reconciled us to the Father, (45) appeased his wrath, and propitiated his justice. Finally, by atoning for our sins, he opened to us heaven, which was closed by the common sin of mankind, according to these words of the Apostle: "We have, therefore brethren, a confidence in the entering into the Holies " by the blood of Christ." (46)

Type and figure of the redemption.

Nor are we without a type and figure of this mystery in the old law; those who were prohibited to return into their native country, before the death of the high-priest (47) typified, that, until the supreme and eternal High-Priest, Christ Jesus, had died, and by dying opened heaven to those who, purified by the sacraments, and gifted with faith; hope and charity, become partakers of his passion; no one, however just may have been his life could gain admission into his celestial country.

Christ purchased our redemption.

The pastor will teach that all these inestimable and divine blessings flow to us from the passion of Christ first, because the satisfaction which Jesus Christ has, in an admirable manner, made to his Eternal Father for our sins, is full and complete; and the price which he paid for our ransom not only equals but far exceeds the debts contracted by us. Again, the sacrifice was most acceptable to God, for when offered by his Son on the altar of the cross, it entirely appeased his wrath and indignation. This the Apostle teaches, when he says: "Christ loved us, and delivered himself for us, an oblation and a sacrifice to God for an odour of sweetness." (46) Of the redemption which he purchased the prince of the Apostles says: "You were not redeemed with corruptible things, as gold and silver, from your vain conversations of the tradition of your fathers; but with the precious blood of Christ, as of a lamb unspotted and undefiled." (47)

In his passion he has left us an example of every virtue

Besides these inestimable blessings, we have also received another, of the highest importance. In the passion alone, we have the most illustrious example of the exercise of every virtue. Patience, and humility, and exalted charity, and meekness, and obedience, and unshaken firmness of soul not only in suffering for justice-sake, but also in meeting death, are so conspicuous in the suffering Saviour, that we may truly say, that, on the day of his passion alone, he offered, in his own person, a living exemplification of all the moral precepts, which he inculcated during the entire time of his public ministry. This exposition of the saving passion of Christ the Lord, we have given briefly—Would to God! that these mysteries were always present to our minds, and that we learned to suffer, to die, and to be buried with Christ; that, cleansed from the stains of sin, and rising with him to newness of life, we may, at length, through his grace and mercy, be found worthy to be made partakers of the glory of his celestial kingdom.

(45) 2 Cor. v. 19.

(46) Heb. i. 19.

(47) Num. xxxv. 25.

ARTICLE V.

---

“ HE DESCENDED INTO HELL, THE THIRD DAY HE AROSE AGAIN FROM THE DEAD.”

---

Knowledge of this Article most important.

“ HE DESCENDED INTO HELL”] To know the glory of the sepulture of our Lord Jesus Christ, of which we have last treated, is highly important; but of still higher importance is it to the faithful to know the splendid triumphs which he obtained, by having subdued the devil and despoiled the powers of hell. Of these triumphs, and, also, of his resurrection, we are now about to speak; and, although the latter presents to us a subject which might, with propriety, be treated under a separate and distinct head, yet, following the example of the holy Fathers, we have deemed it judicious to embody it with his descent into hell.

What its first part proposes to our belief.

In the first part of this Article, then, we profess that, immediately after the death of Christ, his soul descended into hell, and dwelt there whilst his body remained in the grave: and also that the same Person of Christ was, at the same time, in hell and in the sepulchre. Nor should this excite our surprise; for we have already, frequently said, that, although his soul was separated from his body, his divinity was never separated from soul or body.

Meaning of the word “hell” in this Article.

But as the pastor, by explaining the meaning of the word hell, in this place, may throw considerable light on the exposition of this Article, it is to be observed, that by the word hell, is not here meant the sepulchre, as some have, not less impiously than ignorantly, imagined; for, in the preceding Article we learned that Christ was buried; and there was no reason why the Apostles, in delivering an article of faith, should repeat the same thing in other and more obscure terms. Hell, then, here signifies those secret abodes in which are detained the souls that have not been admitted to the regions of bliss; a sense in which the word is frequently used in Scripture. Thus, the Apostle says, that, "at the name of Jesus, every knee should bend, of those that are in heaven, on earth and in hell:" (1) and in the Acts of the Apostles, Peter says, that Christ the Lord was again risen, "having loosed the sorrows of hell." (2)

These abodes are not all of the same nature, for amongst them, is that most loathsome and dark prison in which the souls of the damned are buried with the unclean spirits, in eternal and inextinguishable fire. This dread abode is called Gehenna, the bottomless pit, and, strictly speaking, means hell. Amongst them is also the fire of purgatory, in which the souls of just men are cleansed by a temporary punishment, in order to be admitted into their eternal country, "into which nothing defiled entereth." (3) The truth of this doctrine founded, as holy councils declare, (4) on Scripture, and confirmed by apostolical tradition, demands diligent and frequent exposition, proportioned to the circumstances of the times in which we live, when men endure not sound doctrine. Lastly, the third kind of abode is that into which the souls of the just, who died before Christ, were received, and where, without experiencing any sort of pain, and supported by the blessed hope of redemption, they enjoyed peaceful repose. To liberate these souls, who, in the bosom of Abraham, were expecting the Saviour, Christ the Lord descended into hell.

Its different meanings.
I.

II.

III.

(1) Philip. ii. 10.      (2) Acts, ii. 24.      (3) Apoc. xxi. 27.
(4) Trid. Conc, Sess. 25.

The soul of Christ really descended into hell.

But, we are not to imagine that his power and virtue only, but we are also firmly to believe that his soul also, really and substantially descended into hell, according to this conclusive testimony of David: "Thou wilt not leave my soul in hell." (5) But, although Christ descended into hell, his supreme power was still the same; nor was the splendour of his sanctity in any degree obscured. His descent served rather to prove, that whatever has been already said of his sanctity was true; and that, as he had previously demonstrated by so many miracles, he was truly the Son of God.

Difference between his descent and that of others.

This we shall easily understand by comparing the descent of Christ, in its causes and circumstances, with that of the just—They descended as captives; (6) He as free and victorious amongst the dead, to subdue those demons by whom, in consequence of primeval guilt, they were held in captivity—they descended, some to endure the most acute torments, others, though exempt from actual pain, yet deprived of the vision of God, and of the glory for which they sighed, and consigned to the torture of suspense; Christ the Lord descended, not to suffer, but to liberate from suffering the holy and the just who were held in painful captivity, and to impart to them the fruit of his passion. His supreme dignity and power, therefore, suffered no diminution by his descent into hell.

Why he descended.
I.

Having explained these things, the pastor will, next, proceed to teach that the Son of God descended into hell, that, clothed with the spoils of the arch-enemy, he may conduct into heaven those holy fathers, and the other just souls, whose liberation from prison he had already purchased. This he accomplished in an admirable and glorious manner, for his august presence, at once shed a celestial lustre upon the captives; filled them with inconceivable joy; and imparted to them that supreme happiness which consists in the vision of God; thus verifying his promise to the thief on the cross: "Amen, I say to thee, this day thou shalt be with me in Paradise." (7) This, deliverance of the just was, long before, predicted by Ozeas, in these words: "O Death! I will be thy death, O Hell! "I will be thy bite;" (8) and also by the prophet Zachary: "Thou, also, by the blood of thy testament, hast sent forth thy prisoners out of the pit, wherein is no water;" (9) and, lastly, the same is expressed by the Apostle in these words: "Despoiling the principalities and powers, he hath exposed them confidently, openly triumphing over them in himself." (10)

(5) Ps. xv. 10. (6) Ps. lxxxvii. 5, 6. (7) Luke, xxiii. 43.

II.

However, to comprehend still more clearly the efficacy of this mystery, we should frequently call to mind, that not only those who were born after the coming of the Saviour, but, also, those who preceded that event from the days of Adam, or shall succeed it to the consummation of time, are included in the redemption purchased by the death of Christ. Before his death and resurrection, heaven was closed against every child of Adam: the souls of the just, on their departure from this life, were borne to the bosom of Abraham; or, as is still the case with those who require to be freed from the stains of sin, or die indebted to the divine justice, were purified in the fire of purgatory.

III.

Another reason, also, why Christ descended into hell is, that there, as well as in heaven and on earth, he may proclaim his power and authority; and that "every knee of things in heaven, and on earth, and under the earth, should bend at his name." (11) And here, who is not filled with admiration and astonishment when he contemplates the infinite love of God to man! Not satisfied with having undergone for our sake a most cruel death, he penetrates the inmost recesses of the earth, to transport into bliss the souls whom he so dearly loved, and whose liberation from prison he had achieved at the price of his blood!

We now come to the second part of the Article, and how indefatigable should be the labours of the pastor in

The second part of the Article.

(8) Ozeas, xiii. 14.

(9) Zach. ix. 11.

(10) Col. ii. 15.

(11) Phil. ii. 10.

Its meaning.

Resurrection superior to the natural power of man.

its exposition ; we learn from these words of the Apostle to Timothy : “ Be mindful that the Lord Jesus Christ is “ risen again from the dead :” (12) words, no doubt, addressed not only to Timothy, but to all who have care of souls. But the meaning of the Article is, that after Christ the Lord had expired on the cross, on the sixth day and ninth hour, and was buried on the evening of the same day by his disciples, who with the permission of the governor Pilate, laid the body of the Lord, when taken down from the cross, in a new tomb, in a garden near at hand ; his soul was reunited to his body, early on the morning of the third day after his death, that is on the Lord’s day ; and thus he, who was dead during those three days, returned to life, and rose from the embraces of the tomb—By the word resurrection, however, we are not, merely to understand that Christ was raised from the dead ; a privilege common with him to many others : but that he rose by his own power and virtue, a singular prerogative peculiar to him alone : for it is incompatible with our nature, nor was it ever given to man to raise himself, by his own power from death to life. This was an exercise of power reserved for the omnipotent hand of God, as these words of the Apostle declare ; “ for, although he “ was crucified through weakness, yet he liveth by the “ power of God.” (13) This divine power, having never been separated, either from his body whilst in the grave, or from his soul whilst disunited from his body, existed in both, and gave to both a capability of reuniting ; and thus did the Son of God, by his own power, return to life, and rise again from the dead. This David foretold, when, filled with the Spirit of God, he prophesied in these words : “ His right hand hath wrought for him salvation, and his “ arm is holy.” (14) This we, also, have from the divine lips of the Redeemer himself : “ I lay down my life,” says “ he, that I may take it again ; and I have power to lay it “ down, and power to take it again.” (15) To the Jews

(12) 2 Tim. ii. 8.

(13) 2 Cor. xiii. 4.

(14) Ps. xcvi. 2.

(15) John, x, 17, 18.

he also said, in confirmation of his doctrine; "Destroy this temple, and in three days, I will raise it up." (16) Although the Jews understood him to have spoken thus of the magnificent temple of Jerusalem, built of stone; yet, as the Scripture testifies in the same place, "he spoke of the temple of his body." (17) We sometimes, it is true, read in Scripture, that he was raised by the Father; (18) but this refers to him as man; as those passages, which, on the other hand, say that he rose by his own power, relate to him as God. (19)

It is also the peculiar privilege of Christ to have been the first who enjoyed this divine prerogative of rising from the dead, for he is called in Scripture "the first-begotten of the dead," (20) and also, "the first born from the dead;" (21) the Apostle also says, "Christ is risen from the dead, the first fruits of them that sleep: for by a man came death, and by a man the resurrection of the dead; and, as in Adam all die, so, also, in Christ all shall be made alive: but every one in his own order; the first fruits Christ, then they that are of Christ, who have believed in his coming." (22) These words of the Apostle are to be understood of a perfect resurrection, by which we are resuscitated to eternal life, being no longer subject to death. In this resurrection Christ the Lord holds the first place; for, if we speak of resurrection, that is, of a return to life, subject to the necessity of again dying, many were thus raised from the dead before Christ; (23) all of whom, however, were restored to life to die again; but Christ the Lord, having conquered death, rose again to die no more, according to this clear testimony of the Apostle: "Christ rising again from the dead, dieth now no more, death shall no longer have dominion over him." (24)

Christ "the first begotten of the dead."

(16) John, ii. 19. (17) John, ii. 21. (18) Acts, ii. 24, iii. 15.
(19) Rom. viii. 34. (20) Apoc. i. 5. (21) Col. i. 18.
(22) 1 Cor. xv. 20—23. (23) 3 Kings, xvii. 22.—4 Kings, iv. 34.
(24) Rom. vi. 9.

Christ rose again on the third day.

Why on the third day.

" According to the Scriptures," why added to the creed.

" THE THIRD DAY"] In explanation of these additional words of the Article, the pastor will inform the people that Christ did not remain in the grave during the entire of these three days, but, as he lay in the sepulchre during an entire natural day, during part of the preceding day and part of the following, he is said, with strictest truth to have lain in the grave for three days, and on the third day, to have risen again from the dead. To declare his divinity, he deferred not his resurrection to the end of the world; whilst at the same time, to prove his humanity and the reality of his death, he rose not immediately, but on the third day after his death, a space of time sufficient to prove that he had really died.

Here the Fathers of the first Council of Constantinople added the words, " according to the Scriptures," which they received from Apostolical tradition, and embodied with the creed, because the same Apostle teaches the absolute necessity of the mystery of the resurrection, when he says: " If Christ be not risen again, then is our preaching vain, and your faith is also vain, for you are yet in your sins." (25) Hence, admiring our belief of this Article, S. Augustine says: " It is of little moment to believe that Christ died: this, the Pagans, Jews, and all the wicked believe; in a word, all believe that Christ died; but, that he rose from the dead is the belief of Christians: to believe that he rose again, this we deem of great moment." (26) Hence it is, that our Lord very frequently spoke to his disciples of his resurrection; and seldom or never of his passion without adverting to his resurrection. Thus, when he said: " The Son of Man shall be delivered to the Gentiles, and shall be mocked and scourged and spit upon; and after they have scourged him, they will put him to death;" he added; " and the third day he shall rise again." (27) Also, when the Jews called upon him to give an attestation of the truth of his doctrine by some miraculous sign, he said: " A sign (25) 1 Cor. xv. 14, 17. (26) August. in Ps. cxv. 4.

(27) Luke, xviii. 32, 33—Math. xvi. 21.

“ shall not be given them but the sign of Jonas the Prophet: for as Jonas was three days and three nights in the whale’s belly, so shall the Son of man be three days and three nights in the bosom of the earth.” (28)

To understand, still better, the force and meaning of this Article, there are three things which demand attentive consideration: first, the necessity of the resurrection: secondly, its end and object: thirdly, the blessings and advantages of which it is to us the source. With regard to the first, it was necessary that he should rise again, in order to manifest the justice of God; for it was most congruous that he, who, through obedience to God, was degraded, and loaded with ignominy, should by him be exalted. This is a reason assigned by the Apostle in his Epistle to the Philippians: “ He humbled himself,” says he, “ becoming obedient unto death; even unto the death of the cross; for which cause God, also, hath exalted him.” (29) He rose, also, to confirm our faith, which is necessary to justification: the resurrection of Christ from the dead by his own power, affords an irrefragable proof of his divinity. It also nurtures and sustains our hope, for, as Christ rose again, we rest on an assured hope, that we too, shall rise again: the members must necessarily arive at the condition of their head. This is the conclusion which S. Paul draws from the reasoning which he uses in his epistles to the Corinthians, (30) and Thessalonians; (31) and Peter, the prince of the Apostles, says: “ Blessed be God and the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, who, according to his great mercy, hath regenerated us unto a lively hope, by the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead, unto the inheritance incorruptible.” (32) Finally, the resurrection of our Lord, as the pastor will inculcate, was necessary to complete the mystery of our salvation and redemption: by his death, Christ liberated us from the thral-

Three things which are here to be explained.

I. Necessity of the resurrection:

II. Its end and object:

(28) Luke, xi. 29.—Math. xii. 39, 40. (29) Philip, ii. 8, 9.
 (30) 1 Cor. xv. 12. (31) 1 Thes. iv. 14. (32) 1 Peter, i. 3, 4.

dom of sin, and restored to us, by his resurrection, the most important of those privileges which we had forfeited by sin. Hence these words of the Apostle: "He was delivered up for our sins, and rose again for our justification." (33) That nothing, therefore, may be wanting to perfect the work of our salvation, it was necessary that, as he died, he should, also, rise again from the dead.

III.
Its blessings and advantages.

I. From what has been said we can perceive the important advantages which the resurrection of our Lord has conferred on the faithful: in his resurrection, we acknowledge him to be the immortal God, full of glory, the conqueror of death and hell; and this we are firmly to believe and openly to profess of Christ Jesus.

II. Again, the resurrection of Christ effectuates our resurrection, not only as its efficient cause, but also as its model. Thus, with regard to the resurrection of the body, we have this testimony of the Apostle: "by a man came death, and by a man the resurrection of the dead." (34) To accomplish the mystery of our redemption in all its parts, God made use of the humanity of Christ as its efficient instrument, and hence, his resurrection is the efficient cause of ours. It is also, the model of his resurrection was the most perfect of all; and, as his body, rising to immortal glory, was changed, so shall our bodies also, before frail and mortal, be restored and clothed with glory and immortality: in the language of the Apostle; "we look for the Saviour our Lord Jesus Christ, who will reform the body of our lowness, made like to the body of his glory." (35)

III. The same may be said of a soul dead in sin: how the resurrection of Christ is proposed to such a soul as the model of her resurrection, we learn from the same Apostle when he says: "Christ is risen from the dead by the glory of the Father, so we also may walk in newness of life" "for if we have been planted together in the likeness of his death, we shall be also in the likeness of his resurrection ;” and a little after, “ knowing that Christ, rising from the dead, dieth no more, death shall no more have dominion over him ; for in that he died to sin, he died once : but in that he liveth, he liveth unto God. So do you also reckon, that you are dead to sin, but alive unto God in Christ Jesus our Lord.” (36)

(33) Rom. iv. 25. (34) 1 Cor. xv. 21. (35) Phil. iii. 20, 21.

From the resurrection of Christ, therefore, we should derive two important lessons of instruction : the one, that, after we have washed away the stains of sin, we should begin to lead a new life, distinguished by integrity, innocence, holiness, modesty, justice, beneficence, and humility : the other, that we should so persevere in that newness of life, as never more, with the divine assistance, to stray from the paths of virtue on which we have once entered.

Nor do the words of the Apostle prove only that the resurrection of Christ is proposed as the model of our resurrection : they, also, declare that it gives us power to rise again ; and imparts to us strength and courage to persevere in holiness and righteousness, and in the observance of the commandments of God. As his death not only furnishes us with an example, but also supplies us with strength to die to sin ; so also, his resurrection invigorates us to attain righteousness : that worshipping God in piety and holiness, we may walk in the newness of life to which we have risen ; for the Redeemer achieved principally by his resurrection, that we, who before died with him to sin, and to the world, may rise, also, with him again to a new discipline and manner of life.

IV.

The principal proofs of this resurrection from sin which demand observation, are comprised in these words of the Apostle : “ If you be risen with Christ, seek the things that are above, where Christ is sitting at the right hand of God.” (37) Here, he distinctly tells us, that they, whose desire of life, honours, riches, and repose, are directed chiefly to the place in which Christ dwells, have truly risen with him : but when he adds : “ Mind the things

Principal proofs of a resurrection from sin.

(36) Rom. vi. 4, 5, 6—9, 10, 11.

(37) Col. iii. 1.

“that are above, not the things that are on the earth;” (38) he gives this, as it were, as another standard, by which we may ascertain if we have truly risen with Christ; for as a relish for food indicates a healthy state of the body so, with regard to the soul, if we relish “whatever is true, whatever is modest, whatever is just, whatever is holy;” (39) and experience within us a sense of the sweetness of heavenly things; this we may consider a very strong proof that with Christ we have risen to a new and spiritual life

(38) Col. iii. 2.

(39) Phil. iv. 8.

ARTICLE VI.

---

“ HE ASCENDED INTO HEAVEN, SITTETH AT THE RIGHT HAND OF GOD THE FATHER
ALMIGHTY.”

---

“ HE ASCENDED INTO HEAVEN”] Filled with the Spirit of God, and contemplating the blessed and glorious ascension of our Lord into heaven, the prophet David exhorts all to celebrate that splendid triumph, with the greatest joy and gladness: “ Clap your hands,” says he, “ all ye nations, shout unto God with the voice of joy. God is “ ascended with jubilee, and the Lord with the sound of “ trumpet.” (1) The pastor will hence learn the obligation imposed on him of explaining this mystery with unremitting assiduity, and of taking especial care that the faithful not only see it with the light of faith, and of the understanding; but still more, that, as far as it is in his power to accomplish, they make it their study, with the divine assistance, to reflect its image in their lives and actions.

Triumph of the ascension, how to be celebrated by Christians.

With regard, then, to the exposition of this sixth Article, which has reference, principally, to the divine mystery of the ascension; we shall begin with its first part, and point out its force and meaning. That Jesus Christ, having fully accomplished the work of redemption, ascended,

First part of the Article: What it teaches us to believe.

(1) Ps. xlvi. 1, 6.

- I. as man, body and soul, into heaven, the faithful are unhesitatingly to believe; for as God, he never forsook heaven, filling, as he does, all places with his divinity.
- II. The pastor is, also, to teach that he ascended by his own power, not by the power of another as did Elias, who was taken up into heaven in a fiery chariot; (2) or as the prophet Habacuc; (3) or Philip, the deacon, who were borne through the air by the divine power, and traversed the distant regions of the earth. (4) Neither did he ascend into heaven, solely by the exercise of his supreme power as God, but, also, by virtue of the power which he possessed as man: although human power alone was insufficient to raise him from the dead, yet the virtue, with which the blessed soul of Christ was endowed, was capable of moving the body as it pleased, and his body, now glorified, readily obeyed its impulsive dominion. Hence, we believe that Christ ascended into heaven as God and man, by his own power.—We now come to the second part of the Article.

Second part
of the Article.

△ trope.

What the word "sitteth" means
here.

“SITTETH AT THE RIGHT HAND OF GOD, THE FATHER ALMIGHTY”] In these words we observe a trope, that is, the changing of a word from its literal, to a figurative meaning, a thing not unfrequent in Scripture, (5) when, accommodating its language to human ideas, it attributes human affections and human members to God, who, spirit as he is, admits of nothing corporeal. But as, amongst men, he who sits at the right hand is considered to occupy the most honourable place, so, transferring the idea to celestial things, to express the glory which Christ, as man, enjoys above all others, we confess that he sits at the right hand of his Eternal Father. This, however, does not imply position and figure of body; but declares the fixed and permanent possession of royal and supreme power and glory, which he received from the Father; as the Apostle says: “raising him up from the dead, and setting him on his right hand in the heavenly places, above all principality,

(2) 4 Kings, ii. 11.

(3) Dan. xiv. 35.

(4) Acts, viii. 39.

(5) Dionys. Arcop. Epist. ix.

“ and power, and virtue, and domination, and every name
 “ that is named, not only in this world, but also in that “ which is to come: and he hath subjected all things under “ his feet.” (6) These words manifestly imply that this glory belongs to our Lord, in so special a manner, that it cannot consist with the nature of any other created being; and hence, in another place, the Apostle asks:
 “ To which of the angels said he at any time, sit on my “ right hand, ’till I make thine enemies thy footstool?” (7)

But the pastor will explain the sense of the Article, more at large, by detailing the history of the ascension, of which the evangelist St. Luke has left us an admirable description, in the Acts of the Apostles. (8) In his exposition, he will observe, in the first place, that all other mysteries refer to the ascension, as to their end and completion; as all the mysteries of religion commence with the Incarnation of our Lord, so his sojourn on earth terminates with his ascension into heaven. Moreover, the other Articles of the Creed, which regard Christ the Lord, show his great humility and lowliness: nothing can be conceived more humble, nothing more lowly, than that the Son of God assumed the frailty of our flesh, suffered and died for us: but nothing more magnificently, nothing more admirably proclaims his sovereign glory and divine majesty, than what is contained in the present and preceding Articles, in which we declare, that he rose from the dead, ascended into heaven, and now sits at the right hand of his Eternal Father.

History of the ascension.

All other mysteries refer to it as to their end and completion.

Tenor of the Saviour’s life compared with his ascension.

When the pastor has accurately explained these truths, he will next inform the faithful, why our Lord ascended into heaven.—He ascended because the glorious kingdom of the highest heavens, not the obscure abode of this earth, presented a suitable dwelling-place to him whose glorified body, rising from the tomb, was clothed with immortality —He ascended, not only to possess the throne of glory, and the kingdom which he purchased at the price

Reasons of the ascension.

I.

II.

(6) Eph. i. 20, 21, 22, Athan. Serm. 1 contra Arian. Basil. lib. de Spir.
 Sanct. c. vi.

(7) Heb. i. 13.

(8) Acts, i.

- of his blood, but, also, to attend to whatever regards the salvation of his people.—He ascended, to prove, thereby that “his kingdom is not of this world,” (9) for the kingdoms of this world are terrene and transient, and are based upon wealth and the power of the flesh; but the kingdom of Christ is not, as the Jews expected, an earthly, but a spiritual and eternal kingdom. Its riches, too, are spiritual, as he shows by placing his throne in the heavens, where they, who seek most earnestly the things that are of God, abound most in riches and in abundance of all good things, according to these words of St. James:— “Hath not God chosen the poor in this world, rich in faith and heirs of the kingdom which God hath promised to them that love him?” (10)
- III. He also ascended into heaven, in order to teach us to follow him thither in mind and heart, for as, by his death and resurrection, he bequeathed to us an example of dying and rising again in spirit; so by his ascension he teaches us, though dwelling on earth, to raise ourselves in thought and desire to heaven, “confessing that we are pilgrims and strangers on the earth, (11) seeking a country;” “fellow-citizens with the saints, and the domestics of God;” (12) “for,” says the same Apostle, “our conversation is in heaven.” (13)
- IV. The extent and unspeakable greatness of the blessings, which the bounty of God has bestowed on us with a lavish hand, were, long before, as the Apostle interprets him, sung by David in these words: “He ascended on high, led captivity captive, and gave gifts to men.” (14) On the tenth day after his ascension, he sent down the Holy Ghost, with whose power and plenitude he filled the multitude of the faithful, then present, and fulfilled his splendid promise: “It is expedient for you that I go; for if I go not, the Paraclete will not come to you: but, if I go, I will send him to you.” (15) He also ascended into
- V. VI. VII.

(9) John, xviii. 36. (10) James, ii. 5. (11) Heb. xi. 13, 14.

(12) Eph. ii. 19. (13) Phillip. iii. 20. (14) Ps. lxxvii. 19.—Eph. iv. 8.

(15) John, xvi. 7, 8. Acts, i. 4, 5.

heaven, according to the Apostle, "that he may appear in the presence of God for us," (16) and discharge for us the office of advocate with the Father: "My, little children," says St. John, "these things I write to you, that you may not sin, but if any man sin, we have an advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ, the just, and he is the propitiation for our sins." (17) There is nothing from which the faithful should derive greater joy than from the reflection, that Jesus Christ is constituted our advocate and intercessor with the Father, with whom his influence and authority are supreme.

Finally, by his ascension, he has prepared for us a place, as he had promised, and has entered, as our head, in the name of us all, into the possession of the glory of heaven. (18) Ascending into heaven, he threw open its gates, which had been closed by the sin of Adam; and, as he foretold his disciples, at his last supper, secured to us a way by which we may arrive at eternal happiness. In order to demonstrate this by the event, he introduced, with himself, into the mansions of eternal bliss, the souls of the just whom he had liberated from prison.

A series of important advantages followed in the train of this admirable profusion of celestial gifts: in the first place, the merit of our faith was considerably augmented; because faith has for its object those things which fall not under the senses, and are far raised above the reach of human reason and intelligence. If, therefore, the Lord had not departed from us, the merit of our faith should not be the same, for Jesus Christ has said: "Blessed are they who have not seen and have believed." (19) In the next place, it contributes much to confirm our hope: believing that Christ, as man, ascended into heaven, and placed our nature at the right hand of God the Father, we are animated with a strong hope that we, as members, shall also ascend thither, to be there united to our head, according to these words of our Lord himself: "Father,

VIII.

Its other advantages.

I.

II.

(16) Heb. ix. 24.

(17) 1 John, ii. 1, 2.

(18) John, xiv. 2.

(19) John, xx. 29.

“ I will, that where I am, they, also, whom thou hast given me, may be with me.” (20)

III. Another most important advantage, flowing from the ascension, is, that it elevates our affections to heaven, and inflames them with the Spirit of God ; for, most truly has it been said, that, “ where our treasure is, there, also, is our heart.” (21) And, indeed, were Christ the Lord dwelling on earth, the contemplation of his person, and the enjoyment of his presence, must absorb all our thoughts, and we should view the author of such blessings only as man, and cherish towards him a sort of earthly affection : but, by his ascension into heaven, he has spiritualised our affection for him, and has made us venerate and love as God, him who, now absent, is the object of our thoughts, not of our senses. This we learn, in part, from the example of the Apostles, who, whilst our Lord was personally present with them, seemed to judge of him, in some measure, humanly ; and, in part, from these words of our Lord himself : “ It is expedient for you that I go.” (22) The affection, with which they loved him when present, was to be perfected by divine love, and that, by the coming of the Holy Ghost ; and, therefore, he immediately subjoins : “ If I go not, the Paraclete will not come to you.”

IV. Besides, he thus enlarged his dwelling place on earth, that is, his Church, which was to be governed by the power and guidance of the Holy Spirit ; and left Peter, the prince of the Apostles, as chief pastor, and supreme head upon earth, of the universal Church. “ Some, also, he gave Apostles, some Prophets and other some Evangelists, and other some Pastors and Doctors,” (23) and, thus, seated at the right hand of the Father, he continually bestows different gifts on different men ; according to the words of St. Paul : “ To every one of us is given grace, according to the measure of the giving of Christ.” (24)

(20) John, xvii. 24. (21) Math. vi. 21. (22) John, xvi. 7.

(23) Eph. iv. 11. (24) Eph. iv. 7.

V.

Finally, what was already said of his death and resurrection, the faithful will deem not less true of his ascension; for, although we owe our redemption and salvation to the passion of Christ, whose merits opened heaven to the just, yet his ascension is not only proposed to us as a model, which teaches us to look on high, and ascend in spirit into heaven; but also imparts to us a divine virtue which enables us to accomplish what it teaches.

ARTICLE VII.

---

“FROM THENCE HE SHALL COME TO JUDGE THE LIVING AND THE DEAD.”

---

The three offices of Christ.

Meaning of the Article.
Last Judgment

JESUS CHRIST is invested with three eminent offices and functions, those of Redeemer, Patron, and Judge. But as, in the preceding Articles, we have shown that the human race was redeemed by his passion and death ; and as, by his ascension into heaven, it is manifest that he has undertaken the perpetual advocacy and patronage of our cause; it next follows, that, in this Article, we set forth his character as judge. The scope and intent of the Article is to declare, that, on the last day, he will judge the whole human race: the Sacred Scriptures inform us, that there are two comings of Christ, the one, when he assumed human flesh, for our salvation, in the womb of a virgin; the other, when he shall come, at the end of the world, to judge mankind. This coming is called, in Scripture, “The day of the Lord:” “The day of the Lord,” says the Apostle, “shall come, as a thief in the night;” (1) and our Lord himself says: “Of that day and hour “nobody knoweth.” (2) In proof of the last judgment, it is enough to adduce the authority of the Apostle: “We

(1) 1 Thess. v. 2.

(2) Matth. xxiv. 36. Mark, xiii. 32.

“ must all,” says he, “ appear before the judgment seat of Christ, that every one may receive the proper things of the body, according as he hath done, whether it be good or evil.” (3) Sacred Scripture abounds in testimonies to the same effect, which the pastor will meet, every where, throughout the Inspired Volume, (4) and which not only establish the truth of the dogma, but also place it, in vivid colours, before the eyes of the faithful; that as, from the beginning, the day of the Lord, on which he was clothed with our flesh, was sighed for by all, as the foundation of their hope of deliverance; so also, after the death and ascension of the Son of God, the second day of the Lord may be the object of our most earnest desires; “ looking for the blessed hope and coming of the glory of the great God.” (5)

But, with a view to the better explanation of this subject, the pastor is to distinguish two distinct periods at which every one must appear in the presence of God, to render an account of all his thoughts, words, and actions, and receive sentence accordingly, from the mouth of his judge: the first, when each one departs this life; for he is instantly placed before the judgment seat of God, where all that he had ever done, or spoken, or thought, during life, shall be subjected to the most rigid scrutiny; and this is called the particular judgment: the second, when, on the same day, and in the same place, all men shall stand together, before the tribunal of their judge, that, in the presence and hearing of a congregated world, each may know his final doom: an announcement which will constitute no small part of the pain and punishment of the wicked, and of the remuneration and rewards of the just; when the tenor of each man’s life shall appear in its true colours. This is called the general judgment; and it becomes an indispensable duty of the pastor to show why, besides the particular judgment of each individual, a general one should also be passed upon the assembled

Two judgments:

Particular.

General.

Why a general judgment.

I.

(3) 2 Cor. v. 10. (4) 1 Kings, ii. 10. Isaias, ii. 12, 19 et xiii, 9.

Jerem. xxx. 23. Dan. vii. 9. Joel, ii. 1.

(5) Tit, ii. 13.

- I. world. The first reason is founded on circumstances that must augment the rewards, or aggravate the punishments of the dead. Those who depart this life sometimes leave behind them children who imitate the conduct of their parents, dependants, followers; and others who admire and advocate the example, the language, the conduct of those on whom they depend, and whose example they follow; and as the good or bad influence of example, affecting, as it does, the conduct of many, is to terminate only with this world; justice demands that, in order to form a proper estimate of the good or bad actions of all, a general judgment should take place.
- II. Moreover, as the character of the virtuous frequently suffers from misrepresentation, whilst that of the wicked obtains the commendation of virtue; the justice of God demands that the former recover, in the presence and with the suffrage of a congregated world, the good name of which they had been unjustly deprived before men.
- III. Again, as the good and the bad perform their good and bad actions not without the cooperation of the body, these actions are common to the body as their instrument; and the body, therefore, should participate with the soul in the eternal rewards of virtue, or the everlasting punishments of vice; and this can only be accomplished by means of a general resurrection and of a general judgment.
- IV. Finally, it was important to prove, that in prosperity and adversity, which are sometimes the promiscuous lot of the good and of the bad, every thing is ordered by an all-wise, all-just, and all-ruling Providence: it was therefore necessary not only, that rewards and punishments should await us in the next life; but that they should be awarded by a public and general judgment: that thus they may be better known and rendered more conspicuous to all; and that, in atonement for the querulous murmurings to which, on seeing the wicked abound in wealth and flourish in honours, even the Saints themselves, as men, have sometimes given expression; a tribute of praise may be offered by all to the justice and providence of God. "My feet," says the Prophet, "were almost moved, my steps had well nigh slipt; because I had a zeal on occasion of the wicked, seeing the prosperity of sinners:" and a little after: "Behold! these are sinners, and yet abounding in the world, they have obtained riches; and I said, then have I in vain justified my heart, and washed my hands among the innocent: and I have been scourged all the day; and my chastisement hath been in the morning." (6) This has been the frequent complaint of many, and a general judgment is, therefore, necessary, lest, perhaps, men may be tempted to say that God, "walking about the poles of heaven," (7) regards not the earth. Wisely, therefore, has this truth been made one of the twelve articles of the Christian creed, that should any be tempted to doubt for a moment, their faith may be confirmed by the satisfactory reasons which this doctrine presents to the mind. Besides, the just should be encouraged by the hope, the wicked appalled by the terror of a future judgment; that knowing the justice of God the former may not be disheartened, and, dreading his eternal judgments, the latter may be recalled from the paths of vice. Hence, speaking of the last day, our Lord and Saviour declares, that a general judgment will, one day, take place, and describes the signs of its approach; that seeing them, we may know that the end of the world is at hand. (8) At his ascension also, to console his Apostles, overwhelmed with grief at his departure, he sent Angels, who said to them: "This Jesus who is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come as you have seen him going into heaven." (9)

V.

That this judgment is ascribed to Christ our Lord, not only as God, but also as man, is expressly declared in Scripture; for although the power of judging is common to all the Persons of the blessed Trinity, yet it is specially attributed to the Son, because to him also, in a special manner, is ascribed wisdom. But that, as man, he will

Christ not only as God, but also as man, universal judge.

(6) Ps. lxxii. 2, 3.—12, 13, 14. (7) Job, xxii. 14. (8) Math. xxiv. 29.

(9) Acts, i. 11.

Why as
man?

judge the world, is confirmed by the testimony of our Lord himself when he says: "As the Father hath life in himself; so he hath given to the Son also, to have life in himself; and he hath given him power to do judgment, because he is the Son of Man." (10) There is a peculiar propriety in Christ's sitting in judgment on this occasion; that, as sentence is to be pronounced on mankind, they may see their judge with their eyes, and hear him with their ears, and thus learn their final doom through the medium of the senses. Most just is it also, that he, who was most iniquitously condemned by the judgment of men, should himself be, afterwards, seen by all men sitting in judgment on all. Hence the prince of the Apostles, when expounding, in the house of Cornelius, the principal dogmas of Christianity, and teaching that Christ was suspended from a cross, and put to death by the Jews, and rose the third day to life, added; "and he has commanded us to preach, and to testify to the people, that this is he, who was appointed of God to be the judge of the living and the dead." (11)

Signs which are to precede the general judgment.

The Sacred Scriptures also inform us, that the general judgment shall be preceded by these three principal signs, the preaching of the Gospel throughout the world, a defection from the faith, and the coming of Antichrist. "This Gospel of the kingdom," says our Lord, "shall be preached in the whole world, for a testimony to all nations, and then shall come the consummation." (12) The Apostle also, admonishes us that we be not seduced by any one, "as if the day of the Lord were at hand; for, unless there come a revolt first, and the man of sin be revealed, the son of perdition," (13) the judgment will not come.

The form and procedure of this judgment the pastor will easily learn from the oracles of Daniel, (14) the writings of the Evangelists and the doctrine of the Apostle. The sentence, also, to be pronounced by the judge, is here deserving of more than ordinary attention. Looking to the just standing on his right, with a countenance beaming with joy, the Redeemer will pronounce sentence on them, with the greatest benignity, in these words: "Come, ye blessed of my Father, possess the kingdom prepared for you from the beginning of the world." (15) That nothing can be conceived, more delightful to the ear than these words, we shall comprehend, if we only compare them with the sentence of condemnation to be hurled against the wicked; and call to mind, that by them, the just are invited from labour to rest, from the vale of tears to the mansions of joy, from temporal misery to eternal happiness, the reward of their works of charity.

(10) John, v. 26, 27. (11) Acts, x. 42. (12) Matth. xxiv. 14.

(13) 2 Thess. ii. 2, 3. (14) Dan. vii. 9.

Turning next to those who shall stand on his left, he will pour out his justice on them in these words: "Depart from me ye cursed, into everlasting fire, prepared for the devil and his angels." (16) These first words, "depart from me," express the heaviest punishment with which the wicked shall be visited—their eternal banishment from the sight of God, unrelieved by one consolatory hope of recovering so great a good. This Divines call "the pain of loss," because, in hell, the wicked shall be deprived of the light of the vision of God. (17) The words "ye cursed," which are added, must augment, to an extreme degree, their wretched and calamitous condition. If, when banished from the Divine presence, they could hope for blessing of any sort, it might be to them some source of consolation; but deprived of every such expectation that could alleviate calamity, the divine justice, whose severity their crimes have provoked, pursues them with every species of malediction. The words, "into everlasting fire," which follow, express another sort of punishment, called by Divines "the pain of sense;" because, like other corporal punishments, amongst which, no doubt, fire produces the most intense pain, it is felt through the organs of sense. When, moreover, we reflect that this pain is to be eternal, we are at once satisfied that the punishment of the damned admits of no increase.

(15) Math. xxv. 34. (16) Math. xxv. 41. (17) Chrysost. in Matth. hom. 23. August, Serm. 181. de temp, Greg. lib. 9. moral. cap. 46.

The faithful to be, frequently reminded of the last judgment.

These are considerations, which the pastor should very frequently press upon the attention of the faithful; the truth which this Article announces, seen with the eyes of faith, is most efficacious in bridling the perverse propensities of the heart, and withdrawing souls from sin. (18) Hence we read in Ecclesiasticus: "Remember thy last end, and thou shalt never sin." (19) And, indeed, it is almost impossible to find one so prone to vice, as not to be capable of being recalled to the pursuit of virtue, by the reflection—that the day will come when he shall have to render an account before a most rigorous judge, not only of all his words and actions, but even of his most secret thoughts, and shall suffer punishment according to his deserts. But the just man must be more and more excited to cultivate justice, and, although doomed to spend his life in want, and obloquy, and torments, he must be transported with the greatest joy, when he looks forward to that day on which, when the conflicts of this wretched life are over, he shall be declared victorious in the hearing of all men; and admitted into his heavenly country, shall be crowned with divine, and these, also, eternal honours. It becomes, therefore, the duty of the pastor, to exhort the faithful to model their lives after the best manner, and exercise themselves in every practice of piety; that thus they may be enabled to look forward with greater security, to the great coming day of the Lord, and even, as becomes children, desire it most earnestly.

(18) Aug. serm. 128. de temp. Greg. hom. 39. in Evang. Bernard. serm. 1. in festo omnium Sanctorum. (19) Eccles. vii. 40.

ARTICLE VIII.

---

“ I BELIEVE IN THE HOLY GHOST.”

---

HITHERTO we have expounded, as far as the nature of the subject seemed to require, what regards the first and second Persons of the Holy Trinity. It now remains to explain what the Creed contains with regard to the third Person, the Holy Ghost. On this subject, also, the pastor will omit nothing that study and assiduity can effect; for on this, and the preceding Articles, error were alike unpardonable. Hence, the Apostle is careful to instruct some amongst the Ephesians, with regard to the Person of the Holy Ghost. (1) Having asked if they had received the Holy Ghost, and having received for answer, that they did not so much as know the existence of the Holy Spirit, he immediately subjoins: “ In whom, therefore, were you baptised?”—to signify that a distinct knowledge of this Article is most necessary to the faithful. From it they derive this special fruit—considering, attentively, that whatever they possess, they possess through the bounty and beneficence of the Holy Spirit, they learn to think more modestly and humbly of them-

Necessity of Faith in the Holy Ghost.

(1) Acts, xix. 2.

selves, and to place all their hopes in the protection of God, which is the first step towards consummate wisdom and supreme happiness.

Meaning of the words
Holy Ghost

The exposition of this Article, therefore, should begin with the meaning here attached to the words, Holy Ghost; for, as this appellation is equally true when applied to the Father and the Son, (both are spirit, both holy,) and also includes angels, and the souls of the just; care must be taken that the faithful be not led into error by the ambiguity of the words. The pastor, then, will teach, in this Article, that by the words Holy Ghost, is understood the third Person of the blessed Trinity; a sense in which they are used, sometimes, in the Old, and frequently in the New Testament. Thus David prays: "Take not thy Holy Spirit from me;" (2) and in the Book of Wisdom, we read: "Who shall know thy thoughts, except thou give wisdom, and send thy Holy Spirit from above?" (3) And in another place: "He created her in the Holy Ghost." (4) We are also commanded, in the New Testament, to be baptised, "in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost:" (5) we read that the most holy Virgin conceived of the Holy Ghost; (6) and we are sent by St. John to Christ, "who baptiseth us in the Holy Ghost;" (7) with a variety of other passages in which the words Holy Ghost occur.

Why the third Person of the holy Trinity has no proper name.

Nor should it be deemed matter of surprise, that a proper name is not given to the third, as to the first and second Persons: the second Person is designated by a proper name, and called Son, because, as has been explained in the preceding Articles, his eternal birth from the Father is properly called generation. As, therefore, that birth is expressed by the word generation; so the Person, emanating from that generation, is properly called Son, and the Person, from whom he emanates, Father. But as the production of the third Person is characterised

(2) Ps. 50. 12, 13.

(3) Wis. ix. 17.

(4) Eccles. i. 9.

(5) Matth. xxviii, 19,

(6) Matth. i. 20. Luke, i. 35.

(7) John, i, 33.

by no proper name, but is called spiration and procession; the Person produced is, consequently, characterised by no proper name. As, however, we are obliged to borrow, from created objects, the names given to God, and know no other created means of communicating nature and essence than that of generation; we cannot discover a proper name to express the manner in which God communicates himself entire, by the force of his love. Unable, therefore, to express the emanation of the third Person, by a proper, we have recourse to the common name of Holy Ghost; a name, however, peculiarly appropriate to him who infuses into us spiritual life, and without whose holy inspiration, we can do nothing meritorious of eternal life.

But the people, when once acquainted with the import of the name, should, first of all, be taught that he is equally God with the Father and the Son, equally omnipotent, eternal, perfect, the supreme good, infinitely wise, and of the same nature with the Father and the Son. All this is, obviously enough, implied by the force of the word "in," when we say: "I believe in the Holy Ghost;" which, to mark the particularity of our faith, is prefixed to each Person of the Trinity; and is also clearly established by many passages of Scripture: when, in the Acts of the Apostles, St. Peter says: "Ananias! why hast thou conceived this thing in thy heart?" he immediately adds: "thou hast not lied to men but to God;" (8) calling him, to whom he had before given the name Holy Ghost, immediately after, God.

The Apostle, also, writing to the Corinthians, interprets what he says of God, as said of the Holy Ghost: "There are," says he, "diversities of operations, but the same God, who worketh all in all;" "but," continues he, "all these things one and the same spirit worketh, dividing to every one according as he will." (9) In the Acts of the Apostles, also, what the prophets attribute to one God, St. Paul ascribes to the Holy Ghost; thus

The Holy Ghost equally God with the Father and the Son.

I.

II.

III.

IV.

(8) Acts, v. 3, 4.

(9) 1 Cor. xii. 6, 11.

Isaias had said: "I heard the voice of the Lord, saying: "whom shall I send? and who shall go for us? and I said: Lo! here, am I, send me. And he said: go, and thou shalt say to this people: Blind the heart of this people, and make their ears heavy, and shut their eyes: least they see with their eyes, and hear with their ears:" (10) Having cited these words, the Apostle adds: "Well did the Holy Ghost speak to our fathers, "by Isaias the prophet." (11)

V. Again, the Sacred Scriptures, by annexing the Person of the Holy Ghost to those of the Father and the Son; as when baptism is commanded to be administered, "in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost," leaves no room whatever to doubt the truth of this mystery: for, if the Father is God, and the Son God, why not confess that the Holy Ghost, who is united with them in the same degree of honour, is also

VI. God? Besides, baptism administered in the name of any creature, can be of no effect: "Were you baptised in the name of Paul?" (12) says the Apostle, to show that such baptism could have availed them nothing to salvation. Having, therefore, been baptised in the name of the Holy Ghost, we must acknowledge the Holy Ghost to be God.

VII. But this same order of the three Persons, which proves the divinity of the Holy Ghost, is observable in the epistle of St. John: "There are three who give testimony in heaven; the Father, the Word, and the Holy Ghost; and these three are one; (13) and, also, in that noble eulogy, or form of praise to the Trinity: "Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost," which closes the psalms and divine praises.

VIII. Finally, not to omit an argument which goes, most forcibly, to establish this truth, the authority of Holy Scripture proves, that whatever faith attributes to God, belongs equally to the Holy Ghost: to him is ascribed, in Scripture, the honour of temples: "Know you not,"

(10) Isaias, vi. 8, 9, 10.

(11) Acts, xxviii. 25.

(12) 1 Cor. i. 13.

(13) 1 John, v. 7.

says the Apostle, "that your members are the temple of the Holy Ghost;" (14) and also sanctification, (15) vivification, (16) to search the depths of God, (17) to speak by the prophets, (18) and to be present in all places; (19) all of which are attributed to God alone.

The pastor will, also, accurately explain to the faithful, that the Holy Ghost is God, so as to be the third Person in the divine nature, distinct from the Father and the Son, and produced by their will. To say nothing of other testimonies of Scripture, the form of baptism, taught by the Redeemer, (20) furnishes an irrefragable proof that the Holy Ghost is the third Person, self-existent in the divine nature, and distinct from the other Persons: a doctrine taught, also, by the Apostle, when he says: "The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ, and the charity of God, and the communication of the Holy Ghost, be with you all. Amen." (21) This same truth, is still more explicitly declared in the words which were here added by the Fathers of the first Council of Constantinople, to refute the impious folly of Macedonius: "And in the Holy Ghost the Lord and giver of life, who proceedeth from the Father, and the Son: who, together with the Father and the Son, is adored and glorified; who spoke by the prophets." Thus, by confessing the Holy Ghost to be "Lord," they declare, how far he excells the angels, who are the perfection of created intelligence; for, "they are all," says the Apostle, "ministering spirits, sent to minister for them who shall receive the inheritance of salvation." (22)

The Holy Ghost a distinct person from the Father and the Son:

They, also, designate the Holy Ghost: "The giver of life," because the soul lives more by an union with God, than the body is nurtured and sustained by an union with the soul. As, then, the Sacred Scriptures ascribe to the Holy Ghost this union of the soul with God, with great propriety, is he denominated "the giver of life."

Why called the "giver of life."

(14) 1 Cor. vi. 19. (15) 2 Thess. ii. 13. 1 Petr. i. 2. (16) John, vi. 64.
 (17) 2 Cor. iii. 6.; 1 Cor. ii. 10. (18) 2 Petr. i. 21. (19) Wis. i. 7.
 (20) Matth. xxviii. 19. (21) 2 Cor. xiii. 13. (22) Heb. i. 14.

His procession from the Father and the Son.

With regard to the words immediately succeeding: "who proceedeth from the Father and the Son," the faithful are to be taught, that the Holy Ghost proceeds, by eternal procession, from the Father and the Son, as from one principle: a truth propounded to us by an ecclesiastical rule, from which the least departure is unwarrantable, confirmed by the authority of the Sacred Scriptures, and defined by the Councils of the Church. Christ himself, speaking of the Holy Ghost, says: "He shall glorify me, because he shall receive of mine;" (23) and we, also, find that the Holy Ghost is, sometimes, called, in Scripture, "the Spirit of Christ," sometimes, "the Spirit of the Father;" is, one time, said to be sent by the Father, (24) another time, by the Son; (25) thus signifying, in unequivocal terms, that he proceeds alike from the Father and the Son. "He," says St. Paul, "who has not the Spirit of Christ belongs not to him." (26) In his epistle to the Galatians, he also calls the Holy Ghost the Spirit of Christ: "God," says he, "hath sent the Spirit of his Son into your hearts, crying: Abba, Father." (27) In the Gospel of St. Matthew, he is called the Spirit of the Father: "It is not you that speak, but the Spirit of your Father that speaketh in you;" (28) and our Lord himself said, at his last supper: "When the Paraclete cometh, whom I will send you, the Spirit of Truth, who proceedeth from the Father, he shall give testimony of me." (29) On another occasion, he declares, that he is to be sent by the Father: "whom," says he, "the Father will send in my name." (30) Understanding by these words, the procession of the Holy Ghost, we come to the inevitable conclusion, that he proceeds from the Father and the Son. This exposition embraces the doctrine to be taught with regard to the Person of the Holy Ghost.

The gifts of the Holy Ghost.

It is, also, the duty of the pastor to teach that there are certain admirable effects, certain exalted gifts of the (23) John, xvi. 14.

(24) John, xiv. 26.

(25) John, xv. 26.

(26) Rom. viii. 9.

(27) Gal. iv. 6.

(28) Matth. x. 20.

(29) John, xv. 26.

(30) John, xiv. 26.

Holy Ghost, which are said to originate and emanate from him, as from a perennial fountain of goodness. Although the extrinsic works of the most Holy Trinity are common to the three Persons, yet many of them are attributed, specially, to the Holy Ghost; giving us to understand that they arise from the boundless love of God towards us: for as the Holy Ghost proceeds from the divine will, inflamed, as it were, with love, we can comprehend that these effects which are referred, particularly, to the Holy Ghost, are the result of the boundless love of God towards us.

Hence it is, that the Holy Ghost is called A GIFT; for by a gift, we understand that which is kindly and gratuitously bestowed, without reference to anticipated remuneration. Whatever gifts and graces, therefore, have been bestowed on us, by Almighty God, and "what have we," says the Apostle, "that we have not received from God?" (31) we should piously and gratefully acknowledge, as bestowed by the grace and gift of the Holy Ghost.

These gifts are numerous: not to mention the creation of the world, the propagation and government of all created beings, as noticed in the first Article; we proved, a little before, that the giving of life is, particularly, attributed to the Holy Ghost, and the propriety of this attribution is further confirmed by the testimony of the prophet Ezekiel: "I will give you spirit and you shall live." (32) The prophet Isaias, however, enumerates the effects peculiarly attributed to the Holy Ghost: The spirit of wisdom, "and understading, the spirit of counsel and fortitude, the spirit of knowledge and piety, and the spirit of the fear of the Lord:" (33) effects which are called the gifts of the Holy Ghost, and, sometimes, the Holy Ghost. Wisely, therefore, does St. Augustine admonish us, whenever we meet the word Holy Ghost, in Scripture, to distinguish whether it means the third Person of the Trinity, or his gifts and operations: (34) they are as distinct as the Creator is from the creature. The diligence of the pastor, in expounding these truths, should be the greater, as it is from these gifts of the Holy Ghost that we derive rules of Christian life, and are enabled to know if the Holy Ghost dwells within us.

(31) 1 Cor. iv. 7.

(32) Ezek. xxxvii. 6.

(33) Isaias, xi. 3.

Justifying Grace, the transcend-ant gift of the Holy Ghost.

But the grace of justification, "which signs us with the holy spirit of promise, who is the pledge of our inheritance," (35) transcends his highest gifts: it unites us to God, in the closest bonds of love—lights up within us the sacred flame of piety—forms us to newness of life—renders us partakers of the divine nature—and enables us "to be called and really to be the sons of God." (36) (37)

(34) D. August. lib. 15. de Trinit. cap. xviii. 19. (35) Eph. i. 15.

(36) 1 John, iii. 1. ; 2 Petr. i. 4.

(37) Council Trid. Sess. 6.

ARTICLE IX.

---

"I BELIEVE THE HOLY CATHOLIC CHURCH."

---

It will not be difficult to estimate the care with which the pastor should explain this ninth Article to the faithful, (1) if we attend to the following important considerations: that, as S. Augustine observes, (2) the prophets spoke more plainly and explicitly of the Church than of Christ, foreseeing that on this a much greater number may err and be deceived, than on the mystery of the incarnation: after ages were to behold wicked men, who, imitative as the ape, that would fain pass for one of the human species, arrogate to themselves exclusively the name of Catholic, and, with effrontery as unblushing as it is impious, assert that with them alone is to be found the Catholic Church—Secondly, that he, whose mind is deeply impressed with this truth, will experience little difficulty in avoiding the awful danger of heresy; for a person is not to be called a heretic so soon as he errs in matters of faith: then only is he to be so called, when, in defiance of the authority of the Church, he maintains impious opinions, with unyielding pertinacity. As, therefore, so long as he holds what this Article proposes to be believed, no man can be infected with the contagion of heresy; the

Why this Article is to be carefully explained.

True and not particularly of the Roman Church and another

Who is to be called a heretic.

(1) 1 John, iii. 1.—2 Peter, i. 4. (2) S. Aug. in Ps. xxx. 15.

pastor should use every diligence, that the faithful, knowing this mystery, and prepared against the wiles of Satan, persevere in the true faith.

But this Article hinges upon the preceding one, for, having already established that the Holy Ghost is the source and giver of all holiness, we here confess our belief in the Church which he has endowed with sanctity.

Meaning of
the word
Ecclesia ;
(church.)

As the word Ecclesia (church) which is borrowed from the Greek, has been applied, since the preaching of the Gospel, to sacred things, it becomes necessary to explain its meaning. The word Ecclesia (church) means a calling forth ; but writers, afterwards used it to signify a council or assembly. Nor does it matter whether the word is used in reference to the professors of a true or a false religion : in the Acts of the Apostles it is said of the people of Ephesus, that, when the town-clerk had appeased a tumultuous assemblage, he said : “ and if you “ enquire after any other matter, it may be decided in a “ lawful assembly ” (Ecclesia) : (3) The Ephesians, who were worshippers of Diana, are thus called by the Apostle, “ a lawful assembly ” (Ecclesia) : Nor are the Gentiles only, who know not God, called a church or assembly, (Ecclesia) : the councils of wicked and impious men are also, sometimes, called by the same name : “ I have hated “ the assembly (Ecclesiam) of the malignant,” says the Psalmist, “ and with the wicked I will not sit.” (4) However, in ordinary Scripture-phrase, the word was afterwards used to designate the Christian commonwealth only, and the assemblies of the faithful ; that is of those who were called by faith to the light of truth, and the knowledge of God ; who, forsaking the darkness of ignorance and error, worship the living and true God in piety and holiness, and serve him from their whole hearts. In a word, “ the “ Church,” says S. Augustine, “ consists of the faithful “ dispersed throughout the world.” (5)

Mysteries
which the word comprises.

Under the word “ Church ” are comprehended no unimportant mysteries, for, in this “ calling forth,” which

(3) Acts, xix. 39. (4) Ps. xxv. 5. (5) S. Aug. in Ps. cxlix.

the word Ecclesia (church) signifies, we, at once recognise the benignity and splendour of divine grace, and understand that the Church is very unlike all other commonwealths: they rest on human reason and human prudence; this, on the wisdom and councils of God; for he called us by the interior inspiration of the Holy Ghost, who, through the ministry and labour of his pastors, and preachers, penetrates into the hearts of men.

Moreover, from this calling we shall better understand the end which the Christian should propose to himself, that is, the knowledge and possession of things eternal, when we reflect why the faithful, living under the law, were, of old, called a synagogue, that is, a congregation: as S. Augustine observes, "they were so called, because, like cattle which usually go together, they looked only to terrestrial and transitory things;" (6) and hence the Christian people are called a church, not a synagogue, because, despising terrestrial and transitory things, they aspired only to things heavenly and eternal.

Many other names, replete with mysteries, are employed, by an easy deflection from their original meaning, to designate the Christian commonwealth: by the Apostle it is called "the House and Edifice of God," when writing to Timothy, he says, "If I tarry long, that thou mayest know how thou oughtest to behave thyself in the house of God, which is the Church of the living God, the pillar and ground of truth." (7) It is called a house, because it consists, as it were, of one family, governed by one Father, and enjoying a community of all spiritual goods. It is also called the flock of Christ, which he is "the door and the shepherd." (8) It is called the spouse of Christ: "I have espoused you to one husband," says the Apostle to the Corinthians, "that I may present you a chaste virgin to Christ:" (9) and writing to the Ephesians, he says: "Husbands, love your wives, as Christ, also, loved the Church, and delivered

In what it differs from the Synagogue.

Other names of the Church.

I.
II.
III.

(6) Aug. in Ps. lxxvii. et lxxxii.
(8) Ezck. xxxiv. 5.—John, x. 7.

(7) 1 Tim. iii. 15.
(9) 2 Cor. xi. 2.

“himself up for it:” (10) and, also, speaking of marriage, he says: “This is a great sacrament, but I speak in Christ
 IV. “and in the Church.” (11) Finally, the Church is called the body of Christ, as may be seen in the epistles of S. Paul to the Ephesians, (12) and Colossians: (13) appellations each of which has considerable influence in exciting the faithful to prove themselves worthy the boundless clemency and goodness of God, who chose them to be his people.

The Church triumphant and militant;

Triumphant;

Militant.

Composed of the good and the bad.

Having explained these things, it will be necessary to enumerate the several component parts of the Church, and point out their difference, in order that the faithful may the better comprehend the nature, properties, gifts and graces of the Church, the object of God's special predilection; and unceasingly offer to the divine majesty the homage of their grateful praise. The Church consists principally of two parts, the one called the Church triumphant, the other, the Church militant. (14) The Church triumphant is that most glorious and happy assemblage of blessed spirits and of those souls who have triumphed over the world, the flesh, and the devil, and, now exempt from the troubles of this life, are blessed with the fruition of everlasting bliss. The Church militant is the society of all the faithful still dwelling on earth, and is called militant, because it wages eternal war with those implacable enemies, the world, the flesh and the devil. We are not, however, hence to infer that there are two Churches: they are two constituent parts of one Church; one part gone before, and now in the possession of its heavenly country; the other, following every day, until, at length, united to its invisible head, it shall repose in the fruition of endless felicity. (15)

The Church militant is composed of two classes of persons, the good and the bad, both professing the same faith and partaking of the same sacraments; yet differing in

(10) Eph. v. 25.

(11) Eph. v. 32.

(12) Eph. i. 23.

(13) Colos. i. 24.

(14) Aug. Ench. c. 10.

(15) Aug. lib. ii. de Civ. Dei, c. 9.

their manner of life and morality. The good are those who are linked together not only by the profession of the same faith, and the participation of the same sacraments; but also by the spirit of grace, and the bond of charity: of whom St. Paul says: "The Lord knoweth who are "his." (16) Who they are that compose this class we, also, may remotely conjecture; pronounce with certainty we cannot. (17) Of this part of his Church, therefore, our Lord does not speak, when he refers us to the Church, and commands us to hear and to obey her: (18) unknown as is that portion of the Church, how ascertain with certainty, whose decision to recur to, whose authority to obey? The Church, therefore, as the Sacred Scriptures, and the writings of the holy men who are gone before us, testify, includes within her fold the good and the bad; and this interpretation is sustained by the Apostle, when he says: "There is one body and one spirit." (19) Thus understood, the Church is known, and is compared to a city built on a mountain, and seen from every side. (20) As all must yield obedience to her authority, it is necessary that she may be known by all. That the Church is composed of the good and the bad we learn from many parables contained in the Gospel: thus, the kingdom of heaven, that is, the Church militant, is compared to a net cast into the sea, (21) to a field in which tares were sown with the good grain, (22) to a threshing floor on which the grain is mixed up with the chaff, (23) and, also, to ten virgins, five of whom were wise, and five foolish; (24) and, long before, we trace a figure and striking resemblance of the Church in the ark of Noah, which contained not only clean, but also unclean animals. (25) But, although the Catholic faith uniformly and truly teaches that the good and the bad belong to the Church, yet the same faith declares that the condition of

Figures
and comparisons of the Church.

(16) 2 Tim. ii. 19. (17) Conc. Trid. Sess. 6. c. 12. (18) Math. xviii. 17.
(19) Eph. iv. 4. (20) Mat. v. 15. (21) Mat. xiii. 47. (22) Math. xiii. 24.
(23) Luke, iii. 17. (24) Math. xxv. 1, 2. (25) Gen. vii. 2.— 1 Pet. iii. 20.

both is very different: the wicked are contained in the Church, as the chaff is mingled with the grain on the threshing floor, or as dead members, sometimes, remain attached to a living body.

Those who are excluded from her pale.

Hence, there are but three classes of persons excluded from her pale, infidels, heretics and schismatics, and excommunicated persons; infidels, because they never belonged to, and never knew the Church, and were never made partakers of any of her sacraments; heretics and schismatics, because they have separated from the Church, and belong to her, only as deserters belong to the army from which they have deserted. It is not, however, to be denied that they are still subject to the jurisdiction of the Church, inasmuch as they are liable to have judgment past on their opinions, to be visited with spiritual punishments, and denounced with anathema. Finally, excommunicated persons, because excluded by her sentence from the number of her children, belong not to her communion until restored by repentance. But with regard to the rest; however wicked and flagitious, it is certain that they still belong to the Church; and of this the faithful are frequently to be reminded, in order to be convinced that, were even the lives of her ministers debased by crime, they are still within her pale, and, therefore, lose no part of the power, with which her ministry invests them.

Other applications of the word Church.

But portions of the Universal Church are, also, usually called a Church, as when the Apostle mentions the Church at Corinth, (26) at Galatia, (27) at Laodicea, (28) at Thessalonica. (29) The private houses of the faithful he, also, calls Churches: the Church in the house of Priscilla and Aquila he commands to be saluted: (30) and in another place, he says: "Aquila and Priscilla, with their domestic Church, salute you much." (31) Writing to Philemon, he makes use of the same word, in the same sense. (32) Sometimes, also, the word Church is used to signify the prelates and pastors of the Church: "If he will not hear thee," says our Lord, "tell it to the Church." (33) Here the word Church means the authorities of the Church. The place in which the faithful assemble to hear the word of God, or for other religious purposes, is, also, called a Church; (34) but, in this Article, the word is specially used to signify the good and the bad, the governing and the governed.

(26) 2 Cor. i. 1. (27) Gal. i. 2. (28) Collos. iv. 16. (29) 1 Thess. i. 1.

(30) Rom. xvi. 3-5.

(31) 1 Cor. xvi. 19. (32) Phil. i. 2.

The distinctive marks of this Church are also to be made known to the faithful, that thus they may be enabled to estimate the extent of the blessing, conferred by God on those who have had the happiness to be born and educated within her pale. The first mark of the true Church is described in the Creed of the Fathers, and consists in unity: "My dove is one, my beautiful one is one." (35) So vast a multitude, scattered far and wide, is called one, for the reasons mentioned by S. Paul in his epistle to the Ephesians: "One Lord, one faith, one baptism." (36) This Church has, also, but one ruler and one governor, the invisible one, Christ, whom the Eternal Father "hath made head over all the Church, which is his body;" (37) the visible one, him, who, as legitimate successor of Peter the prince of the Apostles, fills the apostolic chair.

That this visible head is necessary to establish and preserve unity in the Church is the unanimous accord of the Fathers; and on this, the sentiments of S. Jerome, in his work against Jovinian, are as clearly conceived, as they are happily expressed: "One," says he, "is chosen, that, by the appointment of a head, all occasion of schism may be removed;" (38) and to Damasus, "Let envy cease, let the pride of Roman ambition be humbled: I speak to the successor of the fisherman, and to the disciple of the cross. Following no chief but Christ, I am united in communion with your Holiness, that is, with the chair of Peter. I know that on that rock is built Distinctive marks of the Church.

I. Unity.

A visible head necessary to preserve unity.

on this bold assertion may be heard all the Catholics of the Roman Church: & they be therefore from the first guarded again

(33) Mat. xviii. 17.

(34) 1 Cor. xi. 18.

(35) Cant. vi. 8.

(36) Eph. iv. 5.

(37) Eph. i. 22, 25.

(38) S. Hyeron. lib. 1.

contr. Jovin. in med. et epist. 57.

“ the Church. Whoever will eat the lamb outside this “ house is profane : whoever is not in the ark of Noah “ shall perish in the flood.” The same doctrine was, long before, established by S.S. Irenæus,(39) and Cyprian :(40)
 the latter, speaking of the unity of the Church, observes
 “ The Lord said to Peter, ‘ I say to thee Peter ! thou “ ‘ art Peter : and upon this rock I will build my “ ‘ Church :’ (41) he builds his Church on one ; and al“ though, after his resurrection, he gave equal power to “ all his Apostles, saying, ‘ As the Father hath sent me, “ ‘ I also send you. Receive ye the Holy Ghost ;’ (42)
 “ yet, to display unity, he disposed, by his own authority,
 “ the origin of this unity, which had its beginning “ with one, &c.” Again, Optatus of Milevis says : “ It “ cannot be ascribed to ignorance on your part, knowing, “ as you do, that the episcopal chair, in which, as head of “ all the Apostles, Peter sat, was, first, fixed by him in the “ city of Rome ; that in him alone may be preserved the “ unity of the Church ; and that the other Apostles may “ not claim each a chair for himself ; so that, now, he,
 “ who erects another, in opposition to this single chair, is “ a schismatic and a prevaricator.”(43) In the next place,
 S. Basil has these words : “ Peter is made the foundation, “ because he says : ‘ Thou art Christ, the Son of the living “ ‘ God :’ and hears in reply that he is a rock ; but although “ a rock, he is not such a rock as Christ, for in himself “ Christ is, truly, an immoveable rock, but Peter, only by “ virtue of that rock ; for God bestows his dignities on “ others : He is a priest, and he makes priests ; a rock, “ and he makes a rock : what belongs to himself, he be“ stows on his servants.” (44) Lastly, S. Ambrose says :
 “ Should any one object, that the Church is content with “ one head and one spouse, Jesus Christ, and requires no
 “ other ; the answer is obvious ; for, as we deem Christ

(39) Iren. lib. 3. contr. hæres. cap. 3.

(40) B. Cyprian. de simp. præel. in principio fere.

(41) Math. xvi. 18.

(42) John, xx. 21, 22.

(43) Optat. Initio lib. 2. ad Parmen.

(44) Basil. hom. 29. quæ est de pænit.

Peter was Bishop of Rome and the Roman Church was established by Paul, who had at one time visited Peter, and expressly acknowledged his independence

“ not only the author of all the Sacraments, but, also,
 “ their invisible minister; (he it is who baptises, he it is “ who absolves, although men are appointed by him the “ external ministers of the sacraments) so has he placed “ over his Church, which he governs by his invisible spi“ rit, a man to be his vicar, and the minister of his power:
 “ a visible Church requires a visible head, and, therefore,
 “ does the Saviour appoint Peter head and pastor of all
 “ the faithful, when, in the most ample terms, he commits “ to his care the feeding of all his sheep; (45) desiring that “ he, who was to succeed him, should be invested with the “ very same power of ruling and governing the entire “ Church.”

The Apostle, moreover, writing to the Corinthians, tells them, that there is but one and the same Spirit who imparts grace to the faithful, as the soul communicates life to the members of the body. (46) Exhorting the Ephesians to preserve this unity, he says, “ Be careful to keep the unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace. (47) As the human body consists of many members, animated by one soul, which gives sight to the eyes, hearing to the ears, and to the other senses, the power of discharging their respective functions; so, the mystical body of Christ, which is the Church, is composed of many faithful. The hope, to which we are called, is, also, one, as the Apostle tells us in the same place: (48) we all hope for the same consummation, eternal life. Finally, the faith, which all are bound to believe and to profess, is one: “ Let there be no schisms amongst you;” (49) and baptism, which is the seal of our solemn initiation into the Christian faith, is, also, one. (50)

Unity of the faithful how to be preserved.

Another distinctive mark of the Church is holiness, as we learn from these words of the prince of the apostles: “ You are a chosen generation, a holy nation.” (51) The Church is called holy, because she is consecrated and de-

II.
Holiness.

(45) John, xxi. 15.
 (48) Eph. iv. 4.
 (51) 1 Pet. ii. 9.

(46) 1 Cor. xii. 11, 12.
 (49) 1 Cor. i. 10

(47) Eph. iv. 3.
 (50) Eph. iv. 5.

dedicated to God; (52) as other things, such as vessels, vestments, altars, when appropriated and dedicated to the worship of God, although material, are called holy; and, in the same sense, the first-born, who were dedicated to the Most High God, were, also, called holy. (53)

It should not be deemed matter of surprise, that the Church, although numbering amongst her children many sinners, is called holy; for as those who profess any art, although they should depart from its rules, are called artists; so the faithful, although offending in many things, and violating the engagements, to the observance of which they had, solemnly, pledged themselves, are called holy, because they are made the people of God, and are consecrated to Christ, by baptism and faith. Hence, S. Paul calls the Corinthians sanctified and holy, although it is certain that amongst them there were some, whom he severely rebuked as carnal, and, also, charged with grosser crimes. (54) She is, also, to be called holy, because, as the body, she is united to her head, Christ Jesus, (55) the fountain of all holiness, from whom flow the graces of the Holy Spirit, and the riches of the divine bounty. S. Augustine interpreting these words of the prophet: "Preserve my soul because I am holy," (56) thus admirably expresses himself: "Let the body of Christ boldly say, let also, that one man, exclaiming from the ends of the earth, boldly say, with Christ his head, and under Christ his head; I am holy: for he received the grace of holiness, the grace of baptism and of remission of sins:" and a little after: "If all Christians and all the faithful, having been baptised in Christ, have put him on, according to these words of the Apostle: 'as many of you as have been baptised in Christ, have put on Christ:' (57) if they are made members of his body, and yet say they are not holy, they do an injury to their head, whose members are holy." (58) (59) Moreover, (52) Levit. xxvii. 28, 30. (55) Exod. xiii. 12. (54) 1 Cor. i. 2. 1 Cor. iii. 5.

(55) Eph. iv. 15, 16. (56) Ps. lxxxv. 2. (57) Gal. iii. 27.

(58) Eph. v. 26, 27, 30. (59) S. Aug. in Psal. lxxxv. 2.

the Church alone has the legitimate worship of sacrifice, and the salutary use of the sacraments, by which, as the efficacious instruments of divine grace, God establishes us in true holiness; so that to possess true holiness we must belong to this Church. The Church, therefore, it is clear, is holy, (60) and holy, because she is the body of Christ, by whom she is sanctified, and in whose blood she is washed. (61) (62)

The third mark of the Church is, that she is Catholic, that is, universal; and justly is she called Catholic, because, as S. Augustine says: "She is diffused by the splendor of one faith from the rising to the setting sun." (63) Unlike republics of human institution, or the conventicles of heretics, she is not circumscribed within the limits of any one kingdom, nor confined to the members of any one society of men; but embraces, within the amplitude of her love, all mankind, whether barbarians or Scythians, slaves or freemen, male or female. Therefore is it written, "Thou hast redeemed us to God in thy blood, out of every tribe, and tongue, and people, and nation, and hast made us to our God, a kingdom." (64) Speaking of the Church, David says: "Ask of me, and I will give thee the Gentiles for thy inheritance, and the utmost parts of the earth for thy possession:" (65) and also, "I will be mindful of Rahab and of Babylon knowing me:" (66) and "This man and that man is born in her." (67) To this Church, "built on the foundation of the Apostles and Prophets," (68) belong all the faithful who have existed from Adam to the present day, or who shall exist, in the profession of the true faith, to the end of time; all of whom are founded and raised upon the one corner stone, Christ, who made both one, and announced peace to them that are near, and to them that are

III.
Catholicity.

(60) Eph. i. 1-4. (61) Eph. i. 7, 13, v. 26. (62) De sanctitate Ecclesie vide Justin. mart. in utraque Apol. Tert. in Apol. Aug. contr. Fulg. c. 17. Gregor. Moral. L. 37, c. 7. (63) S. Aug. serm. 131 & 181. de temp. (64) Apoc. v. 9, 10. (65) Ps. ii. 8. (66) Ps. lxxxvi. 4. (67) Ps. lxxxvi. 5. (68) Eph. ii. 20.

afar. She is, also, called universal, because all who desire eternal salvation must cling to and embrace her, like those who entered the ark, to escape perishing in the flood. (69) This, therefore, is to be taught as a most just criterion, to distinguish the true from a false Church.

IV.
Apostoli-
city.

The true Church is, also, to be known from her origin, which she derives, under the law of grace, from the Apostles; for her doctrines are neither novel nor of recent origin, but were delivered, of old, by the Apostles, and disseminated throughout the world. Hence, no one can, for a moment, doubt that the impious opinions which heresy invents, opposed, as they are, to the doctrines taught by the Church from the days of the Apostles to the present time, are very different from the faith of the true Church. That all, therefore, may know the true Catholic Church, the Fathers, guided by the Spirit of God, added to the Creed the word "APOSTOLIC;" (70) for the Holy Ghost, who presides over the Church, governs her by no other than Apostolic men; and this Spirit, first imparted to the Apostles, has, by the infinite goodness of God, always continued in the Church. But as this one Church, because governed by the Holy Ghost, cannot err in faith or morals, it necessarily follows, that all other societies arrogating to themselves the name of Church, because guided by the spirit of darkness, are sunk in the most pernicious errors both doctrinal and moral.

Figures of the Church.

But as the figures of the Old Testament have considerable influence in exciting the minds of the faithful, and recalling to their recollection these most salutary truths, and are, principally on this account, mentioned by the Apostle, the pastor will not pass by so copious a source of instruction. Amongst these figures the ark of Noah holds a conspicuous place. It was constructed by the command of God, (71) in order, no doubt, to signify the Church, which God has so constituted, as that whoever enters her, through baptism, may be safe from all danger of eternal death, while such as are not within her, like those who were not in the ark, are overwhelmed by their own crimes.

(69) Gen. vii. 7. (70) De veræ Ecclesiæ notis vide Aug. contra epist. fundamenti, cap. 4. Tertul. lib. toto de præscript. (71) Gen. vi. 14.

Another figure presents itself in the great city of Jerusalem, (72) which, in Scripture, often means the Church. In Jerusalem only was it lawful to offer sacrifice to God, and in the Church of God only are to be found the true worship and true sacrifice which can, at all, be acceptable to God. Finally, with regard to the Church, the pastor will teach how to believe the Church can constitute an article of faith. Reason, it is true, and the senses are competent to ascertain the existence of the Church, that is, of a society of men devoted and consecrated to Jesus Christ; nor does faith seem necessary in order to understand a truth which is acknowledged by Jews and Turks: but it is from the light of faith only, not from the deductions of reason, that the mind can comprehend the mysteries, which, as has been already glanced at, and as shall be, hereafter, more fully developed, when we come to treat of the Sacrament of Orders, are contained in the Church of God. As, therefore, this Article, as well as the others, is placed above the reach, and defies the strength, of the human understanding, most justly do we confess, that human reason cannot arrive at a knowledge of the origin, privileges and dignity of the Church; these we can contemplate only with the eyes of faith.

II.

The Church to be believed, and how?

This Church was founded not by man, but by the immortal God himself, who built her upon a most solid rock: "The Highest Himself," says the Prophet, "hath founded her." (73) Hence, she is called "The inheritance of God," (74) "The people of God," (75) and the power, which she possesses, is not from man but from God. As this power, therefore, cannot be of human origin, divine faith can alone enable us to understand that the keys of the kingdom of Heaven are deposited with the Church, (76) that to her has been confided the power of remitting

The Church by whom founded.

(72) Gal. iv. 26.—Heb. xii. 22.—Deut. xii. 11, 12, 13, 14, 18-21.

(73) Ps. lxxxvi. 5. (74) Ps. ii. 8. (75) Osee, ii. 1. (76) Mat. xvi. 19.

sins ; (77) of denouncing excommunication ; (78) and of consecrating the real body of Christ ; (79) and that her children have not here a permanent dwelling, but look for one above. (80)

We believe
the Church,
not in the Church.

We are, therefore, bound to believe that there is one Holy Catholic Church ; but, with regard to the three Persons of the Holy Trinity, the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost, we not only believe them, but, also, believe IN them ; and hence, when speaking of each dogma, we make use of a different form of expression, professing to believe the holy, not IN the Holy Catholic Church ; (81) by this difference of expression, distinguishing God, the author of all things, from his works, and acknowledging ourselves debtors to the divine goodness for all these exalted benefits bestowed on the Church.

(77) John, xx. 23.

(78) Math. xviii. 17.

(79) Heb. xiii. 10.

(80) Heb. xiii. 14.

(81) Aug. serm. 151. de temp.

---

“ THE COMMUNION OF SAINTS.”

---

This Article to be carefully explained.

THE Evangelist, S. John, writing to the faithful on the divine mysteries, tells them, that he undertook to instruct them on the subject ; “ that you,” says he, “ may have fellowship with us, and our fellowship be “ with the Father and with his Son Jesus Christ.” (1) This “ fellowship” consists in the Communion of Saints, the subject of the present Article. Would, that, in its exposition, pastors imitated the zeal of S. Paul and of the other Apostles ! (2) for not only does it serve as an interpretation of the preceding Article, and is a point of doctrine productive of abundant fruit ; but it also

(1) 1 John, i. 5.

(2) Aug. in Joan. Tract. 32.

teaches the use to be made of the mysteries contained in the Creed; because the great end, to which all our researches and knowledge are to be directed, is our admission into this most august and blessed society of the saints, and our steady perseverance therein, "giving thanks, with joy, to God the Father who hath made us worthy to be partakers of the lot of the saints in light." (3)

The faithful, therefore, in the first place, are to be informed that this Article is, as it were, a sort of explanation of the preceding one, which regards the unity, sanctity and catholicity of the Church: for the unity of the Spirit, by which she is governed, establishes among all her members a community of spiritual blessings, whereas the fruit of all the Sacraments is common to all the faithful, and these Sacraments, particularly baptism, the door, as it were, by which we are admitted into the Church, (4) are so many connecting links which bind and unite them to Jesus Christ. That this Communion of Saints implies a communion of Sacraments, the Fathers declare in these words of the Creed: "I confess one baptism." (5) After baptism, the Eucharist holds the first place in reference to this communion; and after the Eucharist, the other Sacraments; for, although common to all the Sacraments, because all unite us to God, and render us partakers of him whose grace they communicate to us, this communion belongs, in a peculiar manner, to the Eucharist, by which it is directly accomplished. (6)

In what
"the Communion of Saints"
consists.

But there is, also, another communion in the Church, which demands attention: every pious and holy action, done by one, belongs to and becomes profitable to all, through charity, "which seeks not her own." (7) In this we are fortified by the concurrent testimony of S. Ambrose, who, explaining these words of the Psalmist; "I am a partaker with all them that fear thee," observes: "As we say that a member is partaker of the entire body, so

(3) Col. i. 12.

(4) Aug. l. 19, contr. Faustum. c. 11.

(5) Damasc. lib. 4. de fide orthodox. cap. 12.—1 Cor. 15.

(6) 1 Cor. x. 16.

(7) 1 Cor. xiii. 5.

A scriptural illustration of this communion.

“are we partakers with all that fear God.” (8) Therefore, has Christ taught us to say, “our,” not “my” bread;” (9) and the other petitions of that admirable prayer are equally general, not confined to ourselves alone, but directed, also, to the general interest, and salvation of all. This communication of goods is, often, very appositely illustrated in Scripture by a comparison borrowed from the members of the human body: in the human body there are many members, but though many, they, yet, constitute but one body, in which each performs its own, not all, the same functions. All do not enjoy equal dignity, or discharge functions alike useful or honourable; nor does one propose to itself its own exclusive advantage, but that of the entire body. (10) Besides, they are all so well organised and knit together, that if one suffers, the rest, naturally, sympathise with it, and if, on the contrary, one enjoys health, the feeling of pleasure is common to all. The same may be observed of the Church; although composed of various members; of different nations, of Jews, Gentiles, free-men and slaves, of rich and poor; yet all, initiated by faith, constitute one body with Christ, who is their head, To each member of the Church, is, also, assigned its own peculiar office; and as some are appointed apostles, some teachers, but all for the common good; so to some it belongs to govern and teach, to others to be subject and to obey.

This communion how far common to the wicked.

But, the advantages of so many and such exalted blessings, bestowed by Almighty God, are preeminently enjoyed by those who lead a Christian life in charity, and are just and beloved of God; whilst the dead members, that is, those who are bound in the thralldom of sin, and estranged from the grace of God, although not deprived of these advantages, so as to cease to be members of this body, are yet, as dead members, deprived of the vivifying principle which is communicated to the just and pious Christian. However, as they are in the Church, they are assisted in recovering lost grace and life by those who are animated by the Spirit of God, and are in the enjoyment of those fruits which are, no doubt, denied to such as are, entirely, cut off from the communion of the Church. (11)

(8) S. Ambr. in Ps. cxviii, serm. 8, v. 65.

(9) Math. vi. 11.

(10) 1 Cor. xii. 14.

But the gifts, which justify and endear us to God, are not alone common: "graces gratuitously granted," such as knowledge, prophecy, the gifts of tongues and of miracles, and others of the same sort, (12) are common, also, and are granted even to the wicked; not, however, for their own, but for the general good; for the building up of the Church of God. Thus, the gift of healing is given, not for the sake of him who heals, but for the sake of him who is healed. In fine, every true Christian possesses nothing which he should not consider common to all others with himself, and should, therefore, be prepared promptly to relieve an indigent fellow-creature; for he that is blessed with worldly goods, and sees his brother in want, and will not assist him, is at once convicted of not having the love of God within him. (13) Those, therefore, who belong to this holy communion, it is manifest, enjoy a sort of happiness here below, and may truly say with the Psalmist: "How lovely are thy tabernacles, O Lord of hosts! my soul longeth and fainteth for the courts of the Lord. Blessed are they who dwell in thy house, O Lord!" (14)

"Graces
"gratui-
"tously
"granted" common to them with the good.

(11) Aug. in Ps. 70. serm. 2.

(12) 1 Cor. xiii. 2.

(13) 1 John, iii. 17.

(14) Ps. lxxxiii. 2. 5.

ARTICLE X.

"THE FORGIVENESS OF SINS."

The belief of this Article necessary to salvation.

THE enumeration of this amongst the other Articles of the Creed, is alone sufficient to satisfy us, that it conveys a truth, which is not only in itself a divine mystery, but also a mystery very necessary to salvation. We have already said that, without a firm belief of all the Articles of the Creed, Christian piety is wholly unattainable. However, should a truth, which ought to bring intrinsic evidence to every mind, seem to require any other authority in its support; enough that the Redeemer, a short time previous to his ascension into heaven, "when opening the understanding of his disciples, that they might understand the Scriptures," bore testimony to this Article of the Creed, in these words: "It behoved Christ to suffer, and to rise again from the dead the third day, and that penance and remission of sins, should be preached, in his name, unto all nations, beginning at Jerusalem." (1) Let the pastor but weigh well these words, and he will readily perceive, that the Lord has laid him under a most sacred obligation, not only of making known to the faithful, whatever regards religion in general, Obligation of the pastor to explain it to the people.

(1) Luke, xxiv. 46, 47.

but also of explaining, with particular care, this article of the Creed. On this point of doctrine, then, it is the bounden duty of the pastor to teach that, not only is "forgiveness of sins" to be found in the Catholic Church, as Isaias had foretold in these words: "The people that dwell therein shall have their iniquity taken away from them;" (2) but, also, that in her resides the power of forgiving sins; (3) which power, if exercised duly, and according to the laws prescribed by our Lord, is, we are bound to believe, such as, truly to pardon and remit sins.

But, when we first make a profession of faith at the baptismal font, and are cleansed in its purifying waters, we receive this pardon entire and unqualified; so that no sin, original or actual, of commission or omission, remains to be expiated, no punishment to be endured. The grace of baptism, however, does not give exemption from all the infirmities of nature: on the contrary, contending, as we each of us have to contend, against the motions of concupiscence, which ever tempts us to the commission of sin, there is scarcely one to be found amongst us, who opposes so vigorous a resistance to its assaults, or who guards his salvation so vigilantly, as to escape all the snares of Satan. (4)

Baptism remits all sins and the punishments due to them

It being necessary, therefore, that a power of forgiving sins, distinct from that of baptism, should exist in the Church, to her were entrusted the keys of the kingdom of heaven, by which each one, if penitent, may obtain the remission of his sins, even though he were a sinner to the last day of his life. This truth is vouched by the most unquestionable authority of the Sacred Scriptures: in St. Matthew, the Lord says to Peter: "I will give to thee the keys of the kingdom of heaven; and whatever thou shalt bind on earth shall be bound also in heaven; and whatever thou shalt loose on earth, shall be loosed also

The power of the keys given to the Church.

(2) Isaias, xxxiii. 24.

(3) Aug. homil. 49, cap. 3.

(4) Trident, Sess. v. can. 5. Aug. 1, 2, de peccat. merit. c. 28.

“in heaven;” (5) and again, “whatever you shall bind
 “on earth, shall be bound also in heaven; and whatever “you shall loose on earth, shall be loosed also in heaven.”
 (6) Again, the testimony of St. John assures us that the Lord, breathing on the Apostles, said: “Receive ye the “Holy Ghost, whose sins you shall forgive, they are for“given them; and whose sins you shall retain, they are “retained.” (7) Nor is the exercise of this power restricted to particular sins, for no crime, however heinous, can be committed, which the Church has not power to forgive:
 as, also, there is no sinner, however abandoned, none however depraved, who should not confidently hope for pardon, provided he sincerely repent of his past transgressions. (8) Neither is the exercise of this power restricted to particular times; for whenever the sinner turns from his evil ways, he is not to be rejected, as we learn from the reply of our Lord to the prince of the Apostles, asking how often we should pardon an offending brother, whether seven times: “Not only seven times,” says the Redeemer, “but even seventy times seven.” (9)

This power extends to all sins.

But is confined to bishops and priests.

But if we look to its ministers, or to the manner in which it is to be exercised, the extent of this power will not appear so great; for it is a power not given to all, but to bishops and priests only; and sins can be forgiven only through the sacraments, when duly administered.—The Church has received no power otherwise to remit sin. (10)

Its inestimable value

But to raise the admiration of the faithful, for this heavenly gift, bestowed on the Church by the singular mercy of God towards us, and to make them approach its use with the more lively sentiments of devotion; the pastor will endeavour to point out the dignity and the extent of the grace which it imparts. If there be any one means

(5) Matth. xvi. 19.

(6) Matth. xviii. 18.

(7) John, xx. 23.

(8) Ambros. lib. 1. de penit. c. 1. & 2. Ang. in Ench. c. 95.

(9) Matth. xviii. 21, 22.

(10) Trid. Sess. 14. c. 6. Hier. epist. 1. post med. Ambr. de Cain et Abel, c. 4.

better calculated than another to accomplish this end, it is, carefully to show how great must be the efficacy of that which absolves from sin, and restores the unjust to a state of justification. This is, manifestly, an effect of the infinite power of God, of that same power which we believe to have been necessary to raise the dead to life, and to summon creation into existence. (11) But if it be true, as the authority of St. Augustine assures us it is, (12) that, to recall a sinner from the state of sin to that of righteousness, is even a greater work, than to create the heavens and the earth from nothing, though their creation can be no other than the effect of infinite power; it follows, that we have still stronger reason to consider the remission of sins, as an effect proceeding from the exercise of this same infinite power. With great truth, therefore, have the ancient Fathers declared, that God alone can forgive sins, and that to his infinite goodness and power alone is so wonderful a work to be referred: "I am he," says the Lord himself, by the mouth of his prophet, "I am he, who blotteth out your iniquities." (13) The remission of sins seems to bear an exact analogy to the cancelling of a pecuniary debt: as, therefore, none but the creditor can forgive a pecuniary debt, so the debt of sin, which we owe to God alone, (and our daily prayer is: "forgive us our debts,") (14) can, it is clear, be forgiven by him alone, and by none else.

But this wonderful gift, this emanation of the divine bounty, was never communicated to creatures, until God became man. Christ our Lord, although true God, was the first who, as man, received this high prerogative from his heavenly Father: "That you may know," says he to the paralytic, "that the Son of Man hath power on earth to forgive sins, rise, take up thy bed, and go into thy house." (15) As, therefore, he became man, in order

First given to Christ,
as man.

(11) Trid. Sess. 6. c. 7. & Sess. 14, 1, 2, & c. tract. 7, 2, in Joan.

(12) Aug. lib. 1. de pecc. merit. c. 23. l. 50. hom. 23. Ambr. de Abel, cap. 4.

(13) Isaias xliii. 25. (14) Matth. vi. 11. (15) Matth. ix. 6. Mark, ii. 9. 10.

to bestow on man this forgiveness of sins, he communicated this power to bishops and priests in the Church, previously to his ascension into heaven, there to sit for ever at the right hand of God. Christ, however, as we have already said, remits sin by virtue of his own authority; all others by virtue of his authority delegated to them as his ministers.

The greatest of his gifts.

If, therefore, whatever is the effect of infinite power claims our highest admiration, and commands our profoundest reverence; we must readily perceive that this gift, bestowed on the Church by the bounteous hand of Christ our Lord, is one of inestimable value. The manner, too, in which God, in the fullness of his paternal clemency, resolved to cancel the sins of the world, must powerfully excite the faithful to the contemplation of this great blessing: it was his will that our offences should be expiated in the blood of his only begotten Son, that he should voluntarily assume the imputability of our sins, and suffer a most cruel death; the just for the unjust, the innocent for the guilty. (16) When, therefore, we reflect, that “we were not redeemed with corruptible things, as gold or silver, but with the precious blood of Christ, as of a lamb unspotted and undefiled;” (17) we are naturally led to conclude that we could have received no gift more salutary than this power of forgiving sins, which proclaims the ineffable providence of God, and the excess of his love towards us.

Mortal sin, how great an evil.

This reflection must produce, in all, the most abundant spiritual fruit; for whoever offends God, even by one mortal sin, instantly forfeits whatever merits he may have previously acquired through the sufferings and death of Christ, and is entirely shut out from the gate of heaven, which, when already closed, was thrown open to all by the Redeemer’s passion. And, indeed, when this reflection enters into the mind, impossible not to feel impressed with the most anxious solicitude, and contemplating the picture of human misery which it presents to our view. But if we turn our attention to this admirable power with which God has invested his Church; and, in the firm belief of this Article, feel convinced that to every sinner is offered the means of recovering, with the assistance of divine grace, his former dignity; we can no longer resist sentiments of exceeding joy, and gladness, and exultation, and must offer immortal thanks to God. If, when labouring under some severe malady, the medicines prepared for us by the art and industry of the physician, generally become grateful and agreeable to us; how much more grateful and agreeable should those remedies prove, which the wisdom of God has established to heal our spiritual maladies, and restore us to the life of grace; remedies which, unlike the medicines used for the recovery of bodily health, bring with them, not, indeed, uncertain hope of recovery, but certain health to such as desire to be cured.

(16) 1 Pet. iii. 18.

(17) 1 Pet. i. 18, 19.

The faithful, therefore, having formed a just conception of the dignity of so excellent and exalted a blessing, should be exhorted to study, religiously, to turn it, also, to good account: for he who makes no use of what is really useful and necessary, affords a strong presumption that he despises it; particularly as, in communicating to the Church the power of forgiving sins, the Lord did so with the view, that all should have recourse to this healing remedy; for as, without baptism, no man can be cleansed from original sin, so, without the sacrament of penance, which is another means instituted by God to cleanse from sin, he who desires to recover the grace of baptism, forfeited by actual mortal guilt, cannot recover lost innocence.

The faithful should have recourse to the exercise of this power.

But here the faithful are to be admonished to guard against the danger of becoming more propense to sin, or slow to repentance, from a presumption that they can have recourse to this plenary power of forgiving sins, which, as we have already said, is unrestricted by time; for as such a propensity to sin, must, manifestly, convict them of acting injuriously and contumaciously to this

Danger of its abuse to be avoided.

divine power, and must, therefore render them unworthy of the divine mercy; so, this slowness to repentance must afford great reason to apprehend, lest overtaken by death, they may, in vain, confess their belief in the remission of sins, which their tardiness and procrastination have, deservedly, forfeited. (18)

(18) Aug. in Joan. Tract. 33. & lib. 50. homil. 41. Ambross. lib. 2. de penit. c. 1, 2. & 11,

ARTICLE XI.

"THE RESURRECTION OF THE BODY."

THAT this Article supplies a convincing proof of the truth of our faith is evinced by the circumstance of its not only being proposed, in the Sacred Scriptures, to the belief of the faithful, but also fortified by numerous arguments. This we scarcely find to be the case with regard to the other Articles: a circumstance which justifies the inference that on it, as on its most solid basis, rests our hope of salvation; for according to the reasoning of the Apostle, "If there be no resurrection of the dead, then Christ is not risen again; and if Christ be not risen again, then is our preaching vain, and your faith is also vain." (1) The zeal and assiduity, therefore, of the pastor in its exposition should not be inferior to the labour which impiety has expended in fruitless efforts to overturn its truth. That eminently important advantages flow to the faithful from the knowledge of this Article will appear from the sequel.

Importance
of this Article.

And, first, that in this Article the resurrection of mankind is called "the resurrection of the body," is a circumstance which deserves attention. The Apostles had for object, (for it is not without its object,) thus to convey an important truth, the immortality of the soul. Lest, therefore, contrary to the Sacred Scriptures, which, in many places, teach the soul to be immortal, (2) any one may imagine that it dies with the body, and that both are to be resuscitated, the Creed speaks only of "the resurrection of the body." The word, "caro," which is used in the symbol, translated literally, means "flesh:" a word, which, though of frequent occurrence in Scripture to signify the whole man, soul and body, as in Isaias, "All flesh is grass;" (3) and in S. John, "The Word was made flesh;" (4) is, however used, here, to express the body only; thus giving us to understand, that, of the two constituent parts of man, one only, that is the body, is corrupted, and returns to its original dust; whilst the soul remains incorrupt and immortal. As then, without dying, a man cannot be said to return to life; so the soul, which never dies, could not, with propriety, be said to rise again. The word body, is, also, mentioned, in order to confute the heresy of Hymeneus and Philetus, who during the life-time of the Apostle, asserted, that, whenever the Scriptures speak of the resurrection, they are to be understood to mean not the resurrection of the body, but that of the soul, by which it rises from the death of sin to the life of grace. (5) The words of this Article, therefore, clearly confute the error, and establish a real resurrection of the body.

The resurrection of mankind why called "the resurrection of the body."

(1) 1 Cor. xv. 13, 14.

Proofs of the resurrection of the body.

But it will be the duty of the pastor to illustrate this truth by examples taken from the Old and New Testaments, and from all ecclesiastical history. In the Old Testament, some were restored to life by Elias, (6) and Elizeus; (7) and in the New, besides those who were raised to life by our Lord, (8) many were resuscitated by the Apostles, and by others. (9) Their resurrection confirms the doc-

(2) Wis. ii. 23, & iii. 4.—Math. x. 28, & xxii. 31, 32.

(3) Isaias, xl. 6. (4) John, i. 14. (5) 2 Tim. ii. 17.

(6) 3 Kings, xvii. 21, 22. (7) 4 Kings, iv. 34, & xiii. 21.

(8) Math. ix. 25.—Luke, vii. 14, 15.—John, xi. 43, 44.

(9) Acts, ix, 40, and xx. 10.

trine conveyed by this Article, for believing that many were recalled from death to life, we are also naturally led to believe the general resurrection of all; and the principal fruit which we should derive from these miracles is to yield to this Article our most unhesitating belief. To pastors, ordinarily conversant with the Sacred Volumes, many Scripture proofs will, at once, present themselves; but, in the Old Testament, the most conspicuous are those afforded by Job when he says, "that in his flesh he shall see God;" (10) and by Daniel when, speaking of those "who sleep in the dust of the earth," he says, "some shall awake to eternal life, others to eternal reproach." (11) In the New Testament the principal passages are those of S. Matthew, which record the disputation which our Lord held with the Sadducees; (12) and those of the Evangelists which relate to the last judgment. (13) To these we may also add, the accurate reasoning of the Apostle, on the subject, in his epistles to the Corinthians, (14) and Thessalonians. (15)

But, incontrovertibly as is this truth established by faith, it will, notwithstanding, be of material advantage to show from analogy and reason, that what faith proposes to our belief, nature acknowledges to accord with her laws, and reason with her dictate. To one, asking how the dead should rise again, the Apostle answers; "Foolish man! that which thou sowest is not quickened, except it die first; and that which thou sowest, thou sowest not the body that shall be; but bare grain as of wheat, or of some of the rest; but God giveth it a body as he will:" and a little after, "It is sown in corruption, it shall rise in incorruption." (16) S. Gregory, calls our attention to many other arguments of analogy tending to the same effect: "The sun, says he, "is every day withdrawn from our eyes, as it were, by dying, and is again recalled, as it were, by rising again: trees

Illustrated
by comparisons.

(10) Job, xix. 26. (11) Dan. xii. 2. (12) Math. xxii. 31. /

(13) John, v. 25.—xxviii. 29. (14) 1 Cor. 15. (15) 1 Thes. iv. 13.

(16) 1 Cor. xv. 36, 37, 38-42.

“lose, and again, as it were, by a resurrection, resume “their verdure : seeds die by putrefaction, and rise again
 “by germination.” (17)

Proved by arguments from reason

The reasons, also, adduced by ecclesiastical writers, are well calculated to establish this truth. In the first place, as the soul is immortal, and has, as part of man, a natural propensity to be united to the body, its perpetual separation from it must be considered contrary to nature. But as that which is contrary to nature, and offers violence to her laws, cannot be permanent, it appears congruous that the soul should be reunited to the body ; and, of course, that the body should rise again. This argument, our Saviour himself employed, when, in his disputation with the Sadducees, he deduced the resurrection of the body from the immortality of the soul. (18)

In the next place, as an all-just God holds out punishments to the wicked, and rewards to the good, and as very many of the former depart this life unpunished for their crimes, and of the latter unrewarded for their virtues ; the soul should be reunited to the body, in order, as the partner of her crimes, or the companion of her virtues, to become a sharer in her punishments or her rewards. (19) This view of the subject has been admirably treated by S. Chrysostom in his homily to the people of Antioch. (20) To this effect, the Apostle speaking of the resurrection, says, “If in this life only, we have “hope in Christ, we are of all men the most miserable.” (21) These words of S. Paul cannot be supposed to refer to the misery of the soul, which, because immortal, is capable of enjoying happiness in a future life, were the body not to rise ; but to the whole man ; for, unless the body receive the due rewards of its labours, those, who, like the Apostles, endured so many afflictions and calamities in this life, should necessarily be “the most miserable of “men.” On this subject the Apostle is much more ex-

(17) S. Gregor. lib. 14. moral. c. 28, 29, 30. (18) Math. xxii. 23.

(19) Damasc. lib. 4. de fide orthod. cap. 28. Ambros. lib. de fide resurr.

(20) S. Chrysostom. homil. 49 and 50. (21) 1 Cor. xv. 19.

plicit in his epistle to the Thessalonians: "We glory in
"you," says he, "in the Churches of God, that you may "be counted worthy of the kingdom of God, for which,
"also, you suffer: seeing it is a just thing with God to "repay tribulation to them that trouble you; and to you "who are troubled, rest with us, when the Lord Jesus
"shall be revealed from heaven with the angels of his "power; in a flame of fire, yielding vengeance to them "who know not God, and who obey not the Gospel of "our Lord Jesus Christ." (22)

Again, whilst the soul is separated from the body, man cannot enjoy the consummation of happiness, replete with every good; for as a part, separated from the whole, is imperfect, the soul separated from the body must be imperfect; and, therefore, that nothing may be wanting to fill up the measure of its happiness, the resurrection of the body is necessary. By these, and similar arguments, the pastor will be able to instruct the faithful in this Article.

He should also, carefully explain, from the Apostle, who are to be raised to life. Writing to the Corinthians, S. Paul says, "as in Adam all die, so, also, in Christ
"all should be made alive." (23) Good and bad, then, without distinction, shall all rise from the dead, although the condition of all shall not be the same—those who have done good, shall rise to the resurrection of life; and those who have done evil, to the resurrection of judgment.

The resurrection of all not the same.

When we say "all," we mean those who shall have died before the day of judgment, as well as those who shall then die. That the Church acquiesces in the opinion which asserts that all, without distinction, shall die, and that this opinion is more consonant to truth, is recorded by the pen of S. Jerome, (24) whose authority is fortified by that of S. Augustine. (25) Nor does the Apostle, in his epistle to the Thessalonians, dissent from this doctrine; when he says; "The dead who are in Christ shall rise

All shall die to rise again.

(22) 2 Thess. i. 4. (23) 1 Cor. xv. 22. (24) S. Hieron. epist. 152;

(25) August. de Civit. Dei, lib. xi. c. 20.

“ first, then we who are alive, who are left, shall be taken up together with them in the clouds to meet Christ, into the air.” (26) S. Ambrose explaining these words says, “ In that very taking up, death shall anticipate, as it were by a deep sleep, and the soul, having gone forth from the body, shall instantly return; for those who are alive, when taken up, shall die, that, coming to the Lord, they may receive their souls from his presence; because in his presence they cannot be dead.” (27) This opinion is fortified by the authority of S. Augustine in his book on the City of God. (28)

All shall rise in their own bodies.

But, as it is of vital importance to be fully convinced that the identical body, which belongs to each one of us during life, shall, though corrupt, and dissolved into its original dust, be raised up again to life; this, too, is a subject which demands accurate explanation from the pastor. It is a truth conveyed by the Apostle in these words; “ This corruptible must put on incorruption;” (29) emphatically designating by the word “ this,” the identity of our bodies. It is also, evident from the prophecy of Job, than which nothing can be more express: “ I shall see my God,” says he, “ whom I myself shall see, and mine eyes behold, and not another.” (30) Finally, if we only consider the very definition of resurrection, we cannot, reasonably, entertain a shadow of doubt on the subject; for resurrection, as Damascene defines it, is “ a return to the state from which one has fallen.” (31) Finally, if we consider the arguments by which we have already established a future resurrection, every doubt on the subject must, at once, disappear. We have said that the body is to rise again, that “ every one may receive the proper things of the body, according as he hath done, whether it be good or evil.” (32) Man is, therefore, to rise again, in the same body with which he served God, or was a slave to the devil; that in the same body

(26) 1 Thess. iv. 15, 16. (27) In 1. epist. ad Thess. c. 4.

(28) Lib. xx. c. 20. (29) 1 Cor. xv. 53. (30) Job, xix. 26, 27.

(31) Damasc. lib. iv. de fid. orthod. 28. (32) 2 Cor. v. 10.

he may experience rewards, and a crown of victory, or endure the severest punishments, and never ending torments.

Not only will the body rise, but it will rise endowed with whatever constitutes the reality of its nature, and adorns and ornaments man; according to these admirable words of S. Augustine: "There shall, then, be no deformity of body; if some have been overburdened with flesh, they shall not resume its entire weight: whatever shall exceed the proper habit shall be deemed superfluous. On the other hand, should the body be wasted by the malignity of disease, or the debility of old age, or be emaciated from any other cause, it shall be recruited by the divine power of Jesus Christ, who will not only restore the body, but repair whatever it shall have lost through the wretchedness of this life."(33) In another place he says; "Man shall not resume his former hair, but shall be adorned with such as will become him, according to these words of the Redeemer, 'The very hairs of your head are all numbered:'(34) God will restore them according to his wisdom."(35)

In what state the bodies shall rise.

One great error & constantly leading to mischief is the human mind attempting to explain matters above human comprehension, and impossible for man to know before, measure, and understand.

The members, because essential to the integrity of human nature, shall all be restored: the blind from nature or disease, the lame, the maimed, and the paralysed shall rise again with perfect bodies: otherwise the desires of the soul, which so strongly incline it to a union with the body, should be far from satisfied; and yet we are convinced, that, in the resurrection, these desires shall be fully realized. Besides, the resurrection, like the creation, is clearly to be numbered amongst the principal works of God. As, therefore, at the creation, all things came perfect from the hand of God; so, at the resurrection shall all things be perfectly restored by the same omnipotent hand.

None shall rise maimed.

(33) S. Aug. l. xxii. de Civit. Dei, c. 19, 20, 21. & Ench. c. 86, 87, 88, 89. Hierm. Epist. 59 & 61.

(34) Luke, xii. 7. (35) S. Aug. Ench. c. lxxxvi.

The scars of the martyrs shall remain to their glory: the members of the wicked shall be restored, to increase their punishment.

These observations are not to be restricted to the bodies of the martyrs; of whom S. Augustine says: "As the mutilation which they suffered should prove a deformity, they shall rise with all their members; otherwise those who were beheaded should rise without a head. The scars, however, which they received, shall remain, shining like the wounds of Christ, with a brilliancy far more resplendant than that of gold and of precious stones."(36) The wicked, too, shall rise with all their members, although they should have been lost through their own fault; for the greater the number of members which they shall have, the greater shall be their torments; and, therefore, this restoration of members, will serve to increase, not their happiness, but their misery. Merit or demerit is ascribed not to the members, but to the person to whose body they are united: to those, therefore, who shall have done penance, they shall be restored as sources of reward; and to those who shall have contemned it, as instruments of punishment. If the pastor bestow mature consideration on these things, he can never want words or ideas to move the hearts of the faithful, and enkindle in them the flame of piety; that, considering the troubles of this life, they may look forward, with eager expectation, to that blessed glory of the resurrection which awaits the just.

The bodies of the good and of the bad shall rise immortal.

It now remains to explain to the faithful, in an intelligible manner, how the body, when raised from the dead, although substantially the same, shall be different in many respects. To omit other points, the great difference between the state of all bodies when risen from the dead, and what they had previously been, is, that, before the resurrection, they were subject to dissolution; but, when reanimated, they shall all, without distinction of good and bad, be invested with immortality. This admirable restoration of nature is the result of the glorious victory of Christ over death; as it is written, "He shall cast

This, the result of the victory of Christ over death.

“death down headlong for ever:” (37) and, “O Death! I will be thy death;” (38) words which the Apostle thus explains, “and the enemy death shall be destroyed last;” (39) and S. John, also, says, “Death shall be no more.” (40) There is a peculiar congruity in the superiority of the merits of Christ, by which the power of death is overthrown, (41) to the fatal effects of the sin of Adam; and, it is consonant to the divine justice, that the good enjoy endless felicity; whilst the wicked, condemned to everlasting torments, “shall seek death, and shall not find it; shall desire to die, and death shall fly from them.” (42) Immortality, therefore, will be common to the good and to the bad.

Moreover, the bodies of the saints, when resuscitated, shall be distinguished by certain transcendant endowments, which will ennoble them far beyond their former condition. The qualities of a glorified body. Amongst these endowments, four are specially mentioned by the Fathers, which they infer from the doctrine of S. Paul, and which are called “qualities.” (43)

The first is “impassibility” which shall place them beyond the reach of pain or inconvenience of any sort. Impassibility. Neither the piercing severity of cold, nor the glowing intensity of heat can affect them, nor can the impetuosity of waters hurt them. “It is sown,” says the Apostle, “in corruption, it shall rise in incorruption.” (44) This quality, the schoolmen call impassibility, not incorruption; in order to distinguish it as a property peculiar to a glorified body. The bodies of the damned, though incorruptible, shall not be impassible: they shall be capable of experiencing heat and cold and of feeling pain.

The next quality is “brightness,” by which the bodies of the saints shall shine like the sun; according to the words of our Lord recorded in the Gospel of S. Matthew: Brightness. “The just shall shine as the sun, in the kingdom of their

(37) Isa. xxv. 8.      (38) Osee, xiii. 14.      (39) 1 Cor. xv. 26.

(40) Apoc. ii. 4.      (41) Heb. ii. 14.      (42) Apoc. ix. 6.

(43) De his Aug. Serm. 99. de temp. Ambr. in com. in 1. ad Cor. c. 15.

(44) 1 Cor. xv. 42.

“Father.” (45) To remove the possibility of doubt on the subject, he left us a splendid exemplification of this glorious quality in his transfiguration. (46) This quality the Apostle sometimes calls glory, sometimes brightness; “He will reform the body of our lowliness, made like to “the body of his glory:” (47) and again, “It is sown in “dishonour, it shall rise in glory.” (48) Of this glory the Israelites beheld some image in the desert; when the face of Moses, after he had been in the presence of, and had conversed with God, shone with such resplendant lustre that they could not look on it. (49) This brightness is a sort of refulgence reflected from the supreme happiness of the soul—an emanation of the bliss which it enjoys, and which beams through the body. Its communication is analogous to the manner in which the soul itself is rendered happy, by a participation of the happiness of God. Unlike the former, this quality is not common to all in the same degree. All the bodies of the saints shall, it is true, be equally impassible: but the brightness of all shall not be the same: for, according to the Apostle; “One is the “glory of the sun, another the glory of the moon, and “another the glory of the stars: for star differeth from “star in glory: so also, is the resurrection of the “dead.” (50)

Agility.

To this quality is united that of “agility,” as it is called, by which the body shall be freed from the burden that now presses it down; and shall require a capability of moving with the utmost facility and celerity, wherever the soul pleases, as S. Augustine teaches in his book on the City of God, (51) and S. Jerome on Isaias. (52) Hence these words of the Apostle; “It is sown in weak“ness, it shall rise in power.” (53)

Subtilty.

Another quality is that of “subtilty;” a quality which

(45) Math. xiii. 43. (46) Math. xvii. 2. (47) Philip. iii. 21.

(48) 1 Cor. xv. 45, (49) Exod. xxxiv. 29, & 2 Cor. iii. 7.

(50) 1 Cor. xv. 41, 42.

(51) Aug. de Civ. Dei, lib. xiii. c. 18 & 20. & lib. xxii. c. 11.

(52) Hieron. in Isaiam, cap. 40. (53) 1 Cor. xv. 45.

subjects the body to the absolute dominion of the soul, and to an entire obedience to her controul: as we infer from these words of the Apostle; "It is sown a natural body, it shall rise a spiritual body." (54) These are the principal points on which the pastor will dwell in the exposition of this Article.

But in order that the faithful may know what fruit they are to reap from a knowledge of so many and such exalted mysteries; the pastor will proclaim, in the first place, that to God, who has hidden these things from the wise, and made them known to little ones, we owe a debt of boundless gratitude! How many men, eminent for wisdom and learning, who never arrived at a knowledge of this truth? Aware, then, of his special predilection towards us in making known to us this sublime truth—to us who could never aspire to such knowledge—it becomes our duty to pour forth our gratitude in unceasing praises of his goodness and clemency.

Advantages of deep meditation on this Article.
I.

Another important advantage to be derived from deep reflection on this Article is, that in it we shall experience a balm, to heal the wounded spirit, when we mourn the loss of those who were endeared to us by friendship or connected with us by blood; a balm which the Apostle himself administered to the Thessalonians when writing to them "concerning those who slept." (55)

II.

But in all our afflictions and calamities the thought of a future resurrection must bring relief to the troubled heart; as we learn from the example of Job, who supported himself under an accumulation of afflictions and of sorrows, solely by the hope of, one day, rising from the grave, and beholding the Lord his God. (56)

III.

It must also, prove a powerful incentive to the faithful to use every exertion to lead lives of rectitude and integrity, unsullied by the defilement of sin; for, if they reflect, that those riches of inconceivable value, which God will bestow on his faithful servants after the resurrection,

IV.

(54) 1 Cor. xv. 44. (55) 1 Thess. iv. 13. (56) Job, xix. 26.

V. are now proposed to them as rewards ; they must find in the reflection the strongest inducement to lead virtuous and holy lives. On the other hand, nothing will have greater effect in subduing the passions, and withdrawing souls from sin, than frequently to remind the sinner of the miseries and torments with which the justice of God will visit the reprobate, who, on the last day, shall rise to the resurrection of judgment. (57)

(57) John, v. 29.

ARTICLE XII.

---

“LIFE EVERLASTING.”

---

THE wisdom of the Apostles, our guides in religion, suggested to them the propriety of giving this Article the last place in the Creed, which is the summary of our faith; first, because, after the resurrection of the body, the only object of the Christian's hope, is the reward of everlasting life; and secondly, in order that perfect happiness, embracing, as it does, the fulness of all good, may be ever present to our minds, and absorb all our thoughts and affections. In his instructions to the faithful, the pastor, therefore, will unceasingly endeavour to light up in their souls, an ardent desire of the proposed rewards of eternal life; that thus they may look upon whatever difficulties they may experience in the practice of religion, as light and even agreeable, and may yield a more willing and an entire obedience to God.

Why the last Article of the creed.

But as many mysteries lie concealed under the words, which are here used, to declare the happiness reserved for us; they are to be explained in such a manner as to make them intelligible to all, as far as their respective capacities will allow. The faithful, therefore, are to be informed, that the words, “life everlasting,” signify not only that continuity of existence, to which the devils and the wicked

Its meaning.

are consigned, but also, that perpetuity of happiness which is to satisfy the desires of the blessed. In this sense they were understood by the "ruler," mentioned in the Gospel, when he asked the Redeemer: "Lord! what shall I do to "possess everlasting life?" (1) As if he had said, what shall I do, in order to arrive at the enjoyment of everlasting happiness? In this sense they are understood in the Sacred Volumes, as is clear from a reference to many passages of Scripture. (2) The supreme happiness of the blessed is thus designated, principally to exclude the notion that it consists in corporeal and transitory things, which cannot be everlasting. (3)

Why called life everlasting.

The word "blessedness" is insufficient to express the idea, particularly as there have not been wanting men, who, inflated with the vain opinions of a false philosophy, would place the supreme good in sensible things; but these grow old and perish, whilst supreme happiness is defined by no limits of time. Nay, more, so far is the enjoyment of the goods of this life from conferring real happiness, that, on the contrary, he who is captivated by a love of the world, is farthest removed from true happiness: for it is written: "Love not the world, nor the things that are "in the world; if any one love the world, the love of the "Father is not in him:" (4) and a little after, "The "world passeth away and the concupiscence thereof." (5) The pastor, therefore, will be careful to impress these truths on the minds of the faithful, that they may learn to despise earthly things, and to know that, in this world, in which we are not citizens, but sojourners, (6) happiness is not to be found. Yet, even here below, we may be said, with truth, to be happy in hope; "if denying ungod-
"liness and worldly desires, we live soberly, and justly,
"and godly in this world; looking for the blessed hope
"and coming of the great God, and our Saviour Jesus

(1) Luke, xviii. 18.

(2) Matt. xix. 29, & xxv. 46; Rom. vi. 22.

(3) Aug. de Civ. Dei, l. 19. c. 11.

(4) 1 John, ii. 15.

(5) 1 John, ii. 17.

(6) 1 Pet. ii. 11.

“Christ.” (7) Many “who seemed to themselves wise,” (8) not understanding these things, and imagining that happiness was to be sought in this life, became fools and the victims of the most deplorable calamities.

These words, “Life everlasting,” also teach us that, True happiness must be everlasting. contrary to the false notions of some, happiness once attained can never be lost. Happiness is an accumulation of good without admixture of evil, which, as it fills up the measure of man’s desires, must be eternal. He who is blessed with its enjoyment must earnestly desire its continuance, and, were it transient and uncertain, should necessarily experience the torture of continual apprehension. (9)

The intensity of the happiness which the just enjoy in their celestial country, and its utter incomprehensibility to all but to themselves alone, are sufficiently conveyed by the very words which are here used to express that happiness. The happiness of the just intense and incomprehensible; When, to express any idea, we make use of a word common to many others, we do so, because we have no proper term by which to express it clearly and fully. When, therefore, to express happiness, we adopt words which are equally applicable to all who are to live forever, as to the blessed; we are led to infer that the idea presents to the mind something too great, too exalted, to be expressed fully by a proper term. True, the happiness of heaven is expressed in Scripture by a variety of other words, such as, the “Kingdom of God,” (10) “of Christ,” (11) “of heaven,” (12) “Paradise,” (13) “the Holy City,” “the New Jerusalem,” (14) “my Father’s house;” (15) yet it is clear that none of these appellations is sufficient to convey an adequate idea of its greatness.

The pastor, therefore, will not neglect the opportunity a powerful incentive to virtue. which this Article affords, of inviting the faithful to the

(7) Tit. ii. 11, 13. (8) Rom. i. 22.
 (9) Vid. Aug. de Civ. Dei, lib. 12. cap. 20. lib. 22. c. 29, & 30. de libero arbit. cap. 25. de verb. Domini, serm. 64, & serm. 37, de Sanctis.
 (10) Act. xiv. 22. (11) 2 Pet. i. 11. (12) Matth. v. 3. 20.
 (13) Luke. xxiii. 43. (14) Apoc. xxi. 10. (15) John, xiv. 2.

practice of piety, of justice, and of all the other virtues, by holding out to them such ample rewards as are announced in the words "life everlasting." Amongst the blessings which we instinctively desire, life is, confessedly, esteemed one of the greatest: by it principally, when we say "life everlasting," do we express the happiness of the just. If, then, during this short and chequered period of our existence, which is subject to so many and such various vicissitudes, that it may be called death rather than life, there is nothing to which we so fondly cling nothing which we love so dearly as life; with what ardour of soul, with what earnestness of purpose, should we not seek that eternal happiness, which, without alloy of any sort, presents to us the pure and unmixed enjoyment of every good? The happiness of eternal life is, as defined by the Fathers, "an exemption from all evil, and an enjoyment of all good." (16) That it is an exemption from all evil, the Scriptures declare in the most explicit terms. "they shall no more hunger and thirst," says S. John. "neither shall the sun fall on them, nor any heat;" (17) and again, "God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes: and death shall be no more, nor mourning, nor crying, nor sorrow, shall be any more, for the former things are past away." (18) But the glory of the blessed shall be without measure, and their solid joys and pleasures without number. The mind is incapable of comprehending or conceiving the greatness of this glory: it can be known only by its fruition, that is, by entering into the joy of the Lord, and thus satisfying fully the desires of the human heart. Although, as S. Augustine observes, it would seem easier to enumerate the evils from which we shall be exempt, than the goods and the pleasures which we shall enjoy; (19) yet we must endeavour to explain, briefly and clearly, those things which are

(16) Chrysost. in 50. cap. ad Theod. lapsum. Aug. de Civ. Dei. lib. 22. cap. 30. Anselm. epist. 2. et de similit. c. 47. et seq.

(17) Apoc. vii. 16. (18) Apoc. xxi. 4.

(19) Serm. vi. 4. de verb. Domini et de Symb. ad Catech. lib. 3.

calculated to inflame the faithful with a desire of arriving at the enjoyment of this supreme felicity.

Before we proceed to this explanation, we shall make use of a distinction, which has been sanctioned by the most eminent writers on religion; it is, that there are two sorts of goods, one an ingredient, another an accompaniment of happiness. The former, therefore, for sake of perspicuity, they have called essential; the latter, accessory. Solid happiness, which we may designate by the common appellation, "essential," consists in the vision of God, and the enjoyment of his eternal beauty who is the source and principle of all goodness and perfection: "This," says our Lord, "is eternal life, that they may know thee, the only true God, and Jesus Christ whom thou hast sent." (20) These sentiments S. John seems to interpret, when he says; "Dearly beloved! We are now the sons of God; and it hath not yet appeared what we shall be. We know that when he shall appear, we shall be like to him: because we shall see him, as he is." (21) These words inform us that the happiness of heaven consists of two things: to see God such as he is in his own nature and substance, and to be made like unto him.

Happiness two-fold, essential and accessory

Those who enjoy the beatific vision, whilst they retain their own nature, shall assume a certain admirable and almost divine form, so as to seem gods rather than men; and why they assume this form, becomes at once intelligible, if we only reflect that every thing is known from its essence, or from its resemblance and external appearance: but, as nothing resembles God, so as to afford, by that resemblance, a perfect knowledge of him, no creature can behold his divine nature and essence, unless admitted by the Deity to a sort of union with himself; according to these words of S. Paul: "We now see thro' a glass in a dark manner, but then face to face." (22) The words, "in a dark manner," S. Augustine understands to mean

Effect of the beatific vision on the blessed.

How communicated to them.

(20) John, xvii. 3. (21) 1 John, iii. 2. (22) 1 Cor. i 12.

that we see him in a resemblance calculated to convey to us some faint notion of the Deity. (23) This, S. Denis clearly shows, when he says: "The things above cannot be known by comparison with the things below; for, the essence and substance of any thing incorporeal must be known, thro' the medium of that which is corporeal: particularly as a resemblance must be less gross and more spiritual, than that which it represents, as we know, from universal experience. Since, therefore, we can find nothing created, equally pure and spiritual with God, no resemblance can enable us, perfectly to comprehend the divine essence." (24) Moreover, all created things are circumscribed within certain limits of perfection; but God is circumscribed by no limits, and therefore nothing created can reflect his immensity. The only means, therefore, of arriving at a knowledge of the divine essence, is that God unite himself in some sort to us; and, after an incomprehensible manner, elevate our minds to a higher degree of perfection, and thus render us capable of contemplating the beauty of his nature. This the light of his glory will accomplish: illumined by its splendour, we shall see God, the true light, in his own light. (25) The blessed always see God present, and by this greatest and most exalted of gifts, "being made partakers of the divine nature," (26) they enjoy true and solid happiness. Our belief of this truth should therefore be animated by an assured hope of one day arriving, thro' the divine goodness, at the same happy term; according to these words of the Nicene Creed: "I expect the resurrection of the dead, and the life of the world to come." These are divine truths which defy the powers of human language, and mock the limits of human comprehension. We may, however, trace some resemblance of this happy change in sensible objects, for as iron, when acted on by fire, becomes ignited, and, whilst it is substantially the same, seems changed into

An illustration of this truth.

(23) Aug. lib. 15. de Civ. Dei, c. 9. (24) Dionys. Areop. de divin. nom. c. 1.

(25) Ps. xxxv. 10.

(26) 2 Pet. i. 4.

fire, which is a different substance; so the blessed, who are admitted into the glory of heaven, and who burn with a love of God, although they cease not to be the same, are yet affected in such a manner, as that they may be said with truth to differ more from the inhabitants of this earth, than iron, when ignited, differs from itself when cold.

To say all in a few words: supreme and absolute happiness, which we call essential, consists in the possession of God; for what can he want to consummate his happiness, who possesses God, the fountain of all good, the fullness of all perfection? In what essential happiness consists.

To this happiness, however, are appended certain gifts, which are common to all the blessed, and which, because more within the reach of human comprehension, are generally found more effectual in exciting the mind and inflaming the heart. (27) These the Apostle seems to have in view, when, in his epistle to the Romans, he says: "Glory, and honor, and peace, to every one that worketh good." (28) The blessed shall enjoy glory, not only that glory which we have already shown to constitute essential happiness, or to be its inseparable accompaniment; but also that glory which consists in the clear and comprehensive knowledge, which each of the blessed shall have of the singular and exalted dignity of his companions in glory. The accessories of happiness.

But how distinguished must not that honor be which is conferred by God himself, who no longer calls them servants but friends, (29) brethren, (30) and sons of God! (31) Hence, the Redeemer will address his elect in these words, which at once breathe infinite love, and bespeak the highest honor: "Come ye blessed of my Father, possess you the kingdom prepared for you." (32) Justly then, may we exclaim with the psalmist: "Thy friends, O God! are made exceedingly honorable." (33) They shall also receive the highest praise from Christ the The first.

(27) Aug. de Civ. Dei, lib. xxii. c. 30. (28) Rom ii. 10. (29) John, xv. 14.

(30) Matth. xii. 49. (31) Rom. viii. 15. 16. (32) Matth. xxv. 34.

(33) Ps. cxxxviii. 17.

Lord, in presence of his Heavenly Father and before the assembled hosts of heaven. And, if nature has interwoven in the human heart, the desire of honor, particularly when conferred by men eminent for wisdom, who are, therefore, the most authoritative vouchers of merit; what an accession of glory to the blessed, to evince towards each other the highest veneration?

The third. To enumerate all the delights with which the souls of the blessed shall be incriated, would be an endless task: we cannot even conceive them in idea: with this truth, however, the minds of the faithful should be deeply impressed, that the happiness of the saints is full to overflowing, of all those pleasures which can be enjoyed or even desired in this life, whether they regard the powers of the mind or the perfection of the body: a consummation more exalted in the manner of its accomplishment, than, to use the words of the Aposle, "eye hath seen, ear heard, or the heart of man conceived." (34)—

The fourth. The body, which was before gross and material, having put off mortality, and now refined and spiritualised, shall

The fifth. no longer stand in need of corporal nutriment: whilst the soul shall be satiated with that eternal food of glory, which the master of that great feast will minister, in

The sixth. person, to all. (35) Who will desire rich apparel or royal robes, where these appendages of human grandeur shall be superseded; and all shall be clothed with immortality and splendor, and adorned with a crown of imperishable glory!

Theseventh And, if the possession of a spacious and magnificent mansion forms an ingredient in human happiness, what more spacious, what more magnificent, can imagination picture, than the mansion of heaven, illumined, as it is throughout, with the blaze of glory which encircles the Godhead! Hence, the prophet, contemplating the beauty of this dwelling place, and burning with the desire of reaching those mansions of bliss, exclaims: "How lovely are thy tabernacles, O Lord of hosts! my soul longeth and fainteth for the courts of the Lord: my heart and

(34) 1 Cor. ii. 9.

(35) Luke xii. 57.

“ my flesh have rejoiced in the living God.” (36) That the faithful may be all filled with the same sentiments, and utter the same language, should be the object of the pastor’s most earnest desires ; as it should be of his zealous labours. “ In my Father’s house,” says our Lord, “ there are many mansions,” (37) in which shall be distributed rewards of greater and of less value, according to each one’s deserts ; for “ He who soweth sparingly, shall reap sparingly : and he who soweth in blessings, shall also “ reap of blessings.” (38)

The pastor, therefore, will not only move the faithful to a desire of arriving at this happiness ; but will frequently remind them that, infallibly to attain it, they must possess the virtues of faith and charity ; they must persevere in the exercise of prayer, and the salutary use of the sacraments, and in a faithful discharge of all the good offices which spring from fraternal charity. Thus, through the mercy of God, who has prepared that blessed glory for those who serve him, shall be one day fulfilled the words of the prophet : “ My people shall sit in the beauty of peace, and in the tabernacles of confidence and of wealth thy rest.” (39)

How to arrive at the enjoyment of this happiness.

(36) Ps. lxxxiii. 1. 2.
(38) 2 Cor. ix. 6.

(37) John, xiv. 2.
(39) Isaias, xxxii. 18.

THE CATECHISM
OF
THE COUNCIL OF TRENT.

---

PART II.
ON THE SACRAMENTS.

---

A knowledge of the Sacraments particularly necessary.

IF the exposition of every part of the doctrines of Christianity demands knowledge and assiduity on the part of the pastor, that of the Sacraments, which, by the ordinance of God, are a necessary means of salvation, and a plenteous source of spiritual advantage, demands, in a special manner, the application of his combined talents and industry. (1) Thus, by accurate and frequent instruction, shall the faithful be enabled to approach worthily and with salutary effect, these inestimable and most holy institutions; and the pastor will not depart from the rule laid down in the divine prohibition: "Give not that which is holy to dogs: neither cast ye your pearls before swine." (2)

Different meanings of the word
"Sacrament."

As then we are about to treat of the Sacraments in general, it is proper to begin, in the first place, by explaining the force and meaning of the word "Sacrament," and removing all ambiguity as to its signification, in order the more easily to comprehend the sense in which it is

(1) Vid. Concil. Trid. Sess. 17.

(2) Matth. vii. 6.

here used. The faithful, therefore, are to be informed that the word Sacrament is differently understood by sacred and profane writers; and to point out its different acceptations will be found pertinent to our present purpose. By some it has been used to express the obligation, which arises from an oath, pledging to the performance of some service; and hence, the oath, by which soldiers promise military service to the state, has been called a military Sacrament. Amongst profane writers, this seems to have been the most ordinary meaning of the word. But, by the Latin Fathers, who have written on theological subjects, the word Sacrament is used to signify a sacred thing which lies concealed. The Greeks, to express the same idea, made use of the word "Mystery." This, we understand to be the meaning of the word, when, in the epistle to the Ephesians, it is said: "that he might make known to us the mystery (sacramentum) of his will;" (3) and to Timothy, "great is the mystery (sacramentum) of godliness;" (4) and in the book of Wisdom: "They knew not the secrets (sacramenta) of God." (5) In these and many other passages the word Sacrament, it will be perceived, signifies nothing more than a holy thing that lies concealed. The Latin Fathers, therefore, deemed the word no inappropriate term to express a sensible sign, which, at once, communicates grace to the soul of the receiver, and declares, and, as it were, places before the eyes the grace which it communicates. S. Gregory, however, is of opinion that it is called a Sacrament, because through its instrumentality, the divine power secretly operates our salvation, under the veil of sensible things. (6)

Let it not, however, be supposed that the word Sacrament is of recent ecclesiastical usage. Whoever peruses the writings of S. S. Jerome, (7) and Augustine, (8) will at once perceive, that ancient ecclesiastical writers made Sacrament, a word of ancient ecclesiastical usage.

(3) Eph. i. 9. (4) 1 Tim. iii. 16. (5) Wisd. ii. 22.
 (6) D. Greg. in 1. Reg. cap. 16. vers. 15.
 (7) Vid. Hieron. in Amos. c. i. v. 1. & Iren. c. i. v. 15.
 (8) Aug. in Joan. Tract. 80. in fine, et contra Faust. lib. 19. c. 11. Cypr. epist. 15. et lib. de bapt. Christ.

I.

II.

III.

frequent use of the word "Sacrament," and sometimes also of the word "symbol," or "mystical or sacred sign," to designate that of which we here speak. Thus much will suffice in explanation of the word Sacrament: and indeed, what we have said applies equally to the Sacraments of the old law: but superseded, as they have been, by the gospel law and grace, instruction regarding them were superfluous.

Definition of a Sacrament.

Besides the meaning of the word, which alone has hitherto engaged our attention, the nature and efficacy of that which it expresses demand our particular enquiry; and the faithful must be taught what constitutes a Sacrament. That the Sacraments are amongst the means of attaining righteousness and salvation, cannot be questioned: but of the many definitions, each of them sufficiently appropriate, which may serve to explain the nature of a Sacrament, there is none more comprehensive, none more perspicuous, than that of S. Augustine: a definition which has since been adopted by all scholastic writers: "A Sacrament," says he, "is a sign of a sacred thing:" or in other words of the same import; "A Sacrament is "a visible sign of an invisible grace, instituted for our "justification." (9)

Definition
explained.

The more fully to develope this definition, the pastor will explain it in all its parts. He will first observe, that sensible objects are of two sorts; some invented as signs, others not invented as signs, but existing absolutely and in themselves. To the latter class, almost every object in nature may be said to belong; to the former, spoken and written languages, military standards, images, trumpets, and a multiplicity of other things of the same sort, too numerous to be mentioned. Thus, with regard to words; take away their power of expressing ideas, and you seem to take away the only reason for their invention. They are, therefore, properly called signs: for, according to S. Augustine, a sign, besides what it presents to the senses, is a medium through which we arrive at the knowledge of something else: from a footstep, for instance, which we see traced on the ground, we instantly infer that some one whose footstep appears has passed. (10)

(9) D. Aug. lib. 10. de Civ. Dei, c. 5. & epist. 2.

A Sacrament, therefore, is clearly to be numbered amongst those things which have been instituted as signs: it makes known to us by external resemblance, that which God, by his invisible power, accomplishes in our souls. (11) To illustrate what we have said by an example; baptism, for instance, which is administered by external ablution, accompanied with certain solemn words, signifies that by the power of the Holy Ghost, all the interior stains and defilements of sin are washed away, and that the soul is enriched and adorned with the admirable gift of heavenly justification; whilst, at the same time, the baptismal ablution, as we shall hereafter explain in its proper place, accomplishes in the soul, that of which it is externally significant. That a Sacrament is to be numbered amongst signs is clearly inferred from Scripture. Speaking of circumcision, a Sacrament of the old law which was given to Abraham, the father of all believers, (12) the Apostle, in his epistle to the Corinthians, says; "and he received the sign of circumcision, a seal of the justice of the faith which he had;" (13) and in another place: "All we," says he, "who are baptised in Christ Jesus, are baptised in his death:" (14) words which justify the inference that baptism signifies, to use the words of the same Apostle, that "we are buried together with him by baptism into death." (15) To know that the Sacraments are signs, is important to the faithful. This knowledge will lead them more readily to believe, that what they signify, contain, and effectuate, is holy and august; and recognising their sanctity, they will be more disposed to venerate and adore the beneficence of God displayed towards us in their institution.

A Sacrament proved to be "a sign."

(10) Aug. l. 2. de doct. Christ. c. 1.

(11) Aug. de doct. Christ. l. 3. c. 9. & epist. 23. & de Catch. erud. c. 26. potest videri Tertul. de resur. carnis. c. 8. & Greg. in 1. Reg. lib. 6. c. 3. post init.

(12) Gen. xvii. 10. (13) Rom. iv. 11. (14) Rom. vi. 3. (15) Rom. vi. 4.

Also, "a sacred thing" We now come to explain the words, "sacred thing," which constitute the second part of the definition. To render this explanation satisfactory we must enter somewhat more minutely into the accurate and acute reasoning of S. Augustine on the variety of signs. (16)

Of signs some are natural;

Of signs some are called natural, which, besides making themselves known to us, also convey a knowledge of something else; an effect, as we have already said, common to all signs. Smoke, for instance, is a natural sign from which we immediately infer the existence of fire. It is called a natural sign, because it implies the existence of fire, not by arbitrary institution, but by its intimate connection with that element: when smoke appears we are at once convinced of the existence of latent fire. (17)

some conventional.

Other signs are not natural, but conventional, invented and instituted by men to enable them to commune one with another, mutually to convey their sentiments and communicate their counsels. The variety and multiplicity of such signs may be inferred from the circumstance, that some belong to the eyes, some to the ears, some to each of the other senses. When we intimate any thing by a sensible sign, for instance, by removing a military standard, it is obvious that such intimation can reach us only through the medium of the eyes; and it is equally obvious that the sound of the trumpet, of the lute, and of the lyre, instruments which are not only sources of pleasure, but frequently signs of ideas, is addressed to the ear. Through the latter sense, are also conveyed words, which are the best medium of communicating our inmost thoughts.

Signs instituted by God: some significant only: others significant and efficient.

Besides those signs of which we have hitherto spoken, and which are conventional; there are others, and confessedly of more sorts than one, which are of divine appointment. Some were instituted by God, solely to indicate something, or recall its recollection: such were the purifications of the law, the showbread, and many other things which belonged to the Mosaic worship; (18) others not only to signify, but, also, to accomplish what they signify. Among the latter, are manifestly to be numbered the Sacraments of the New Law. They are signs instituted by God, not invented by man, which we believe, with an unhesitating faith, to carry with them that sacred efficacy of which they are the signs. Having, therefore, shown that signs present a variety of appearances; the "sacred thing" which they contain, must also exist under a variety of forms.

(16) Lib. 1. de doct. Christ. c. 1.

(17) Aug. de doct. Christ. l. 2. c. 1. et seq.

With regard to the proposed definition of a Sacrament, divines prove that by the words "sacred thing," is to be understood the grace of God, which sanctifies the soul and adorns it with every virtue; and of this grace they consider the words "sacred thing," an appropriate appellation, because by its salutary influence the soul is consecrated and united to God.

Meaning of the words "sacred thing."

In order, therefore, to explain more fully the nature of a Sacrament, the pastor will teach that it is a thing subject to the senses; and, possessing by divine institution, at once the power of signifying sanctity and justice, and of imparting both to the receiver. Hence, it is easy to perceive, that the images of the saints, crosses, and the like, although signs of sacred things, cannot be called Sacraments. That such is the nature of a Sacrament is easily proved by applying to each of the Sacraments what has been already said of baptism, viz. that the solemn ablution of the body not only signifies, but has power to effect a sacred thing which is wrought in the soul by the invisible operation of the Holy Ghost.

A fuller explanation of a sacrament.

It is also preeminently, the property of these mystical signs, instituted by Almighty God, to signify, by divine appointment, more than one thing, and this applies to all the Sacraments. All declare not only our sanctity and justification, but also two other things most intimately connected with both—the Passion of our Lord, which is the source of our sanctification, and eternal life to which,

Every sacrament signifies three things.

(18) Aug. de doct. Christ. 3. c. 9. Exod. xii. 15. Concil. Trid. Sess. 7. de Sac.

as to its end, our sanctification should be referred. Such, then, being the nature of all the Sacraments, the doctors of the Church justly hold, that each of them has a three-fold significancy; reminding us of something passed, indicating something present, foretelling something future. When we say that this is an opinion, held by the Doctors of the Church, let it not be imagined that it is unsupported by Scriptural authority. When the Apostle says: "All we who are baptised in Christ Jesus, are baptised "in his death;" (19) he gives us, clearly, to understand that baptism is called a sign, because it reminds us of the death and passion of our Lord—When he says: "We are "buried together with him by baptism into death, that "as Christ is risen from the dead by the glory of the Father, so, we, also, may walk in newness of life;" (20) he also clearly shows, that baptism is a sign which indicates the infusion of divine grace into the soul, enables us by its efficacy to form our lives anew, and renders the performance of all the duties of true piety at once easy and inviting. Finally, when he adds: "If we have been "planted together in the likeness of his death, we shall "be also in the likeness of his resurrection;" (21) he teaches that baptism gives no obscure intimation of eternal life also, which we are to reach through its efficacy.

A Sacrament sometimes signifies the presence of more than one thing.

Besides the different significations already evolved, the Sacraments also not unfrequently indicate and mark the presence of more than one thing. The holy Eucharist, for instance, at once signifies the presence of the real body and blood of Christ, and the grace which it imparts to the worthy receiver. What has been said, therefore, cannot fail to supply the pastor with arguments to prove, how much the power of God is displayed—how many hidden miracles are contained in the Sacraments; that thus all may know and feel their obligation to reverence them with the most profound veneration, and to receive them with the most ardent devotion.

The Sacraments, why instituted.

But, of all the means employed to make known the proper use of the Sacraments, there is none more effectual

(19) Rom. vi. 3.

(20) Rom. vi. 4.

(21) Rom. vi. 5.

than a careful exposition of the reasons of their institution. Amongst these reasons, for they are many, the first is the imbecility of the human mind: we are so constituted by nature, that no one can aspire to mental and intellectual knowledge, unless through the medium of sensible objects. Impelled, therefore, by his goodness towards us and guided by his wisdom the Sovereign Creator of the universe, in order to bring the mysterious effects of his divine power more immediately within the sphere of our comprehension, has ordained that it should be manifested to us, through the intervention of certain sensible signs. As S. Chrysostom happily expresses it: "If man
" were not clothed with a material body, these good things
" would have been presented to him unveiled by sensible " forms; but, as he is composed of body and soul, it was " absolutely necessary to employ sensible signs, in order to
" to assist in making them understood."(22)

First.

Another reason is, because the mind yields a reluctant assent to promises; and hence, God, from the beginning of the world, very frequently, and in express terms points our attention to the promises which he had made; and when designing to execute something, the magnitude of which might weaken a belief in its accomplishment, he confirms his promise by signs, which sometimes appear miraculous. When, for instance, God sends Moses to deliver the people of Israel; and Moses, commissioned as he was by God, and shielded by his protecting arm, still hesitates, fearing his incompetency to the task imposed on him, or the incredulous rejection of the divine oracles on the part of the people, the Almighty confirms his promise by many signs. (23) As, then, in the old law, God ordained that every important promise should be confirmed by certain signs; so, in the new, our divine Redeemer, when he promises pardon of sin, divine grace, the communication of the Holy Spirit, has instituted certain sensible signs which are so many pledges of the in-

Second.

(22) Chrys. hom. 83. in Matth. & hom. 60. ad Pop. Antioch.

(23) Exod. iii. 10. 11.—Ibid. iv. 2.

violability of his word—pledges which we are well assured he will not fail to redeem. (24)

Third. A third reason is, that the Sacraments bring, to use the words of S. Ambrose, the healing remedies and medicines, as it were, of the Samaritan mentioned in the Gospel. God wishes us to have recourse to them in order to preserve or recover the health of the soul; (25) for, through the Sacraments as through its proper chanel, should flow into the soul the efficacy of the passion of Christ, that is, the grace which he purchased for us on the altar of the cross, and without which we cannot hope for salvation. Hence, our most merciful Redeemer has bequeathed to his Church, Sacraments stamped with the sanction of his word, and sealed with the security of his promise, through which, provided we make pious and devout use of these sovereign remedies, we firmly believe that the fruit of his passion is really conveyed to our souls.

Fourth. A fourth reason why the institution of the Sacraments may seem necessary is, that there may be certain marks and symbols to distinguish the faithful; particularly as, to use the words of S. Augustine, “no society of men, professing a true or a false religion, can, as it were, be incorporated, unless united and held together by some federal bond of sensible signs.” (26) Both these objects, the Sacraments of the new law accomplish; distinguishing the Christian from the infidel, and connecting the faithful by a sort of sacred bond.

Fifth. Again, the Apostle says: “With the heart we believe unto justice; but with the mouth confession is made unto salvation.” (27) These words, also, afford another very just reason for the institution of the Sacraments—by approaching them, we make a public profession of our faith in the face of all men. Thus, when we stand before the baptismal font, we openly profess our belief in its efficacy, (24) Aug. lib. 4. de baptis. contra Donatist. cap. 24.

(25) Ambr. lib. 5. de Sacr. c. 4.

(26) D. Aug. lib. 19. contra Faust. c. 11. & de vera rel. c. 17. Basil. in exh. ad bapt.

(27) Rom. x. 10.

and declare that, by virtue of its salutary waters, in which we are washed, the soul is spiritually cleansed and regenerated. The Sacraments have also great influence, not only in exciting and exercising our faith, but also in inflaming that charity with which we should love one another; recollecting that, by participating of these mysteries in common, we are knit together in the closest bonds of union, and are made members of one body.

Finally, and the consideration is of the highest importance in the study of Christian piety, the Sacraments repress and subdue the pride of the human heart, and exercise the Christian in the practice of humility, by obliging him to a subjection to sensible elements; that thus, in atonement for his criminal defections from God to serve the elements of this world, he may yield to the Almighty the tribute of his obedience. These are principally what appeared to us necessary for the instruction of the faithful, in the name, nature and institution of a Sacrament. When they shall have been accurately expounded by the pastor, his next duty will be, to explain the constituent parts of each Sacrament, and the rites and ceremonies used in its administration.

Sixth.

In the first place, then, the pastor will inform the faithful, that the "sensible thing" which enters into the definition of a Sacrament as already given, although constituting but one sign, is of a twofold nature: every Sacrament consists of two things; "matter," which is called the element, and "form," which is commonly called "the word." This is the doctrine of the Fathers of the Church, upon which the testimony of S. Augustine is familiar to all: "The "word," says he, "is joined to the element, and it becomes a Sacrament." (28) By the words "sensible thing," therefore, the Fathers understand not only the matter or element, such as water in baptism, chrism in confirmation, and oil in extreme-unction, all of which fall under the eye; but also the words which constitute the form, and which are addressed to the ear. Both are clearly pointed out by the Apostle, when he says: "Christ loved the Church, and delivered himself up for it, that he might sanctify it, cleansing it by the laver of water in the word of life." (29) Here the matter and form of the Sacrament are expressly mentioned. But in order to explain, more fully and clearly, the particular efficacy of each, the words which compose the form were to be added to the matter; for of all signs, words are evidently the most significant, and without them it would be difficult to comprehend what the matter of the Sacraments may designate and declare. Water, for instance, has the quality of cooling as well as of cleansing, and may be symbolic of either. In baptism, therefore, unless the words were added, it might be matter of conjecture, of certainty it could not, which was signified; but when the words which compose the form are added, we are no longer at a loss to understand, that baptism possesses and signifies the power of cleansing. (30)

Every Sacrament consists of matter and form.

(28) Aug. in Joan, tract. 80.

The Sacraments of the New Law, excel those of the Old.

In this, the Sacraments of the New Law excel those of the Old, that there was no definite form, known to us, of administering those of the Old, a circumstance which rendered them uncertain and obscure, whilst, in those of the new, the form is so definite, that any, even a casual, deviation from it renders the Sacrament null; and it is therefore expressed in the clearest terms, and such as exclude the possibility of doubt. These then are the parts which belong to the nature and substance of the Sacraments, and of which every Sacrament is necessarily composed.

Sacraments administered with certain ceremonies; and why.

To these are added certain ceremonies, which, although not to be omitted without sin, unless in case of necessity, yet, if at any time omitted, because not essential to its existence, do not invalidate the Sacrament. It is not without good reason, that the administration of the Sacraments has been, at all times, from the earliest ages of the Church, accompanied with certain solemn ceremonies. There is, in the first place, an obvious propriety in mani-

(29) Eph. v. 25.

(30) Aug. de doct. Christi. lib. ii. c. 3.

festing such a religious reverence to the sacred mysteries, as to appear to handle holy things holily. These ceremonies also serve to display more fully, and place as it were before our eyes, the effects of the Sacraments, and to impress more deeply on the minds of the faithful the sanctity of these sacred institutions. They also elevate to sublime contemplation, the minds of those who behold them with respectful and religious attention; and excite within them the virtues of faith and of charity. To enable the faithful therefore to know, and understand clearly, the meaning of the ceremonies made use of in the administration of each Sacrament, should be an object of special care and attention to the pastor.

First reason
Second.
Third.

We now come to explain the number of the Sacraments; a knowledge of which is attended with this advantage, that the greater the number of supernatural aids to salvation which the faithful shall understand to have been provided by the divine goodness, the more ardent the piety with which they will direct all the powers of their souls to praise and proclaim the singular beneficence of God.

Number of the Sacraments, useful to be known.

The Sacraments then of the Catholic Church are seven, as is proved from Scripture, from the unbroken tradition of the Fathers, and from the authoritative definitions of councils. (31) Why they are neither more nor less, may be shown, at least with some degree of probability, even from the analogy that exists between natural and spiritual life. In order to exist, to preserve existence, and to contribute to his own and to the public good, seven things seem necessary to man—to be born—to grow—to be nurtured—to be cured when sick—when weak to be strengthened—as far as regards the public weal, to have magistrates invested with authority to govern—and, finally, to perpetuate himself and his species by legitimate offspring. Analogous then as all these things obviously are, to that life by which the soul lives to God, we discover in them a reason to account for the number of the Sacraments.

Their number, seven.
Explained by analogy.

(31) Trid. sess. 7. can. 1. de sac. in gen. Conc. Flo. in dec. ad Arm. D. Th. p. 3. q. 63. art. 1.

Baptism. Amongst them, the first is Baptism, the gate, as it were, to all the other Sacraments, by which we are born again to Christ—The next is Confirmation, by which we grow up, and are strengthened in the grace of God: for, as S. Augustine observes, “to the Apostles who have already received baptism, the Redeemer said: ‘stay you in the city till you be indued with power from on high’” (32)—

Confirmation.

Eucharist. The third is the Eucharist, that true bread from heaven which nourishes our souls to eternal life, according to these words of the Saviour: “My flesh is meat indeed, and my blood is drink indeed” (33)—The fourth is Penance, by which the soul, which has caught the contagion of sin, is restored to spiritual health—The fifth is Extreme Unction, which obliterates the traces of sin, and invigorates the powers of the soul; of which S. James says: “if he be in sins, they shall be forgiven him” (34)—The sixth is Holy Orders, which gives power to perpetuate in the Church the public administration of the sacraments, and the exercise of all the sacred functions of the ministry (35)—The seventh and last is Matrimony, a sacrament instituted for the legitimate and holy union of man and woman, for the conservation of the human race, and the education of children, in the knowledge of religion, and the love and fear of God.

Penance.

Extreme-Unction.

Holy Orders.

Matrimony

All the Sacraments
not equally necessary. All and each of the Sacraments, it is true, possess an admirable efficacy given them by God; but it is well worthy of remark, that all are not of equal necessity or of equal dignity, nor is the signification of all the same. Amongst them three are of paramount necessity, a necessity, however, which arises from different causes—The universal and absolute necessity of baptism, these words of the Redeemer unequivocally declare: “Unless a man be born again of water and the Holy Ghost, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God.” (36) The necessity of Penance is relative: Penance is necessary for those only who have stained their baptismal innocence, by mortal (32) D. Aug. ep. 108. &amp; Luke, xxiv. 49.

(33) John, vi. 55.

(34) James, v. 15.

(35) Luke, v. 14.

(36) John, iii. 5.

guilt: without sincere repentance, their eternal ruin is inevitable. Orders, too, although not necessary to each of the faithful, are of absolute general necessity to the Church. (37) But, the dignity of the Sacraments considered, the Eucharist, for holiness, and for the number and greatness of its mysteries, is eminently superior to all the rest. These, however, are matters which will be more easily understood, when we come to explain, in its proper place, what regards each of the Sacraments. (38)

The Eucharist excels all the others in dignity.

We come, in the next place, to ask from whom we have received these sacred and divine mysteries: any boon, however excellent in itself, receives no doubt an increased value and dignity from him by whose bounty it is bestowed. The question, however, is not one of difficult solution: justification comes from God; the Sacraments are the wonderful instruments of justification; one, and the same God in Christ, must, therefore, be the author of justification, and of the Sacraments. (39) The Sacraments, moreover, contain a power and efficacy which reach the inmost recesses of the soul; and as God alone has power to enter into the sanctuary of the heart, he alone, through Christ, is manifestly the author of the Sacraments. That they are interiorly dispensed by him, is also matter of faith; according to these words of S. John: "He who sent me to baptise with water, said to me; he upon whom thou shalt see the Spirit descending, and remaining upon him, he it is that baptiseth with the Holy Ghost." (40)

Christ, the author of the Sacraments.

But God, although the author and dispenser of the Sacraments, would have them administered in his Church by men, not by angels: and to constitute a Sacrament, as constant tradition testifies, matter and form are not more necessary than is the ministry of men.

Men, their ministers.

(37) Trid. 1. Sess. 7, can. 3, 4, de Sac. in gen. D. Th. p. 3. q. 65, art. 4.

(38) Dionys. lib. de Eccles. Hier. c. 3.

(39) Ambr. lib. 4. de Sac. cap. 6. D. Tho. p. 3. q. 62. Trid. Sess. 7, can. 1. de Sac. in gen. lib. de Eccles. dog. & Cassian. collat. 7. 18.

(40) John, i. 33.

The unworthiness of the minister does not affect the validity of the sacraments.

But, representing as he does, in the discharge of his sacred functions, not his own, but the person of Christ, the minister of the Sacraments, be he good or bad, validly consecrates and confers the Sacraments; provided he make use of the matter and form instituted by Christ, and always observed in the Catholic Church, and intends to do what the Church does in their administration. Unless, therefore, Christians will deprive themselves of so great a good, and resist the Holy Ghost, nothing can prevent them from receiving, through the Sacraments, the fruit of grace. (41) That this was, at all times, a fixed and well defined doctrine of the Church, is established beyond all doubt by S. Augustine, in his disputations against the Donatists; (42) and should we desire Scriptural proof also, we have it in the words of S. Paul: "I have planted, Apollo watered; but God gave the increase." (43) Neither he that plants, therefore, nor he that waters, is any thing, but God who gives "the increase." As, therefore, in planting trees, the vices of the planter do not impede the growth of the vine, so, and the comparison is sufficiently intelligible, those who were planted in Christ by the ministry of bad men, sustain no injury from guilt which is not their own. Judas Iscariot, as the Holy Fathers infer from the Gospel of S. John, (44) conferred baptism on many; and yet none of those whom he baptised are recorded to have been baptised again. To use the memorable words of S. Augustine: "Judas baptised, and yet after him none were rebaptised: John baptised, and after John they were rebaptised, because the baptism administered by Judas was the baptism of Christ, but that administered by John was the baptism of John: (45) not that we prefer Judas to John, but that we justly prefer the baptism of Christ, although (41) Trid. sess. 7. de Sac. in gen. c. 11 & 12. Greg. Naz. in Orat. in S. bapt. Ambr. de his qui myst. init. cap. 5. Chrysost. hom. 8. in 1. Cor.

(42) Aug. contra Crescen. 1. 4. c. 20. contra Donat. l. 1. c. 4. & l. 2. contra lit. Petil. c. 47. (43) 1 Cor. iii. 6. (44) John, iv. 2.

(45) Acts, xix. 3, 4, 5.

“ administered by Judas, to the baptism of John, although “ administered by the hands of John.” (46)

To administer the Sacraments
in a state of sin is a grievous crime.

But, let not the pastor, or other minister of the Sacraments, hence infer that he fully acquits himself of his duty, if, disregarding integrity of life and purity of morals, he attend only to the administration of the Sacraments in the manner prescribed. True, the manner of administering them is a matter of the highest importance; but it is no less true, that it does not constitute all that enters into the worthy discharge of this duty. It should never be forgotten, that the Sacraments, although they cannot lose the divine efficacy inherent in them, bring eternal death and everlasting perdition on him who dares to administer them with hands stained with the defilement of sin. Holy things, and the observation cannot be too often repeated, should be treated holily, and with due reverence : (47) “ To the sinner,” says the prophet, “ God “ has said: why dost thou declare my justices, and take “ my covenant in thy mouth, seeing that thou hast hated “ discipline?” (48) If then, for him who is defiled by sin it is unlawful to speak on divine things, how enormous the guilt of that man, who, with conscious guilt, dreads not to consecrate with polluted lips these holy mysteries—to take them—to touch them—nay more, with sacrilegious hands, to administer them to others? (49)
“ The symbols,” (so he calls the Sacraments) “ the wick“ ed,” says S. Denis, “ are not allowed to touch.” (50)
It therefore becomes the first, the most important duty of the minister of these holy things, to aspire to holiness of life, to approach with purity the administration of the Sacraments, and so to exercise himself in the practice of piety, that, from their frequent administration and use, they may every day receive, with the divine assistance, a more abundant effusion of grace.

(46) Aug. in Joan.

(47) Aug. in Joan, tract. 5. & contra Cresc. l. 5. c. 6. D. Thom. p. 3.
q. 93. art. 4. c. (48) Ps. xlix. 16. (49) Conc. Trid. can. 6.

(50) S. Dion. de Eccl. Hier. c. 1.

The effects of the Sacraments.

When these important matters have been explained, the effects of the Sacraments present to the pastor the next subject of instruction; a subject, it is hoped, which will throw considerable light on the definition of a Sacrament, as already given.

Justifying
grace.

The principal effects of the Sacraments are two; sanctifying grace, and the character which they impress. The former, that is, the grace which we, in common with the doctors of the Church, call sanctifying grace, deservedly holds the first place. That this is an effect produced by the Sacraments, we know from these words of the Apostle: "Christ," says he, "loved the Church, and delivered "himself up for it; that he might sanctify it, cleansing it "by the laver of water in the word of life." (51) But how so great and so admirable an effect is produced by the Sacraments, that, to use the words of S. Augustine, "water cleanses the body, and reaches the heart:" (52) this, indeed, the mind of man, aided by the light of reason alone, is unequal to comprehend. It ought to be an established law, that nothing sensible can, of its own nature, reach the soul; but we know by the light of faith, that in the Sacraments exists the power of the omnipotent, effectuating that which the natural elements cannot of themselves accomplish. (53)

The grace
of the Sacraments,
why, of old,
proved by
miracles.

That on this subject no doubt may exist in the minds of the faithful, God, in the abundance of his mercy, was pleased, from the moment of their institution, to manifest by exterior miracles, the effects which they operate interiorly in the soul: this he did, in order that we may always believe that the same interior effects, although inaccessible to the senses, are still produced by them. To say nothing of that which the Scripture records—that, at the baptism of the Redeemer in the Jordan, "The heavens were opened, and the Holy Ghost appeared in the

(51) Eph. v. 25, 26.

(52) S. Aug. in Joan. tract. 80.

(53) De hoc effectu sacramen. vid. Trid. Sess. 7, can. 6, 7, 8. de sacr. Aug. tract. 26. in Joan. & contr. Faust. c. 16, & 17, & in Ps. lxxvii. v. 15, 16.

“ form of a dove ;”(54) to teach us, that when we are washed in the sacred font, his grace is infused into our souls—to omit these splendid miracles which have reference rather to the consecration of baptism, than to the administration of the Sacraments—do we not read, that on the day of Pentecost, when the Apostles received the Holy Ghost, and were, thenceforward, inspired with greater courage and firmer resolution to preach the faith, and brave danger of every sort for the glory of Christ, “ there came “ suddenly a sound from heaven, as of a mighty wind “ coming, and it filled the whole house where they were “ sitting, and there appeared to them parted tongues, as “ it were of fire.” (55) These visible effects give us to understand that, in the Sacrament of Confirmation, the same spirit is given us, and the same strength imparted, which enable us resolutely to encounter, and with fortitude to resist, our implacable enemies, the world, the flesh, and the devil. (56) As often as these Sacraments were administered by the Apostles, so often, during the infancy of the Church, did the same miraculous effects follow; and they ceased not to be visible until the faith had acquired maturity and strength.

From what has been said of sanctifying grace, the first effect of the Sacraments, it also clearly follows, that there resides in the Sacraments of the New Law, a virtue far more exalted and efficacious than that of the Sacraments of the Old, (57) which, as “ weak and needy elements, (58) “ sanctified such as were defiled to the cleansing of the “ flesh,” (59) but not of the spirit. They were, therefore, instituted as signs only of those things, which were to be accomplished by the Sacraments of the new law—Sacraments which flowing from the side of Christ, “ who, “ by the Holy Ghost, offered himself unspotted unto God, “ cleanse our consciences from dead works, to serve the

The Sacraments of the new law superior to those of the old.

(54) Matth. iii. 16.—Mark, i. 10.—Luke, iii. 92.

(55) Acts, i. 2, 3. (56) Aug. lib. quæst. Vet. & Nov. Test. q. 93.

(57) Aug. l. 19. contr. Faust. c. 15, & in Ps. lxxxiii. Ambr. lib. de Sacr. c. 4.

(58) Gal. iv. 9.

(59) Heb. ix. 13.

“living God,” (60) and thus work in us, through the blood of Christ, the grace which they signify. Comparing them, therefore, with the Sacraments of the old law, we shall find that not only are they more efficacious, but, also, more exuberant of spiritual advantages, and stamped with the characters of superior dignity and holiness. (61)

Three of the Sacraments impress a character.

The other effect of the Sacraments, an effect, however, not common to all, but peculiar to three, Baptism, Confirmation, and Holy Orders, is the character which they impress on the soul. When the Apostle says: “God hath annointed us, who also hath sealed us, and “given the pledge of the Spirit in our hearts,” (62) he clearly designates, by the word “sealed,” this sacramental character, the property of which is to impress a seal and mark on the soul. This character is, as it were, a distinctive and indelible impression stamped on the soul; (63) of which S. Augustine says: “Shall the Christian Sacraments accomplish less than the bodily mark impressed “on the soldier? That mark is not stamped on his person “anew, as often as he resumes the military service which “he had relinquished; but the old one is recognised and “approved.” (64)

Its effect two-fold.

This character has a two-fold effect, it qualifies us to receive or perform something sacred, and distinguishes us one from another. In the character impressed by Baptism, both effects are exemplified: by it we are qualified to receive the other Sacraments; and the Christian is distinguished from those who profess not the name of Christ. The same illustration is afforded by the characters impressed by Confirmation and Holy Orders: by the one we are armed and arrayed as soldiers of Christ, publicly to profess and defend his name, to fight against our domestic

(60) Heb. ix. 14.

(61) Aug. lib. 2. de Simb. c. 6, & in Joan. Tract. 15, & lib. 15. de Civit. Dei, c. 26. (62) 2 Cor. i. 21. (63) Trid. ib. can.

(64) De hoc charact. vide Aug. lib. 2. contr. ep. Parm. c. 33. & ep. 50, circa medium, & tract. 6, in Joan. & lect. 1. contr. Crescen. c. 30. item D. Thom. p. 3. q. 65.

enemy, and against the spiritual powers of wickedness in the high places, and are also distinguished from those who, being newly baptised, are, as it were, new born infants: the other combines the power of consecrating and administering the Sacraments, and also distinguishes those who are invested with this power, from the rest of the faithful. The rule of the Catholic Church is, therefore, inviolably to be observed: it teaches that these three Sacraments impress a character and are never to be reiterated.

On the subject of the Sacraments in general, these are the matters of instruction which we proposed to deliver. In communicating them to the faithful, the pastor will keep in view, principally, two things: the one, to impress on the minds of the faithful a deep sense of the honor, respect and veneration, due to these divine and celestial gifts; the other, to urge on all the necessity of having recourse, piously and religiously, to those sacred institutions established by the God of infinite mercy, for the common salvation of all; and of being so inflamed with the desire of attaining Christian perfection, as to deem it a deplorable loss to be, for any time, deprived of the salutary use, particularly, of Penance, and of the Holy Eucharist. These important objects the pastor will find little difficulty in accomplishing, if he press frequently on the attention of the faithful, what we have already said on the august dignity and salutary efficacy of the Sacraments—that they were instituted by the Lord Jesus, from whom nothing imperfect can emanate—that when administered, the most powerful influence of the Holy Ghost is present, pervading the inmost sanctuary of the soul—that they possess an admirable and unfailing virtue to cure our spiritual maladies, and communicate to us the inexhaustible riches of the passion of our Lord—in fine, that the whole edifice of Christian piety, although resting on the most firm foundation of the corner stone, unless supported on every side by the preaching of the divine word, and by the use of the Sacraments, must, it is greatly to be apprehended, having partially yielded, ultimately fall to the ground; for, as we are ushered into spiritual life by means of the Sacraments; so, by the same means, are we nurtured and preserved, and grow to spiritual increase.

Two things to be kept in view by the Pastor, in his explanation of the Sacraments.

---

ON THE SACRAMENT OF BAPTISM.

---

Importance
of the knowledge of the Sacraments
in particular.

Of Baptism

FROM what has been hitherto said on the Sacraments in general, we may judge how necessary it is, to a proper understanding of the doctrines of the Christian faith, and to the practice of Christian piety, to know what the Catholic Church proposes to our belief on the Sacraments in particular. That a perfect knowledge of Baptism is particularly necessary to the faithful, an attentive perusal of the epistles of S. Paul, will force upon the mind. The Apostle, not only frequently, but also in language the most energetic, in language full of the Spirit of God, renews the recollection of this mystery, exalts its transcendant dignity, and in it places before us the death, burial, and resurrection of our Lord, as objects of our contemplation and imitation. (1) The pastor, therefore, can never think that he has bestowed sufficient labour and attention on the exposition of this Sacrament. Besides the great festivals of Easter and Pentecost, festivals on which the Church celebrated this Sacrament with the greatest solemnity and devotion, and on which particularly, according to ancient practice, its divine mysteries are to be explained; the pastor should, also, take occasion, at other times, to make it the subject matter of his instructions. (2)

(1) Rom. vi. 3. Colos. ii. 12, 13.

(2) De hoc. usu antiquo vid. Tertul. lib. de Baptis. c. 19. Basil. in exhort. ad bapt. Amb. lib. de myst. Paschæ.

For this purpose, a most convenient opportunity would seem to present itself, whenever the pastor, when about to administer this Sacrament, finds himself surrounded by a considerable number of the faithful: on such occasions, it is true, his exposition cannot embrace every thing that regards baptism; but he can develope one or two points with greater facility, whilst the faithful see them expressed, and contemplate them with devout attention, in the sacred ceremonies which he is performing. Thus each person, reading a lesson of admonition in the person of him who is receiving baptism, calls to mind the promises by which he had bound himself to the service of God when initiated by baptism, and reflects whether his life and morals evince that fidelity to which every one pledges himself, by professing the name of Christian.

When most conveniently explained

To render what we have to say, on this subject, perspicuous, we shall explain the nature and substance of the Sacrament; premising, however, an explication of the word Baptism.—The word Baptism, as is well known, is of greek derivation. Although used in Scripture to express not only that ablution which forms part of the Sacrament, but also every species of ablution, (3) and sometimes, figuratively, to express sufferings; yet it is employed, by ecclesiastical writers, to designate not every sort of ablution, but that which forms part of the Sacrament, and is administered with the prescribed sacramental form. In this sense, the Apostles very frequently make use of the word, in accordance with the institution of Christ. (4)

Meaning of the word "Baptism"

This Sacrament, the Holy Fathers designate also by other names. S. Augustine informs us that it was sometimes called the Sacrament of Faith; because, by receiving it, we profess our faith in all the doctrines of Christianity: (5) by others it was denominated "Illumination," because by the faith which we profess in baptism, the heart is illumined: "Call to mind," says the

Other names of.

(3) Mark, vii. 4.

(4) Rom. vi. 3. 1. Pet. iii. 21. Octo baptismi genera vid. Damasc. lib. 4. de fide orthod. 10.

(5) D. Aug. epist. 25, in fin.

Apostle, alluding to the time of baptism, "the former days, wherein being illumined, you endured a great fight of afflictions." (6) S. Chrysostom, in his sermon to the baptised, calls it a purgation, through which "we purge away the old leaven, that we may become a new paste:" he, also, calls it a burial, a planting, and the cross of Jesus Christ: (8) the reasons for all these appellations may be gathered from the epistle of S. Paul to the Romans. (9) S. Denis calls it the beginning of the most holy commandments, for this obvious reason, that baptism is, as it were, the gate through which we enter into the fellowship of Christian life, and begin, thenceforward, to obey the commandments. (10) This exposition of the different names of the sacrament of baptism, the pastor will briefly communicate to the people. (11)

Definition
of.

With regard to its definition, although sacred writers give many, to us that which may be collected from the words of our Lord, recorded in the Gospel of S. John, and of the Apostle, in his epistle to the Ephesians, appears the most appropriate: "Unless," says our Lord, "a man be born again of water and the Holy Ghost, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God;" (12) and, speaking of the Church, the Apostle says: "cleansing it by the laver of water in the word of life." (13) From these words, Baptism may be accurately and appropriately defined: "The Sacrament of regeneration by water in the word." By nature, we are born from Adam, children of wrath; but by baptism we are regenerated in Christ, children of mercy; for, "He gave power to men to be made the sons of God, to them that believe in his name, who are born not of blood, nor of the will of flesh, nor of the will of man, but of God." (14)

In what the Sacrament
consists.

But, define Baptism as we may, the faithful are to be informed that this sacrament consists of ablution, accom-

(6) Heb. x. 32.

(7) 1 Cor. v. 7.

(8) S. Chrysost. x. 5.

(9) Rom. vi. 3.

(10) S. Dion. de Eccl. Hier. c. 2.

(11) De variis baptis. nom. vid. Gregor. Nazianz. orat. in sancta lumina, et Clem. Alex. lib. 1. Pædag. cap. 6.

(12) John, iii. 5.

(13) Eph. v. 26.

(14) John, i. 12, 15.

panied, necessarily, according to the institution of our Lord, by certain solemn words. (15) This is the uniform doctrine of the Holy Fathers; a doctrine proved by the authority of S. Augustine: "The word," says he, "is "joined to the element, and it becomes a Sacrament." That these are the constituents of Baptism, it becomes more necessary to impress on the minds of the faithful, that they may not fall into the vulgar error of thinking, that the baptismal water, preserved in the sacred font, constitutes the Sacrament. Then only is it to be called the Sacrament of Baptism, when it is really used in the way of ablution, accompanied with the words appointed by our Lord. (16)

But, as we first said, when treating of the Sacraments Its matter. in general, that every Sacrament consists of matter and form; it is, therefore, necessary to point out what constitutes each of these in the Sacrament of Baptism. The matter then, or element of this Sacrament, is any sort of natural water, which is, simply, and without addition of any kind, commonly called water; be it sea-water, river-water, water from a pond, well, or fountain: our Lord has declared that, "Unless a man be born again of "water and the Holy Ghost, he cannot enter into the "kingdom of God." (17) The Apostle also says, that the Church was cleansed "by the laver of water;" (18) and in the epistle of S. John, we read these words:—"There are three that give testimony on earth; the spirit, "and the water, and the blood." (19) The Scripture affords other proofs which establish the same proof. When, however, the baptist says that the Lord will come, "who "will baptise in the Holy Ghost, and in fire;" (20) he is not to be understood to speak of the matter, but of the effect of baptism, produced in the soul by the interior operation of the Holy Ghost; or, if not, of the miracle

(15) Matth. xxviii. 19.

(16) Hac. de re vid. Chrysost. hom. 24. in Joan. Aug. lib. 6. contra. Donatist. c. 25. Conc. Florent. et Trid. item August. tract. 80 in Joan.

(17) John, iii. 5. (18) Eph. v. 26. (19) 1 John, v. 8. (20) Matth. iii. 11.

performed on the day of Pentecost, when the Holy Ghost descended on the Apostles, in the form of fire, (21) as was foretold by our Lord, in these words: "John, indeed, baptised with water, but you shall be baptised with the Holy Ghost, not many days hence." (22)

Figure and prophecies of.

That water is the matter of Baptism, the Almighty signified both by figures and by prophecies, as we know from holy Scripture: According to the prince of the Apostles, in his first epistle, the deluge which swept the world, because "the wickedness of men was great on the earth, and all the thoughts of their hearts were bent upon evil," (23) was a figure of the waters of Baptism. (24) To omit the cleansing of Naamon the Syrian, (25) and the admirable virtue of the pool of Bethsaida, (26) and many similar types, manifestly symbolic of this mystery; the passage through the red sea, according to S. Paul, in his epistle to the Corinthians, was typical of the waters of Baptism. (27) With regard to the oracles of the prophets, the waters to which the prophet Isaias so freely invites all that thirst, (28) and those which Ezekiel saw in spirit, issue from the temple, (29) and also, "the fountain" which Zachary foresaw, "open to the house of David, and to the inhabitants of Jerusalem, for the washing of the sinner and of the unclean woman," (30) were, no doubt, so many types which prefigured the salutary effects of the waters of Baptism.

Water, why the matter of baptism.

The propriety of constituting water the matter of baptism, of the nature and efficacy of which it is at once expressive, S. Jerome, in his epistle to Oceanus, proves by many arguments. (31) Upon this subject, however, the pastor will teach, that water, which is always at hand and within the reach of all, was the fittest matter of a Sacrament which is essentially necessary to all; and, also, that water is best adapted to signify the effect of baptism. It

(21) Acts, ii. 3.

(22) Acts, i. 5.

(23) Gen. vi. 5.

(24) 1 Pet. iii. 20, 21.

(25) 4 Kings, v. 14.

(26) John, v. 2,

(27) 1 Cor. x. 1, 2.

(28) Isaia, lv. 1.

(29) Ezek. xlvii. 1.

(30) Zach. xiii. 1.

(31) D. Hieronymus epist. 85.

washes away uncleanness, and is, therefore, strikingly illustrative of the virtue and efficacy of baptism, which washes away the stains of sin. We may also add that, like water which cools the body, baptism in a great measure extinguishes the fire of concupiscence in the soul. (32)

But, although, in case of necessity, simple water un- mixed with any other ingredient, is sufficient for the mat- ter of baptism; yet, when administered in public with solemn ceremonies, the Catholic Church guided by apos- tolic tradition, the more fully to express its efficacy, has uniformly observed the practice of adding holy chrism.(33) And, although it may be doubted whether this or that water be genuine, such as the Sacrament requires, it can never be matter of doubt that the proper and the only matter of baptism is natural water.

Chrism, why used in baptism.

Having carefully explained the matter, which is one of the two parts of which the Sacrament consists, the pastor will evince equal diligence in explaining the second, that is the form, which is equally necessary with the first. In the explication of this Sacrament, a necessity of in- creased care and study arises, as the pastor will perceive, from the circumstance that the knowledge of so holy a mystery, is not only in itself a source of pleasure to the faithful, as is generally the case with regard to religious knowledge, but, also, very desirable for almost daily practical use. This Sacrament, as we shall explain in its proper place, is frequently administered by the laity, and most frequently, by women; and it, therefore, becomes necessary to make all the faithful indiscriminately, well acquainted with whatever regards its substance.

Form of baptism to be carefully explained.

The pastor, therefore, will teach, in clear, unambiguous language intelligible to every capacity, that the true and essential form of baptism is: " I BAPTISE THEE IN THE " NAME OF THE FATHER, AND OF THE SON, AND OF THE

In what it consists, and when instituted.

(32) De materia bapt. vid. Conc. Florent. et Trid. sess. 7, can. 2, & de consecrat. dist. 4. item D. Thom. p. 3, q. 56, art. 5.

(33) Ambr. lib. 1, sacr. c. 2. et Innoc. lib. 1. decr. tit. 1. c. 3.

“HOLY GHOST:” a form delivered by our Lord and Saviour when, as we read in S. Matthew, he gave to his Apostles the command: “Going teach all nations, baptising them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost.”(34) By the word “baptising,” the Catholic Church, instructed from above, most justly understands that the form of the Sacrament should express the action of the minister, and this takes place when he pronounces the words: “I baptise thee.” Besides the minister of the Sacrament, the person to be baptised and the principal efficient cause of baptism should be mentioned. The pronoun “thee,” and the names of the Divine Persons are, therefore, distinctly added; and, thus, the absolute form of the Sacrament is expressed in the words already mentioned: “I baptise thee in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost.” Baptism is the work not of the Son alone, of whom S. John says: “This is he who baptiseth;” (35) but of the three Persons of the blessed Trinity. By saying, however, “in the name,” not names, we distinctly declare that in the Trinity there is but one nature and Godhead. The word “name” is here referred not to the persons, but to the divine essence, virtue and power, which are one and the same in the three Persons. (36)

What essential, what not essential, to it.

It is however to be observed, that of the words contained in this form, which we have shown to be the true and essential one, some are absolutely necessary, the omission of them rendering the valid administration of the Sacrament impossible; whilst others, on the contrary, are not so essential as to affect its validity. Of the latter kind is, in the Latin form, the word “ego,” (I) the force of which is included in the word “baptizo,” (I baptise)—Nay more, the Greek Church, adopting a different manner of expressing the form, and being of opinion that it is unnecessary to make mention of the minister, omits the pronoun altogether. The form universally used in the Greek Church is: "Let this servant of Christ be baptised in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost." It appears, however, from the opinion and definition of the Council of Florence, that the Greek form is valid, because the words of which it consists, sufficiently express what is essential to the validity of baptism, that is, the ablution which then takes place.

(34) Matth. xxviii. 19.

(35) John, i. 33.

(36) Vid. Aug. contra Donatist. lib. 6, c. 25. D. Thom. p. 3, q. 66. art. 5.

If at any time the Apostles baptised in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ only, (37) they did so, no doubt, by the inspiration of the Holy Ghost, in order, in the infancy of the Church, to render their preaching in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ more illustrious, and to proclaim more effectually his divine and infinite power. If, however, we examine the matter more closely, we shall find that the Greek form omits nothing which the Saviour himself commands to be observed; for the name of Jesus Christ implies the Person of the Father by whom, and that of the Holy Ghost in whom he was anointed. However, the use of this form by the Apostles becomes, perhaps, matter of doubt, if we yield to the opinions of Ambrose (38) and Basil, (39) Holy Fathers eminent for sanctity and of paramount authority, who interpret "baptism in the name of Jesus Christ" as contradistinguished to "baptism in the name of John," and who say that the Apostles did not depart from the ordinary and usual form which comprises the distinct names of the three Persons. Paul, also, in his epistle to the Galatians, seems to have expressed himself in a similar manner: "As many of you," says he, "as have been baptised in Christ, have put on Christ:" (40) meaning that they were baptised in the faith of Christ, and with no other form than that commanded by him to be observed.

Baptism in the name of Christ only.

What has been said on the principal points which regard the matter and form of the Sacrament will be found sufficient.

Baptism may be administered

(37) Acts, ii. 38, & viii. 16, & x. 48, & xix. 5.

(38) Ambr. lib. 1. de Spiritu Sancto, c. 3.

(39) Basil. lib. 1. de Spiritu Sancto, c. 12.

(40) Gal. iii. 27.

by immersion, infusion, or aspersion.

ficient for the instruction of the faithful; but, as in the administration of the Sacrament, the legitimate ablution should also be observed, on this point too the pastor will explain the doctrine of the Church. He will briefly inform the faithful that, according to the common practice of the Church, baptism may be administered by immersion, infusion, or aspersion; and that administered in either of these forms it is equally valid. In baptism water is used to signify the spiritual ablution which it accomplishes, and on this account baptism is called by the Apostle, a "laver." (41) This ablution takes place as effectually by immersion, which was for a considerable time the practice in the early ages of the Church, as by infusion, which is now the general practice, or by aspersion, which was the manner in which Peter baptised, when he converted and gave baptism to "about three thousand souls." (42) It is also matter of indifference to the validity of the Sacrament, whether the ablution is performed once or thrice; we learn from the epistle of S. Gregory the great to Leander, that baptism was formerly, and may still be validly administered in the Church in either way. (43) The faithful, however, will follow the practice of the particular Church to which they belong.

Two important matters to be observed in its administration.

The pastor will be particularly careful to observe that the baptismal ablution is not to be applied indifferently to any part of the body, but principally to the head, which is preeminently the seat of all the internal and external senses; and also that he who baptises is to pronounce the words which constitute the form of baptism, not before or after, but when performing the ablution.

Baptism, when instituted.

When these things have been explained, it will also be expedient to remind the faithful that, in common with the other Sacraments, baptism was instituted by Christ. On this subject, the pastor will frequently point out two different periods of time which relate to baptism—the one

(41) Eph. v. 26. (42) Acts, ii. 41. (43) Greg. l. i. regist. epist. 41.

the period of its institution by the Redeemer—the other, of the establishment of the law which renders it obligatory. With regard to the former, it is clear that this Sacrament was instituted by our Lord, when, being baptised by John, he gave to the water the power of sanctifying. S. Gregory Nazianzen (44) and S. Augustine testify that to the water was then imparted the power of regenerating to spiritual life. In another place S. Augustine says: “From the moment that Christ is immersed “in water, water washes away all sins:” (45) and again, “the Lord is baptised, not because he had occasion to be “cleansed, but by the contact of his pure flesh to purify “the waters, and impart to them the power of cleansing.” The circumstances which attended the event afford a very strong argument to prove that baptism was then instituted by our Lord. The three persons of the most Holy Trinity, in whose name baptism is conferred, manifest their august presence—the voice of the Father is heard—the Person of the Son is present—the Holy Ghost descends in form of a dove—and the heavens, into which we are enabled to enter by baptism, are thrown open. (46)

Should we, however, ask how our Lord has endowed water with a virtue so great, so divine; this indeed is an enquiry which transcends the power of the human understanding. That when our Lord was baptised, water was consecrated to the salutary use of baptism, deriving, although instituted before the passion, all its virtue and efficacy from the passion, which is the consummation, as it were, of all the actions of Christ—this, indeed, we sufficiently comprehend. (47)

Water consecrated to the use of baptism, when Christ was baptised.

The second period to be distinguished, that is, when the law of baptism was promulgated, also admits of no doubt. The Holy Fathers are unanimous in saying, that after the resurrection of our Lord, when he gave to his Apostles the command: “Go, and teach all nations, baptising them.

The law of baptism, when promulgated.

(44) Greg. orat. in nat. Salvat. circa finem.

(45) Aug. serm. 29, 36, et 37. de temp.

(46) Matth. iii. 16, 17.—Mark, i. 10, 11.—Luke, ii. 21, 22.

(47) Vid. Hieron. in com. in 3. cap. Matth. Aug. serm. 36, de temp.

“ in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost;” (48) the law of baptism became obligatory, on all, who were to be saved. This is to be inferred from these words of S. Peter: “ who hath regenerated us unto a lively hope, by the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead;” (49) and also from the words of S. Paul; “ He delivered himself up for it:” (he speaks of the Church) “ that he might sanctify it, cleansing it by the laver of water in the word of life.” (50) In both passages, the obligation of baptism is referred to the time, which followed the death of our Lord. These words of our Lord: “ Unless a man be born again of water and the Holy Ghost, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God,” (51) refer also, no doubt, to the time subsequent to his passion. If then the pastor use all diligence in explaining these truths accurately to the faithful, impossible that they should not fully appreciate the high dignity of this Sacrament, and entertain towards it the most profound veneration; a veneration which will be heightened by the reflection, that the Holy Ghost, by his invisible agency, still infuses into the heart, at the moment of baptism, those blessings of incomparable excellence, and of inestimable value, which were so strikingly manifested, by miracles, at the baptism of Christ our Lord. Were our eyes, like those of the servant of Eliseus, (52) opened to see these heavenly things, who so insensible as not to be lost in rapturous admiration of the divine mysteries, which baptism would then present to the astonished view! when, therefore, the riches of this Sacrament are unfolded to the faithful by the pastor, so as to enable them to behold them, if not with the eyes of the body, with those of the soul illumined with the light of faith, is it not reasonable to anticipate similar results?

The ministers of the Sacrament.

In the next place, it appears not only expedient but necessary, to say who are ministers of this Sacrament; in order that those to whom this office is specially confided, (48) Mark, xvi. 15.—Matth. xxviii. 19. (49) 1 Pet. i. 3.

(50) Eph. v. 25, 26. (51) John, iii. 5. (52) 4 Kings, vi. 17.

may study to perform its functions, religiously and holily; and that no one, outstepping, as it were, his proper limits, may unseasonably take possession of, or arrogantly assume, what belongs to another; for, as the Apostle teaches, order is to be observed in all things. (53)

The faithful, therefore, are to be informed that of those who administer baptism there are three gradations: bishops and priests hold the first place; to them belongs the administration of this Sacrament, not by any extraordinary concession of power, but by right of office; for to them, in the persons of the Apostles, was addressed the command: "Go, baptise." (54) Bishops, it is true, not to neglect the more weighty charge of instructing the faithful, generally leave its administration to priests; but the authority of the Fathers, (55) and the usage of the Church, prove that priests exercise this function of the ministry by a right inherent in the priestly order, a right which authorises them to baptise even in presence of the bishop. Ordained to consecrate the Holy Eucharist, the Sacrament of peace and unity, (56) it is necessary that they be invested with power to administer all those things, which are required to enable others to participate of that peace and unity. If, therefore, the Fathers have at any time said, that without the leave of the bishop, the priest has not power to baptise; they are to be understood to speak of that baptism only, which was administered on certain days of the year with solemn ceremonies.

Bishops and priests, by right of office:

Next to bishops and priests, are deacons, for whom, as numerous decrees of the holy Fathers attest, it is not lawful, without the permission of the bishop or priest to administer baptism. (57)

Deacons by permission.

Those who may administer baptism, in case of necessity, but without its solemn ceremonies, hold the third and last place; and in this class are included all, even the

All persons in case of necessity; but without its solemn ceremonies.

(53) 1 Cor. xiv. 40.

(54) Math. xxviii. 19.

(55) Isid. lib. 2, de offic. Eccles. cap. 4.

(56) 1 Cor. x. 17.

(57) Distinct, 93, cap. 13.

laity, men and women, to whatever sect they may belong. This power extends, in case of necessity, even to Jews, infidels, and heretics; provided, however, they intend to do what the Catholic Church does in that act of her ministry. Already established by the decrees of the ancient Fathers and Councils, these things have been again confirmed by the Council of Trent, which denounces anathema against those who presume to say, "that baptism, even when administered by heretics, in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost, with the intention of doing what the Church does, is not true baptism." (58)

In this, the goodness and wisdom of God to be admired.

And here let us admire the supreme goodness and wisdom of our Lord, who, seeing the necessity of this Sacrament for all, not only instituted water, than which nothing can be more common, as its matter; but also placed its administration within the jurisdiction of all. In its administration, however, as we have already observed, all are not allowed to use the solemn ceremonies; not that rites and ceremonies are of higher dignity, but because they are of inferior necessity to the Sacrament.

Order to be observed by the ministers of baptism.

Let not the faithful, however, imagine that this office is given promiscuously to all, so as to supersede the propriety of observing a certain order amongst those who administer baptism: when a man is present, a woman, when a clerk, a layman; when a priest, a simple clerk, should not administer this Sacrament. Midwives, however, when accustomed to its administration, are not to be found fault with, if sometimes, when a man is present, who is unacquainted with the manner of its administration, they perform what may otherwise appear to belong more properly to men.

Sponsors, of ancient institution, why instituted.

To those who, as we have hitherto explained, administer baptism, another class of persons is to be added, who, according to the most ancient practice of the Church, assist at the baptismal font; and, who, although formerly called by sacred writers by the common name of sponsors or sureties, are now called God-fathers and God-mothers. (59) As this is an office common almost to all the laity, the pastor will teach its principal duties, with care and accuracy. He will, in the first instance, explain why, at baptism, besides those who administer the Sacrament, God-fathers and God-mothers are also required. The propriety of the practice will at once appear, if we keep in view the nature of baptism, that it is a spiritual regeneration, by which we are born children of God; of which S. Peter says: "As newborn infants desire the "rational milk without guile." (60) As, therefore, every one, after his birth, requires a nurse and instructor, by whose assistance and assiduity he is brought up, and formed to learning and morality; so those, who, by the efficacy of the regenerating waters of baptism, are born to spiritual life, should be intrusted to the fidelity and prudence of some one, from whom they may imbibe the precepts of the Christian religion, and the spirit of Christian piety; and thus grow up gradually in Christ, until, with the divine assistance, they at length arrive at the full growth of perfect manhood. This necessity must appear still more imperious, if we recollect, that the pastor, who is charged with the public care of his parish, has not sufficient time to undertake the private instruction of children in the rudiments of faith. For this very ancient practice, we have this illustrious testimony of S. Denis: "It occurred," says he, "to our divine leaders," (so he calls the Apostles,) "and they in their wisdom ordained, "that infants should be introduced into the Church, in this "holy manner—that their natural parents should deliver "them to the care of some one well skilled in divine "things, as to a master under whom, as a spiritual father "and guardian of his salvation in holiness, the child may

(58) Trid. sess. 7, can. de consec. dist. 4, cap. 24. Aug. lib. 7. contra Donatist. cap. 51, et ibid. lib. 3, cap. 10, et lib. 2, contra Parmen. et Concil. Lat. cap. 1, et Conc. Florent. in decr. Eugenii.

(59) Tert. l. de bapt. c. 18, et de coron. milit. cap. 3.

(60) 1 Pet. ii. 2.

“lead the remainder of his life.” (61) The same doctrine is confirmed by the authority of Higinus. (62)

Affinity contracted in baptism, what and between whom.

The Church, therefore, in her wisdom, has ordained that not only the person who baptises, contracts a spiritual affinity with the person baptised, but also the sponsor with the God-child and its parents; so that marriage cannot be lawfully contracted by them, and if contracted, it is null and void.

Duties of Sponsors.

The faithful are also to be taught the duty of sponsors; for such is the negligence with which the office of sponsor is treated in the Church, that its name only remains; whilst few, if any, have the least idea of its sanctity. Let all sponsors then, at all times recollect that they are strictly bound to exercise a constant vigilance over their spiritual children, and carefully to instruct them in the maxims of a Christian life; that they may approve themselves through life, such as their sponsors promised they should be, by the solemn ceremony of becoming sponsors. On this subject, the words of S. Denis demand attention: Speaking in the person of the sponsor, he says: “I promise, “by my constant exhortations to induce this child; when “he comes to a knowledge of religion, to renounce every “thing opposed to his Christian calling, and to profess “and perform the sacred promises, which he made at the “baptismal font.” (63) S. Augustine also says: “I most “earnestly admonish you, men and women, who have be- “come sponsors, to consider that you stood as sureties “before God, for those whose sponsors you have under- “taken to become.” (64) And, indeed, it is the paramount duty of every man, who undertakes any office, to be indefatigable in the discharge of the duties which it imposes; and he, who solemnly professed to be the teacher and guardian of another, should not abandon to destitution him whom he once received under his care

(61) Dionys. de Eccl. Hier. c. 7. parte 3.

(62) Habetur de consec. dist. 5, cap. 100, et Leo pp. ib. e. 101, et Conc. Mogunt. ib. cap. 101, et 30. q. 1.

(63) Loco. sup. cit.

(65) Loco sup. cit. 64. (64) D. Aug. serm. 165, de temp. et ser. 215.

and protection, as long as he should have occasion for either. Speaking of the duties of sponsors, S. Augustine comprises, in a few words, the lessons of instruction which they are bound to inculcate upon the minds of their spiritual children: "They ought," says he, "to admonish them to observe chastity, love justice, cherish charity; and, above all, they should teach them the Creed, the Lord's prayer, the ten commandments, and the rudiments of the Christian religion." (65)

Hence, it is not difficult to decide, who are inadmissible as sponsors. To those, who are unwilling to discharge its duties with fidelity, or who cannot do so with care and accuracy, this sacred trust, no doubt, should not be confided. Besides, therefore, the natural parents, who, to mark the great difference that exists between this spiritual and the carnal bringing up of youth, are not permitted to undertake this charge, heretics, Jews particularly, and infidels, are on no account to be admitted to the office of sponsor. The thoughts and cares of these enemies of the Catholic Church are, continually, employed in darkening, by falsehood, the true faith, and subverting all Christian piety. (66)

Who are inadmissible as Sponsors.

The number of sponsors is also limited by the Council of Trent, to one male or female; or at most, to one male and one female; because a number of teachers may confuse the order of discipline and instruction; and also to prevent the multiplication of affinities, which must impede a wider diffusion of society by means of lawful marriage. (67)

Number of Sponsors.

If the knowledge of what has been hitherto explained, be, as it is, of importance to the faithful, it is no less important to them to know, that the law of baptism, as established by our Lord, extends to all, in so much, that

The law of baptism extends to all.

(65) Serm. 165, de temp. de cons. dist. 4. c. 120.

(66) 30. q. 1 cap. 1 D. Thom. p. 3, q. 67, art. 8, ad 2. ex Mogunt. Concil. de consec. dist. 4, cap. 102.

(67) De conc. dist. 4. c. 101. et Concil. Trid. sess. 14, c. 10, de refor. Matrim.

unless they are regenerated through the grace of baptism, be their parents, Christians or infidels, they are born to eternal misery and everlasting destruction. The duty of the pastor, therefore, demands of him a frequent exposition of these words of the Gospel: "Unless a man be "born again of water and the Holy Ghost, he cannot
"enter into the kingdom of God." (68)

Infant
Baptism proved.

I.

That this law extends, not only to adults, but also to infants, and that the Church has received this its interpretation from Apostolic tradition, is confirmed by the authority and strengthened by the concurrent testimony of the Fathers. Besides, it is not to be supposed, that

II.

Christ our Lord, would have withheld the sacrament of baptism, and the grace which it imparts from children, of whom he said: "Suffer the little children, and stay them
"not from coming unto me; for the kingdom of heaven
"is for such" (69)—from children whom he embraced—upon whom he imposed hands—whom he blessed. (70)

III.

Moreover, when we read that an entire family was baptised by S. Paul, (71) children, who are included in their number, must, it is obvious, have also been cleansed in the purifying waters of baptism. Circumcision, too, which was a figure of baptism, affords a strong argument in proof of this primitive practice. That children were circumcised on the eighth day is universally known. (72) If, then, circumcision, "made by hand, in despoiling of the body "of the flesh," (73) was profitable to children, shall not baptism, which is the circumcision of Christ, not "made

IV.

V.

"by hand," be also profitable to them? Finally, to use the words of the Apostle, "if by one man's offence, death
"reigned through one; much more they, who receive abundance of grace, and of the gift, and of justice, shall

(68) John, iii. 5. De his vide Clem. pp. epist. 4. in med. Aug. in Joan. tract. 13. et de Eccles. dogm. cap. 24. Amb. de iis qui myst. initiantur, c. 4. Concil Lateran, c. 1. Trid. sess. 7. can. 51. (69) Matth. xix. 14.

(70) Mark, x. 16.

(71) 1 Cor. i. 16. Acts, xvi. 33.

(72) Gen. xxi. 4. Lev. xii. 5. Luke, i. 59, & ii. 21.

(73) Coloss. ii. 11.

“reign in life through one, Jesus Christ.” (74) If, then, through the transgression of Adam, children inherit the stain of primeval guilt, is there not still stronger reason to conclude, that the efficacious merits of Christ the Lord must impart to them that justice and those graces, which will give them a title to reign in eternal life? This happy consummation baptism alone can accomplish. (75) The pastor, therefore, will inculcate the absolute necessity of administering baptism to infants, and of gradually forming their tender minds to piety, by Christian precept; according to these admirable words of the Wiseman: “A young man according to his way, even when he is old, he will not depart from it.” (76)

Moral reflection.

That when baptised they receive the mysterious gifts of faith cannot be matter of doubt; not that they believe by the formal assent of the mind, but because their incapacity is supplied by the faith of their parents, if the parents profess the true faith, if not, (to use the words of S. Augustine) “by that of the universal society of the saints;” (77) for they are said with propriety to be presented for baptism by all those, to whom their initiation in that sacred rite was a source of joy, and by whose charity they are united to the communion of the Holy Ghost.

Faith, how imparted to infants in baptism.

The faithful are earnestly to be exhorted, to take care that their children be brought to the church, as soon as it can be done with safety, to receive solemn baptism: infants, unless baptised, cannot enter heaven, and hence we may well conceive how deep the enormity of their guilt, who, through negligence, suffer them to remain without the grace of the sacrament, longer than necessity may require; particularly at an age so tender as to be exposed to numberless dangers of death. (78) With regard

Children to be baptised with as little delay as possible.

Adults to

(74) Rom. v. 17.

(75) Conc. Trid. sess. 5. decret. de peccato Origin. et sess. 7. de baptism. cap. 12, 13, 14. Dionys. de Eccles. Hier. cap 7. Cyprian. ep. 59. Aug. epist. 28. et lib. 1. de peccat. merit. c. 23. Chrys. hom. de Adamo et Evâ. Conc. Milevit. c. 2. et de consec. dist. 4. passim.

(76) Prov. xxii. 6.

(77) Ep. 23 ad Bon.

(78) Aug. lib. 3 de orig. anim. c. 9. et lib. 1. de pecc. merit. c. 2, et ep. 28.

be invited and prepared to receive baptism.

- I. to adults who enjoy the perfect use of reason, persons, for instance, born of infidel parents, the practice of the primitive Church points out a different manner of proceeding: to them the Christian faith is to be proposed; and they are earnestly to be exhorted, allured, and invited, to embrace it. If converted to the Lord God, they are then to be admonished not to defer baptism beyond the time prescribed by the Church: it is written, “delay not to be converted to the Lord, and defer it not from day to day;” (79) and they are to be taught, that in their regard perfect conversion consists in regeneration by baptism. Besides, the longer they defer baptism, the longer are they deprived of the use and graces of the other Sacraments, which fortify in the practice of the Christian religion, and which are accessible through baptism only.
- II. They are also deprived of the inestimable graces of baptism, the salutary waters of which not only wash away all the stains of past sins, but also enrich the soul with divine grace, which enables the Christian to avoid sin for the future, and preserve the invaluable treasures of righteousness and innocence: effects which, confessedly, constitute a perfect epitome of a Christian life. (80)

Baptism of adults, why deferred.

- I. On this class of persons, however, the Church does not confer this Sacrament hastily: she will have it deferred for a certain time; nor is the delay attended with the same danger, as in the case of infants, which we have already mentioned: and should any unforeseen accident deprive adults of baptism, their intention of receiving it, and their repentance for past sins, will avail them to grace and righteousness.
- II. Nay, this delay seems to be attended with some advantages.—The Church must take particular care, that none approach this Sacrament, whose hearts are vitiated by hypocrisy and dissimulation; and, by the intervention of some delay, the intentions of such as solicit baptism, are better ascertained. In this wise precaution

(79) Eccl. v. 8.

(80) Tertul. lib. de penit. cap. 6. et de præscript. cap. 41. Cypr. epist. 13. de consec. dist. 4. c. 64. et 65. Aug. lib. de fide et operib. c. 9.

originated a decree, passed by the ancient councils, the purport of which was, that Jewish converts, before admission to baptism, should spend some months in the ranks of the Catechumens. The candidate for baptism is, also, thus better instructed in the faith which he is to profess, and in the morality which he is to practice; and the Sacrament, when administered with solemn ceremonies, on the appointed days of Easter and Pentecost only, is treated with more religious respect.

III.

IV.

Sometimes, however, when there exists a just cause to exclude delay, as in the case of imminent danger of death, its administration is not to be deferred; particularly, if the person to be baptised is well instructed in the mysteries of faith. This, we find, to have been done by Philip, and by the prince of the Apostles, when, without the intervention of any delay, the one baptised the Eunuch of Queen Candaces, the other, Cornelius, as soon as they professed a willingness to embrace the faith of Christ. (81) The faithful are, also, to be instructed in the necessary dispositions for baptism, that, in the first place, they must desire and purpose to receive it; for, as in baptism we die to sin and engage to live a new life, it is fit that it be administered to those, only, who receive it of their own free will and accord, and is to be forced upon none. Hence, we learn from holy tradition, that it has been the invariable practice of the Church, to administer baptism to no individual, without previously asking him if he be willing to receive it. (82) This disposition even infants are presumed not to want—the will of the Church, when answering for them, is declared in the most explicit terms.

When not to be deferred.

Insane persons, who are favoured with lucid intervals, and, during these lucid intervals, express no wish to be baptised, are not to be admitted to baptism, unless in extreme cases when death is apprehended. In such cases, if, previously to their insanity, they gave intimation of a wish to be baptised, the Sacrament is to be administered:

Insane persons, when to be baptised, and when not.

(81) Acts, viii. 38. & x. 48.

(82) Aug. lib. de pæn. medi. c. 2. D. Thom. 3. p. q. 63. §. 7.

without such indication previously given, they are not to be admitted to baptism; (83) and the same rule is to be followed with regard to persons in a state of lethargy. But if they never enjoyed the use of reason, the authority and practice of the Church decide, that they are to be baptised in the faith of the Church, on the same principle that children are baptised, before they come to the use of reason.

Three conditions required in adults, faith, compunction, and a firm purpose of avoiding sin.

Besides a wish to be baptised, in order to obtain the grace of the Sacrament, faith, for the same reason, is also necessary: our Lord has said: "he that believes and is baptised shall be saved." (84) Another necessary condition is compunction for past sins, and a fixed determination to refrain from their future commission: should any one dare to approach the baptismal font, a slave to vicious habits, he should be instantly repelled, for what so obstructive to the grace and virtue of baptism, as the obdurate impenitence of those who are resolved to persevere in the indulgence of their unhallowed passions? Baptism should be sought with a view to put on Christ and to be united to him; and it is, therefore, manifest that he who purposes to persevere in sin, should be repelled from the sacred font, particularly if we recollect that none of those things which belong to Christ and his Church, are to be received in vain, and that, as far as regards sanctifying and saving grace, baptism is received, in vain by him who purposes to live according to the flesh, and not according to the spirit. (85) As far, however, as regards the validity of the Sacrament, if, when about to be baptised, the adult intends to receive what the Church administers, he, no doubt, validly receives the Sacrament. Hence, to the vast multitude, who, as the Scripture says, "being compunct in heart," asked him and the other Apostles what they should do, Peter answered: "Do penance, and be baptised, every one of you;" (86) and in another place: "Repent, therefore, and be converted, that your (83) D. Thom. 3. p. q. 86. ar. 12.

(84) Mark, xvi. 16.

(85) Rom. viii. 1.

(86) Acts, ii. 38.

“ sins may be blotted out.” (87) Writing to the Romans, S. Paul also clearly shows, that he who is baptised should entirely die to sin; and he therefore admonishes us, “ not to yield our members as instruments of iniquity unto sin; but present ourselves to God, as those that are alive from the dead.” (88)

Frequent reflection upon these truths cannot fail, in the first place, to fill the minds of the faithful with admiration of the infinite goodness of God, who, uninfluenced by any other consideration than that of his own tender mercy, gratuitously bestowed upon us, undeserving as we are, a blessing such as baptism—a blessing so extraordinary, so divine! If, in the next place, they consider how spotless should be the lives of those, who have been made the objects of such singular munificence, they cannot fail to be convinced of the imperative obligation imposed upon them, to spend each day of their lives in such sanctity and religious fervor, as if it were that on which they had received the sacrament and were ennobled by the grace of baptism. To inflame their minds, however, with a zeal for true piety, the pastor will find no means more efficacious than an accurate exposition of the effects of baptism.

Reflections
I.

II.

As, then, these effects are to afford matter of frequent instruction, that the faithful may be rendered more sensible of the high dignity to which they are raised by baptism, and may never suffer themselves to be degraded from its elevation by the disguised artifices or open assaults of Satan, they are to be taught, in the first place, that such is the admirable efficacy of this sacrament as to remit original sin, and actual guilt however enormous. This its transcendant efficacy was foretold long before by Ezekiel, through whom God said: “ I will pour upon you clean water, and you shall be cleansed from all your filthiness.” (89) The Apostle also, writing to the Corinthians, after having enumerated a long catalogue of crimes, adds: “ such you were, but you are washed, but you are

Effects of Baptism.

first effect.

(87) Acts, iii. 19.

(88) Rom. vi. 13.

(89) Ezek. xxxvi. 25.

“sanctified.” (90) That such was, at all times, the doctrine of the Catholic Church, is not matter of doubtful inquiry: “By the generation of the flesh,” says S. Augustine, in his book on the baptism of infants, “we contract original sin only; by the regeneration of the Spirit, we obtain forgiveness not only of original, but also of actual guilt.” (91) S. Jerome, also, writing to Oceanus, says: “All sins are forgiven in baptism.” (92) To obviate the possibility of doubt upon the subject, the Council of Trent, to the definitions of former Councils has added its own distinct declaration, by pronouncing anathema against those, who should presume to think otherwise, or should dare to assert “that, although sin is forgiven in baptism, it is not entirely removed, or totally eradicated; but is cut away in such a manner, as to leave its roots still firmly fixed in the soul.” (93) To use the words of the same holy Council: “God hates nothing in those who are regenerated, for in those who are truly buried with Christ, by baptism, unto death, (94) ‘who walk not according to the flesh,’ there is no condemnation: (95) putting off the old man, and putting on the new, which is created according to God, (96) they become innocent, spotless, innoxious, and beloved of God.”

Concupiscence which remains after baptism, no sin.

That concupiscence, however, or the fuel of sin, still remains, as the Council declares in the same place, must be acknowledged: but concupiscence does not constitute sin, for, as S. Augustine observes, “in children, who have been baptised, the guilt of concupiscence is removed, the concupiscence itself remains for our probation:” and in another place: “the guilt of concupiscence is pardoned in baptism, but its infirmity remains.” (98) Concupis-

(90) 1 Cor. vi. 11. (91) Lib. 1. de pec. merit et remis. c. 15.

(92) Epist. 85. ante medium. (95) Sess. 5. can. 5. (94) Rom. vi. 4.

(95) Rom. viii. 1.

(96) Eph. iv. 22, 24.

(97) De hoc effectu baptismi vide insuper Aug. lib. 1. contra duas ep. Pelag. c. 13. et l. 3. c. 5. in Enchir. c. 64. et lib. 1. de nupt. et concup. c. 25. item Greg. lib. 9. ep. 59. Concil. Vienn. et Flor. in mater. de Sacrament.

(98) Aug. l. 2. de pec. mer. remiss. c. 4.

cence is the effect of sin, and is nothing more than an appetite of the soul, in itself repugnant to reason. If unaccompanied with the consent of the will, or unattended with neglect on our part, it differs essentially from the nature of sin. This doctrine does not dissent from these words of S. Paul: "I did not know concupiscence, if the law did not say: 'thou shalt not covet.'" (99) The Apostle speaks not of the importunity of concupiscence, but of the sinfulness of the interior act of the will, in assenting to its solicitations. The same doctrine is taught by S. Gregory, when he says: "If there are any who assert that, in baptism, sin is but superficially effaced, what can savour more of infidelity than the assertion? By the Sacrament of Baptism sin is utterly eradicated, and the soul adheres entirely to God." (100) In proof of this doctrine he has recourse to the testimony of our Lord himself, who says in S. John: "He that is washed, needeth not but to wash his feet, but is wholly clean." (101)

But should illustration be desired, an express figure and image of the efficacy of baptism will be found in the history of the leprosy of Naaman the Syrian, of whom the Scriptures inform us, that when he had washed seven times in the waters of the Jordan, he was so cleansed from his leprosy, that his flesh became "like the flesh of a child." (102) The remission of all sin, original and actual is, therefore, the peculiar effect of baptism. That this was the object of its institution by our Lord and Saviour, is a truth clearly deduced from the testimony of S. Peter, to say nothing of the array of evidence that might be adduced from other sources: "Do penance," says he, "and be baptised every one of you, in the name of Jesus Christ, for the remission of your sins." (103)

Figure of baptism illustrative of its first effect.

(99) Rom. vii. 7.

(100) L. 9. Reg. epist. 39.

(101) John, xiii. 10.

(102) 4 Kings, v. 14.

(103) Acts, ii. 38. De concupiscentiâ remanente in baptizatis vide Aug. lib. 1. de pec. merit. et remiss. c. 39. item l. 1. contra duas Epist. Pelag. c. 13. lib. 3. c. 3. in medio, et lib. 1. de nupt. et concup. c. 25. et 25. item lib. 6. contra Julian. q. 5. et de verb. Apost. serm. 6.

Second effect of baptism.

But in baptism, not only is sin forgiven, but with it all the punishment due to sin is remitted by a merciful God. To communicate the virtue of the passion of Christ is an effect common to all the Sacraments; but of baptism alone does the Apostle say, that “by it we die and are buried together with Christ.” (104) Hence the Church has uniformly taught, that to impose those offices of piety, usually called by the Fathers works of satisfaction, on him who is to be cleansed in the salutary waters of baptism, would be derogatory in the highest degree to the dignity of this Sacrament. (105) Nor is there any discrepancy between the doctrine here delivered and the practice of the primitive Church, which of old commanded the Jews, when preparing for baptism, to observe a fast of forty days. The fast thus imposed was not enjoined as a work of satisfaction: it was a practical lesson of instruction to those who were to receive the Sacrament; and one well calculated to impress upon their minds a deeper sense of the august dignity of a rite, of which they were not admitted to be participators, without devoting some time to the uninterrupted exercise of fasting and prayer.

This doctrine not inconsistent with the practice of the primitive Church

Baptism gives no exemption from the sentence of the civil law

But, although the remission by baptism of the punishments due to sin cannot be questioned, we are not hence to infer that it gives the offender an exemption from undergoing the punishments awarded by the civil laws to public delinquency—that, for instance, it rescues from the hand of justice the man who is legally condemned to forfeit his life to the violated laws of his country. We cannot, however, too highly commend the religion and piety of those princes, who, on some occasions, remit the sentence of the law, that the glory of God may be the more strikingly displayed in his Sacraments. Baptism

(104) Rom. vi. 3, 4. Col. ii. 12.

(105) Quod pœnz peccatis debitæ remittantur in baptismo, vide Ambros. in c. 11. ad Rom. Aug. l. 1. de nupt. et concupis. c. 33. et in Ench. c. 4. D. Thom. p. 3. q. 69. art. 2. unde nec. ulla est imponenda pœnitentia. Greg. l. 7. regist. Episc. 24. et habetur de consecrat. distinct. 4. cap. ne quod absit. D. Thom. 3. p. q. 68. art. 5.

also remits all the punishment due to original sin in the next life, and this it does through the merits of our Lord Jesus Christ. By baptism, as we have already said, we die with Christ, "for if," says the Apostle, "we have been planted together in the likeness of his death, we shall be also in the likeness of his resurrection." (106)

Should it be asked why, after baptism, we are not exempt in this life, from these inconveniences which flow from original sin, and restored by the influence of this Sacrament to that state of perfection, in which Adam, the father of the human race, was placed before his fall; for this two principal reasons are assigned: the first, that we, who by baptism are united to, and become members of Christ's body, may not be more honored than our head. As, therefore, Christ our Lord, although clothed from his birth with the plenitude of grace and truth, was not divested of human infirmity, until, having suffered and died, he rose to the glory of immortality; it cannot appear extraordinary, if the faithful, even after they have received the grace of justification by baptism, are clothed with frail and perishable bodies; that after having undergone many labors for the sake of Christ, and having closed their earthly career, they may be recalled to life, and found worthy to enjoy with him an eternity of bliss.

These inconveniences of original sin, why not removed by baptism.

The second reason why corporal infirmity, disease, sense of pain, and motions of concupiscence, remain after baptism, is, that in them we may have the germs of virtue from which we shall hereafter receive a more abundant harvest of glory, and treasure up to ourselves more ample rewards. When, with patient resignation, we bear up against the trials of this life, and aided by the divine assistance, subject to the dominion of reason the rebellious desires of the heart, we may and ought to cherish an assured hope, that the time will come when, if with the Apostle we shall have "fought a good fight, finished the course, and kept the faith, the Lord, the just judge, will render to us on that day, a crown of justice, which

II.

An illustration.

“is laid up for us.” (107) Such seems to have been the divine economy with regard to the children of Israel: God delivered them from the bondage of Egypt, having drowned Pharaoh and his host in the sea; (108) yet he did not conduct them immediately into the happy land of promise. He first tried them by a variety and multiplicity of sufferings; and when he afterwards placed them in possession of the promised land, he expelled from their native territories, the other inhabitants; whilst a few other nations, whom they could not exterminate, remained, that the people of God might never want occasions to exercise their warlike fortitude and valor. (109)

III.

To these we may add another consideration, which is, that if to the heavenly gifts with which the soul is adorned in baptism, were appended temporal advantages, we should have good reason to doubt whether many might not approach the baptismal font, with a view to obtain such advantages in this life, rather than the glory to be hoped for in the next; whereas the Christian should always propose to himself not the delusive and uncertain things of this world, “which are seen,” but the solid and eternal enjoyments of the next, “which are not seen.” (110) This life, however, although full of misery, does not want its pleasures and joys. To us, who by baptism, are engrafted as branches on Christ, (111) what source of purer pleasure, what object of nobler ambition, than, taking up our cross, to follow him as our leader, fatigued by no labor, retarded by no danger in pursuit of the rewards of our high vocation; some to receive the laurel of virginity, others the crown of doctors and confessors, some the palm of martyrdom, others the honors appropriated to their respective virtues? These splendid titles of exalted dignity none of us should receive, had we not contended in the race, and stood unconquered in the conflict.

Baptism, the source of happiness to the Christian, even in this life.

Third effect of baptism.

But to return to the effects of baptism, the pastor will teach that, by virtue of this Sacrament, we are not only (107) 2 Tim. iv. 7. (108) Exod. xiv. 27. (109) Judges, iii. 1, 2.

(110) 2 Cor. iv. 17, 18.

(111) John, xv. 2.

delivered from what are justly deemed the greatest of all evils, but are also enriched with invaluable goods. Our souls are replenished with divine grace, by which, rendered just and children of God, we are made coheirs to the inheritance of eternal life; for it is written, "he that believeth and is baptised, shall be saved;" (112) and the Apostle testifies, that the Church is cleansed, "by the laver of water, in the word of life." (113) But grace, according to the definition of the Council of Trent, a definition to which, under pain of anathema, we are bound to defer, not only remits sin, but is also a divine quality inherent in the soul, and, as it were a brilliant light that effaces all those stains which obscure the lustre of the soul, and invests it with increased brightness and beauty. (114) This is also a clear inference from the words of Scripture when it says, that grace is "poured forth," (115) and also when it calls grace, "the pledge" of the Holy Ghost. (116)

The progress of grace in the soul is also accompanied by a most splendid train of virtues; and hence, when writing to Titus, the Apostle says: "He saved us by the laver of regeneration, and renovation of the Holy Ghost, whom he hath poured forth upon us abundantly, through Jesus Christ our Saviour;" (117) S. Augustine, in explanation of the words, "poured forth on us abundantly," says, "that is, for the remission of sins, and for abundance of virtues." (118)

By baptism we are also united to Christ, as members to their head: as, therefore, from the head proceeds the Fourth effect of baptism.

Fifth effect of baptism.

(112) Mark, xvi. 16.

(113) Ephes. v. 26.

(114) Sess. 6, 7, de justific.

(115) Tit. iii. 6.

(116) Eph. i. 14.—2 Cor. i. 22, et v. 5.—Quid sit gratia de qua hic vide August. lib. 1. de peccat. merit. et remiss. c. 10. item de spiritu et litera, c. 28, versus finem. Bernard, serm. 1. in cena domini.

(117) Tit. iii. 5, 6.

(118) De hoc effectu baptismi vide Chrysost. hom. ad Neoph. et baptis. Damas. lib. 2, de fide Orthod. c. 36. Lactant. lib. 3, Divin. Instit. c. 25. Aug. Epist. 23, ad Bonifac. item lib. 1, de peccat. merit. et remiss. c. 29. Prosp. l. 2, de vocat. Gent. c. 9.

power by which the different members of the body are impelled to the proper performance of their peculiar functions; so from the fullness of Christ the Lord, are diffused divine grace and virtue through all those who are justified, qualifying them for the performance of all the offices of Christian piety. (119)

Difficulty of practising virtue even after baptism, whence it arises, how to be combated.

We are, it is true, supported by a powerful array of virtues. It should not, however, excite our surprise if we cannot, without much labour and difficulty undertake, or, at least, perform acts of piety, and of moral virtue. If this is so, it is not because the goodness of God has not bestowed on us the virtues from which these actions emanate; but because there remains, after baptism, a severe conflict of the flesh against the spirit, (120) in which, however, it would not become a Christian to be dispirited or grow faint. Relying on the divine goodness, we should confidently hope, that by a constant habit of leading a holy life, the time will arrive, when "whatever things are modest, whatever just, whatever holy," (121) will also prove easy and agreeable. Be these the subjects of our fond consideration; be these the objects of our cheerful practice; that "the God of peace may be with us" (122)

Sixth effect of baptism.

By baptism, moreover, we are sealed with a character that can never be effaced from the soul, of which, however, it were here superfluous to speak at large, as in what we have already said on the subject, when treating of the Sacraments in general, the pastor will find sufficient matter on the subject, to which he may refer. (123)

Baptism not to be repeated, and why.

But as from the nature and efficacy of this character, it has been defined by the Church, that this Sacrament is on no account to be reiterated, the pastor should frequently and diligently admonish the faithful on this subject, lest at any time they may err on a matter of such moment. The doctrine which prohibits the reiteration of baptism, is that of the Apostle, when he says: "One Lord, one faith, one baptism." (124) Again, when, exhorting the Romans, that dead in Christ by baptism, they lose not the life which they received from him, he says: "In that Christ died to sin, he died once;" (125) he seems clearly to signify that as Christ cannot die again, neither can we die again by baptism. Hence the Church openly professes that she believes "one baptism;" and that this accords with the nature and object of the Sacrament appears from the very idea of baptism, which is a spiritual regeneration. As then, according to the laws of nature, we are born but once, and "our birth," as S. Augustine observes, "cannot be repeated," (126) so, in the supernatural order, there is but one spiritual regeneration, and therefore, baptism, can never be administered a second time. (127)

(119) Quod per baptismum Christi capiti ut membra connectamur, vide August. epist. 23, item lib. 1, de pec. meritis et remiss. c. 16. Prosp. de voc. Gent. l. 1, c. 9. Bernard. serm. 1. in Cæna Dom. D. Thom. 3, p. q. 69. art. 5. (120) Gal. v. 17. (121) Philip. iv. 8.

(122) 2 Cor. xiii. 11.—Vide hac de re Aug. lib. v. contra Julian. c. 2, et 5, item de peccat. merit. et remiss. lib. 1. c. 3.

(123) Vide Aug. lib. 6, contra Donatist. cap. 1. et in epist. Joan. tract. 5. Trid. sess. 7.

Nor let it be supposed that this Sacrament is repeated by the Church, when she admits to the baptismal font those of whose previous baptism reasonable doubts are entertained, making use of this form: "If thou art already baptised, I baptise thee not again; but if thou art not already baptised, I baptise thee in name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost:" in such cases baptism is not to be considered as repeated (its repetition would be an impiety) but as holily, because conditionally administered.

Not repeated, even when administered conditionally.

In this, however, the pastor should use particular precaution, in order to avoid certain abuses which are of almost daily occurrence, to the no small irreverence of this Sacrament. There are those who think that they

When to be administered conditionally.

(124) Eph. iv. 5. (125) Rom. vi. 10. (126) In Joan. tract. 11.

(127) Hac de re vide Trid. Sess. 7, de baptismo, can. 11. et 13. item Concil. Cartha. can. 1, Vien. ut habetur in Clem. 1. lib. de sum. Trinit. D. August. tract. 11. in Joan. Beda in capite 3, Joan. Leo Mag. epist. 57, et 39, D. Thom. 3. p. q. 66, a. 9.

commit no sin by the indiscriminate administration of conditional baptism: if a child is brought before them, they imagine that inquiry as to its previous baptism is unnecessary, and accordingly proceed, without delay, to administer the Sacrament. Nay more, having ascertained that the child received private baptism, they hesitate not to repeat its administration conditionally, making use, at the same time, of the solemn ceremonies of the Church! Such temerity incurs the guilt of sacrilege, and involves the minister in what theologians call "an irregularity." It has been authoritatively decided by pope Alexander, that the conditional form of baptism is to be used only when, after due inquiry, doubts are entertained of the validity of the previous baptism; (128) and in no other case can it ever be lawful to administer baptism a second time, even conditionally. (129)

Seventh effect of baptism.

Besides the many other advantages which accrue to us from baptism, we may look upon it as the last, to which all the rest seem to be referred, that it opens to us the portals of Heaven, which sin had closed against our admission. All these effects, which are wrought in us by virtue of this Sacrament, are distinctly marked by the circumstances which, as the Gospel relates, accompanied the baptism of our Saviour. The heavens were opened, and the Holy Ghost appeared descending upon Christ our Lord, in form of a dove; (130) by which we are given to understand, that to those who are baptised are imparted the gifts of the Holy Spirit, that to them are unfolded the gates of Heaven, opening to them an entrance into glory; not, it is true, immediately after baptism, but in due season, when freed from the miseries of this life, which are incompatible with a state of bliss, they shall exchange a mortal for an immortal life.

(128) Lib. 1. Decretal. tit. de bap-tismo. c. de quidem.

(129) De irregularitate cujus hic est mentio, vid. apostat. et reit. bap-tism. c. ex litterarum, et de Consecr. dist. 4. c. eos qui. et lib. 3. decretal. de bap-tismo et ejus effectu. c. de quibus.

(130) Matth. iii. 16.

These are the fruits of baptism, which, as far as regards the efficacy of the Sacrament, are, no doubt, common to all; but as far as regards the dispositions with which it is received, it is no less certain that all do not participate equally of these heavenly gifts and graces.

Efficacy of the Sacrament common to all, not so its gifts and graces.

It now remains to explain, clearly and concisely, what regards the prayers, rites, and ceremonies of this Sacrament. To rites and ceremonies may, in some measure, be applied what the Apostle says of the gift of tongues, that it is unprofitable to speak, unless he who hears understand. (131) They present an image, and convey the signification of the things that are done in the Sacrament; but if the people understand not their force and significancy, they can be of very little advantage to them. To make them understood, therefore, and to impress the minds of the faithful with a conviction that, although not of absolute necessity, they are of very great importance, and challenge great veneration, are matters which solicit the zeal and industry of the pastor. This, the authority of those by whom they were instituted, who were, no doubt, the Apostles, and also the object of their institution, sufficiently prove. That ceremonies contribute to the more religious and holy administration of the Sacraments, serve to exhibit to the eyes of the beholder a lively picture of the exalted and inestimable gifts which they contain, and impress on the minds of the faithful a deeper sense of the boundless beneficence of God, are truths as obvious as they are unquestionable. (132)

The prayers, rites, and ceremonies, of baptism, to be explained.

Reduced to three heads

But that in his expositions the pastor may follow a certain order, and that the people may find it easier to recollect his instructions, all the ceremonies and prayers which the Church uses in the administration of baptism, are to be reduced to three heads. The first comprehends

Reduced to three heads

(131) 1 Cor. xiv. 2.

(132) De eis ritibus vide Dion. cap. 2. de Eccles. Hier. Clem. Epist. 3. Tertul. lib. de coronâ milit. et de baptism. passim. Origen. hom. 12. in num. Cypr. Epist. 70. item vide de consecr. dist. 4.

such as are observed before coming to the baptismal font—the second, such as are used at the font—the third, those that immediately follow the administration of the Sacrament.

I.
The water, consecration
of.

In the first place, then, the water to be used in baptism should be previously prepared: the baptismal water is consecrated with the oil of mystic unction; and this cannot be done at all times, but, according to ancient usage, on the vigils of certain festivals, which are justly deemed the greatest and the most holy solemnities in the year, and on which alone, except in cases of necessity, it was the practice of the ancient Church to administer baptism. (133) But although the Church, on account of the dangers to which life is continually exposed, has deemed it expedient to change her discipline in this respect, she still observes with the greatest solemnity the festivals of Easter and Pentecost, on which the baptismal water is to be consecrated.

The person to be baptised stands at the church
door.

After the consecration of the water, the other ceremonies that precede baptism, are next to be explained. The person to be baptised is brought or conducted to the door of the church, and is forbidden to enter, as unworthy to be admitted into the house of God, until he has cast off the yoke of the most degrading servitude of Satan, devoted himself unreservedly to Christ, and pledged his fidelity to the just sovereignty of the Lord Jesus. (134)

Catechetical instruction.

The priest then asks what he demands of the Church of God; and having received the answer, he first instructs him catechetically, in the doctrines of the Christian faith, of which a profession is to be made in baptism. (135) This practice of thus communicating instruction, originated, no doubt, in the precept of our Lord, addressed to his Apostles: “Go ye into the whole world, and teach “all nations, baptising them in the name of the Father,

(133) Cypr. epist. 70. Item Basil. de Spiritu S. c. 27. et de consec. dist. 4. c. in Sabbato.

(134) Tertul. de corouâ milit. c. 3. Cyril. Hierosol. Catech. 8.

(135) Clem. Rom. epist. 5. Aug. de fide et oper. c. 9.

“ and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost, teaching them
“ to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded “ you; (136) words from which we may learn that baptism is not to be administered, until, at least, the principal truths of religion are explained. But as the catechetical form consists of question and answer; if the person to be instructed be an adult, he himself answers the interrogatories; if an infant, the sponsor answers according to the prescribed form, and enters into a solemn engagement for the child.

The exorcism comes next in order: it consists of words of sacred and religious import, and of prayers; and is used to expel the devil, to weaken and crush his power.

The exor-cism.

To the exorcism are added other ceremonies, each of which being mystical, has its clear and proper signification. (137) When, for instance, salt is put into the mouth of the person to be baptised, it evidently imports, that by the doctrines of faith, and by the gift of grace, he shall be delivered from the corruption of sin, shall experience a relish for good works, and shall be nurtured with the food of divine wisdom. (138) Again, his forehead, eyes, breast, shoulders, ears, are signed with the

The salt.

The sign of the cross.

sign of the cross, to declare, that by the mystery of baptism, the senses of the person baptised are opened and strengthened, to enable him to receive God, and to understand and observe his commandments. (139) His nostrils and ears are next touched with spittle, and he is then immediately admitted to the baptismal font: by this ceremony we understand that, as sight was given to the blind man, mentioned in the Gospel, whom the Lord, having

The spittle

(136) Mark, xvi. 15. Matth. xxviii. 19, 20.

(137) De exorcismis vide Tertul. de prescript. c. 41. Cypr. epist. 2. Au-
lib. 2. de gratia Dei & peccat. orig. cap. 40. & lib. 2. de Nupt. et concupis.
cap. 26. optat. lib. 4. contra Parmenianum.

(138) Bed. in lib. Esdræ, c. 9. Isid. lib. 2. de offic. eccl. c. 20. et Aug.
lib. 1. confess. c. 11.

(139) De signo crucis vide Tertul. lib. de resurr. carn. Basil. lib. de spi-ritu Sancto. Chrys. contra gentes & alios.

spread clay on his eyes, commanded to wash them in the waters of Siloe; (140) so by the efficacy of holy baptism, a light is let in on the mind, which enables it to discern heavenly truth. (141)

II.
The renunciation.

After the performance of these ceremonies, the person to be baptised approaches the baptismal font, at which are performed other rites and ceremonies, which present a summary of the obligations imposed by the Christian religion. In three distinct interrogatories, he is formally asked by the minister of religion, “dost thou renounce “Satan?” “and all his works?” “and all his pomps?”—to each of which he, or the sponsor in his name, replies in the affirmative. Whoever, then, purposes to enlist under the standard of Christ, must, first of all, enter into a sacred and solemn engagement to renounce the devil and the world, and, as his worst enemies, to hold them in utter detestation. (142)

The oil of catechu-mens.

He is next anointed with the oil of catechumens on the breast and between the shoulders—on the breast, that by the gift of the Holy Ghost he may lay aside error and ignorance, and receive the true faith; for “the just “man liveth by faith” (143)—on the shoulders, that by the grace of the Holy Spirit he may be enabled to shake off negligence and torpor, and engage actively in the performance of good works; for “faith without works “is dead.” (144)

The profession of faith.

Next, standing at the baptismal font, he is interrogated by the minister of religion in these words: “Dost thou “believe in God, the Father Almighty?” to which is answered; “I believe;” a like interrogatory is proposed with regard to the other articles of the creed, successively; and thus is made a solemn profession of faith. These

(140) John, ix. 7.

(141) De saliva Am. lib. 1. de sacram. 1. et de iis qui myst. init. c. 1. et de consecr. distinct. 4. c. postea.

(142) Tertul. lib. de coron. mil. c. 13. & de spectac. c. 4. et de Idol. c. 6. Cypr. epist. 7. 54.

(143) Gal. iii. 11.

(144) James, ii. 26.

two engagements, the renunciation of Satan and all his works and pomps, and the belief of all the articles of the creed, including, as they do, both faith and practice, constitute, it is clear, the whole force and discipline of the law of Christ. (145)

When baptism is now about to be administered, the priest asks him if he will be baptised; to which an answer in the affirmative being given by him, or, if an infant, by the sponsor, the priest performs the ablution, "in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost." As man, by yielding the assent of his will to the wicked suggestions of Satan, fell under a just sentence of condemnation; so God will have none enrolled in the number of his soldiers, but those whose service is voluntary; that by a willing obedience to his commands, they may obtain eternal salvation.

The will of the person to be baptised asked, and when ascertained, baptism is administered.

After the person has been baptised, the priest anoints with chrism the crown of his head, thus giving him to understand, that from the moment of his baptism, he is united as a member to Christ, his head, and ingrafted on his body; and that he is, therefore, called a Christian, from Christ, as Christ is so called from Chrism. What the Chrism signifies, the prayers offered by the priest, as S. Ambrose observes, sufficiently explain. (146)

III. The oil of chrism.

On the person baptised the priest then puts a white garment, saying, "receive this white garment, which mayest thou carry unstained before the judgment-seat of our Lord Jesus Christ; that thou mayest have eternal life. Amen." Instead of a white garment, infants because not formally dressed, receive a white kerchief, accompanied with the same words. According to the doctrine of the Holy Fathers this symbol signifies the glory of the resurrection to which we are born by baptism, the brightness and beauty with which the soul, when purified from the stains of sin, is invested, and the

The white garment.

(145) Cyril. Hier. Catech. 2. & 3.
(146) Lib. 1. de Sacram. Dionys. Eccl. Hierar. c. 5. Cyril. Hieros. Catech. 3. Basil, lib. de Spiritu. Santo, c. 27.

innocence and integrity which the person who has received baptism, should preserve through life. (147)

The burning light.

To signify that faith received in baptism, and inflamed by charity, is to be fed and augmented by the exercise of good works, a burning light is next put into his hand.

The name, its utility, its selection.

Finally, a name is given, which should be taken from some person, whose eminent sanctity has given him a place in the catalogue of the Saints: this simillarity of name will stimulate to the imitation of his virtues and the attainment of his holiness; and we should hope and pray that he who is the model of our imitation, may also, by his advocaey, become the guardian of our safety and salvation. Hence we cannot mark in terms too strong, our disapprobation of the conduct of those who, with a perverse industry, search for, and whose delight it is to distinguish their children by, the names of heathens; and what is still worse, of monsters of iniquity, who, by their profligate lives, have earned an infamous notoriety. By such conduct they practically prove, how little they regard a zeal for Christian piety, who so fondly cherish the memory of impious men, as to wish to have their profane names continually echo in the ears of the faithful.

Recapitulation.

This exposition of baptism, if given by the pastor, will be found to embrace, almost every thing of importance, which regards this Sacrament. We have explained the meaning of the word "baptism," its nature and substance, and also the parts of which it is composed—we have said by whom it was instituted—who are the ministers necessary to its administration—who should be, as it were, the tutors, whose instructions should sustain the weakness of the person baptised—to whom baptism should be administered, and how they should be disposed—what are the virtue and efficacy of the Sacrament.—Finally, we have developed, at sufficient length for our purpose, the rites

(147) Dionys. loco citato. Amb. de iis qui myst. init. c. 8.

(148) De hoc cereo vide Gregor. Nazian. serm. de bapt. Gregor. Turon. lib. 5. cap. 11. Niceph. inst. Eccle. lib. 5. c. 12.

and ceremonies that should accompany its administration. The pastor will recollect that all these instructions have principally for object, to induce the faithful to direct their constant attention and solicitude to the fulfilment of the sacred and inviolable engagements into which they entered at the baptismal font, and to lead lives not unworthy the sanctity of the name and profession of Christian.

---

ON THE SACRAMENT OF CONFIRMATION.

---

IF ever there was a time that demanded the assiduity of the pastor in explaining the Sacrament of Confirmation, it is doubtless the present, when there are found in the Church of God many, by whom it is altogether omitted; whilst very few study to derive from it the fruit of divine grace, which its worthy reception imparts. That this divine blessing therefore, may not seem through their fault, and to the serious injury of their immortal souls, to have been conferred in vain, the faithful are to be instructed, on Whitsunday, and on such other days as the pastor shall deem convenient, in the nature, efficacy and dignity of this Sacrament; so as to make them sensible that not only is it not to be neglected, but that it is to be approached with the greatest reverence and devotion.

Urgent necessity of explaining the Sacrament of confirmation in these days.

To begin therefore with its name, the pastor will inform the faithful that this Sacrament is called Confirmation, because, if no obstacle is opposed to its efficacy, the person who receives it, when anointed with the sacred chrism by the hand of the bishop, who accompanies the unction with these words: "I sign thee with the sign of the cross, and confirm thee with the chrism of salvation, in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy

Why called confirmation.

“ Ghost,” is confirmed in strength by receiving new virtue, and becomes a perfect soldier of Christ. (1)

Confirmation a Sacrament.

That confirmation has all the conditions of a true Sacrament has been, at all times, the doctrine of the Catholic Church, as Pope Melehiades,(2) and many other very holy and ancient pontiffs expressly declare. The truth of this doctrine S. Clement could not have confirmed in stronger terms, than when he says: “ All should hasten, “ without delay to be born again to God, and then to be sealed “ by the bishop, that is, to receive the seven-fold gift of the “ Holy Ghost; for, as we have learned from S. Peter, and “ as the other Apostles taught in obedience to the command “ of our Lord, he who contumeliously and not from necessity, but voluntarily neglects to receive this Sacrament, “ cannot possibly become a perfect Christian.” (3) This same doctrine has been confirmed, as may be seen in their decrees, by the Urbans, the Fabians, the Eusebius’s, pontiffs who, animated with the same spirit, shed their blood for the name of Christ. It is also fortified by the unanimous testimony of the Fathers, amongst whom Denis the Arcopagite, bishop of Athens, teaching how to consecrate and makes use of the holy ointment, says: “ The priest “ clothes the person baptised with a garment emblematic “ of his purity, in order to conduct him to the bishop; and “ the bishop, signing him with the holy and divine ointment, “ makes him partaker of the most holy communion.”(4) Of such importance does Eusebius of Cæsarea deem this Sacrament, that he hesitates not to say, that the heretic Novatus could not receive the Holy Ghost, because, having received baptism, he was not when visited by severe illness, sealed with the sign of chrism.(5) On this subject we might adduce testimonies the most conclusive from S. Ambrose in his book on the Initiated,(6) and from S. August-

(1) Conc. Aur. c. 3, item Flor.

(2) Epist. ad Episcop. Hispan. c. 2. ep. 4, ante finem.

(3) Habes decreta horum Pontificum de consecrat. dist. 5.

(4) S. Dionysius de Eccles. Hierar. c. 2.

(5) Lib. 6, histor. cap. 45.

(6) Lib. de iis qui myst. initiantur. c. 7, lib. 2, c. 104.

tine in his works against the epistles of the Donatist Petilian: so convinced were they, that no doubt could exist as to the reality of this Sacrament, that they not only taught the doctrine, but confirmed its truth by many passages of Scripture, the one applying to it these words of the Apostle: "Grieve not the Holy Spirit of God, whereby you are sealed unto the day of redemption,"(7) the other, these words of the Psalmist: "like the precious ointment on the head, that ran down upon the beard of Aaron,"(8) and also these words of the same Apostle, "The charity of God is poured forth in our hearts by the Holy Ghost who is given to us." (9)

Confirmation, although said by Melchiades to have a most intimate connection with baptism,(10) is yet an entirely different Sacrament: the diversity of the grace which each Sacrament confers, and the diversity of the external sign employed to signify that grace, obviously constitute them different Sacraments. As by the grace of baptism we are begotten to newness of life, and by that of confirmation grow to full maturity, "having put away the things of a child,"(11) we can hence, sufficiently comprehend that the same difference which exists in the natural order between birth and growth, exists also in the supernatural, between baptism which regenerates, and confirmation which imparts full growth and perfect spiritual strength.

Again, if the new difficulties, which the soul has to encounter, demand the aid of a new and distinct Sacrament, it is obvious that as we have occasion for the grace of baptism to stamp upon the soul the impress of the true faith, so it is of the utmost advantage that a new grace

Confirmation entirely different from baptism.
I.

II.

(7) Eph. iv. 30.

(8) Psalm, cxxxii. 2.

(9) Rom. v. 5.—Confirmationem esse sacramentum habes insuper ex Ambros. de Sac. lib. 3, c. 2, lib. de Spiritu Sancto, c. 6 & 7, item Aug. de Trinit. lib. 15, c. 26, et in epist. Joan. tract. 5 & 6, et in Psalmis 26, et ante hos omnes.—Tertul. lib. de Resurr. car. Cypr. epist. 7.—Origen, hom. 9, in Levit. Hieron. contr. Lucif. Cyril. Hieros. Catech. 5.

(10) Epist. ad Episc. Hisp. in med.

(11) 1 Cor. xii. 11.

fortify us with such intrepidity of soul, that no danger, no dread of pains, tortures, death, have power to deter us from the profession of the true faith. Hence, Pope Melchisedes marks the difference between them with minute accuracy in these terms: "In baptism," says he, "the Christian is enlisted into the service, in confirmation he is equipped for battle; at the baptismal font the Holy Ghost imparts the plenitude of innocence, in confirmation the perfection of grace; in baptism we are regenerated to life, after baptism we are fortified for the combat; in baptism we are cleansed, in confirmation we are strengthened; regeneration saves by its own efficacy those who receive baptism in peace, confirmation arms and prepares for the conflict." (12) These are truths not only recorded by other Councils, but specially defined by the Council of Trent, and we are, therefore, no longer at liberty not only to dissent from, but even to entertain the least doubt regarding them. (13)

Instituted
by Christ.

But, to impress the faithful with a deeper sense of the sanctity of this Sacrament, the pastor will make known to them by whom it was instituted; a knowledge the importance of which with regard to all the Sacraments, we have already pointed out. He will, accordingly, inform them that not only was it instituted by our Lord Jesus Christ, but as S. Fabian Bishop of Rome testifies, the chrism and the words used in its administration were also appointed by him: a fact of easy proof to those who believe confirmation to be a Sacrament, for all the sacred mysteries are beyond the power of man, and could have been instituted by God alone. (14)

Its matter,
Chrism.

Of the component parts of the sacrament, and, first, of its matter we now come to treat. The matter of Confirmation is chrism, a word borrowed from the Greek language, and which, although used by profane writers to designate any sort of ointment, is appropriated, by eccle-

(12) Loco citato.

(13) Laod. can. 48, Meld. c. 6. Florent. & Constant. Trid. sess. 7.

(14) Epist. 2, initio.

siastical usage, to signify ointment composed of oil and balsam, and solemnly consecrated by the episcopal benediction. A mixture of oil and balsam, therefore, constitutes the matter of Confirmation; and this mixture of different elements at once expresses the manifold graces of the Holy Ghost, and the excellence of this sacrament. That such is its matter the Church and her councils have uniformly taught; and the same doctrine has been handed down to us by S. Denis, and by many other fathers of authority too great to be questioned, particularly by Pope Fabian, (15) who testifies that the Apostles received the composition of chrism from our Lord, and transmitted it to us. (16) To declare the effects of Confirmation, no sacramental matter could have been more appropriate than chrism: oil, by its nature unctuous and fluid, expresses the plenitude of divine grace, which flows from Christ the head, through the Holy Ghost, and is poured out, "like the precious ointment on the head, that ran down upon the beard of Aaron, to the skirt of his garment;" (17) for "God anointed him with the oil of gladness, above his fellows," (18) and "of his fullness we all have received." (19) Balsam, too, the odour of which is most grateful, signifies that the faithful, made perfect by the grace of Confirmation, diffuse around them, by reason of their many virtues, such a sweet odour that they may truly say with the Apostle: "We are the good odour of Christ unto God." (20) Balsam has also the quality of preserving incorrupt whatever it embalms; a quality well adapted to express the virtue of this Sacrament: prepared by the heavenly grace infused in Confirmation, the souls of the faithful may be easily preserved from the corruption of sin.

Propriety of Chrism as its matter.

The crism is consecrated with solemn ceremonies, by Chrism,

(15) Epist. 3. ad Episc. Orient.

(16) Vid. Aug. in Ps. 44. vers. 9. et lib. 13. de Trinit. cap. 26. Greg. in 1. cap. can. Conc. Laod. cap. 48. et Carth. 2. c. 2. et 3. c. 39. Dionys. de Eccl. Hierar. c. 2. et 4. De oleo vide Ambr. in Ps. 118. et lib. de Spiritu Sancto, cap. 5. Cyprian Epist. 70.

(17) Ps. cxxxii. 2.

(18) Ps. xlv. 8.

(19) John, i. 16.

(20) 2 Cor. ii. 15.

why consecrated, and by bishops only.

the bishop. That this its solemn consecration is in accordance with the instructions of our Lord, when at his last supper he committed to his Apostles the manner of making chrism, we learn from Pope Fabian, a man eminently distinguished by his sanctity, and by the glory of martyrdom. (21) Indeed, reason alone demonstrates the propriety of this consecration; for in most of the other sacraments, Christ so instituted the matter as to impart to it holiness; it was not only his will that water should constitute the matter of the Sacrament of Baptism, when he said: "Unless a man be born again of water and the Holy Ghost, he cannot enter the kingdom of God;" (22) but he also, at his own baptism, imparted to it the power of sanctifying: "The water of baptism," says S. Chrysostome, "had it not been sanctified by contact with the body of our Lord, could not cleanse the sins of believers." (23) As, therefore, our Lord did not consecrate by using, the matter of Confirmation, it becomes necessary to consecrate it by holy and devout prayer, which is the exclusive prerogative of bishops, who are constituted the ordinary ministers of this Sacrament.

Form of the Sacrament of Confirmation.

The other component part of this Sacrament, that is to say, its form, comes next to be explained. The faithful are to be admonished that when receiving Confirmation, they are, on hearing the words pronounced by the bishop, earnestly to excite themselves to sentiments of piety, faith, and devotion, that on their part no obstacle may be opposed to the heavenly grace of the Sacrament. The form of Confirmation consists of these words: "I SIGN THEE WITH THE SIGN OF THE CROSS, AND I CONFIRM THEE WITH THE CRISM OF SALVATION, IN THE NAME OF THE FATHER, AND OF THE SON, AND OF THE HOLY GHOST." Were we to acknowledge the incompetency of reason to establish the truth and strict propriety of this form, the authority of the Catholic Church, by which it has been at all times taught and recognised, would alone be sufficient to dispel all doubt on the subject: judging of it, however, by the standard of reason, we arrive at the same conclusion. The form of the Sacrament should embrace whatever is necessary to explain its nature and substance; with regard to the nature and substance of Confirmation, there are three things that demand particular attention, the divine power, which, as a primary cause, operates in the Sacrament; the spiritual strength which it imparts to the faithful unto salvation; and lastly, the sign impressed on him who is to engage in the warfare of Christ. The words "in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost," with which the form closes, sufficiently declare the first; the second is comprised in the words, "I confirm thee with the crism of salvation;" and the words, "I sign thee with the sign of the cross," with which the form opens, convey the third.

(21) S. Fab. papa, uti supra.

(22) John, iii. 5.

(23) Hom. 4. oper. imperf. et habetur de consec. dist. 4. c. Nunquid.

To whom principally, is entrusted the administration of this Sacrament, is a matter to which the pastor will also call the attention of the faithful. There are many, according to the prophet, who run and yet are not sent; and hence the necessity of informing the faithful who are its true and legitimate ministers, in order that they may really receive the Sacrament and grace of Confirmation. (24) That bishops alone are the ordinary ministers of this Sacrament, is the doctrine of Scripture: we read in the Acts of the Apostles, that when Samaria had received the Gospel, Peter and John were sent to them and prayed for them, that they might receive the Holy Ghost; "for he was not yet come upon any of them, but they were only baptised, in the name of the Lord Jesus." (25) Here we find that he who administered baptism, having only attained the degree of deacon, had no power to administer Confirmation; its administration was reserved to a more elevated order of the ministry, that is to the Apostles alone. Whenever the Sacred Scriptures speak of this Sacrament, they convey to us the same truth. We have also the clearest testimony of the Fathers, and, as may be

The bishop,
its ordinary minister.

(24) Trid. Sess. 23. c. 4. et can. 7.

(25) Acts, viii. 14, 16.

seen in the decrees of their popes, of Urban, of Eusebius, of Damasus, of Innocent, and of Leo. In confirmation of the same doctrine, we may also add that S. Augustine loudly complains of the corrupt practice which prevailed in the Churches of Egypt and Alexandria in his day, a practice according to which, priests presumed to administer the Sacrament of Confirmation. (26)

Propriety of restricting Confirmation to bishops.

To illustrate the propriety of restricting the exercise of this function to the episcopal office, the following comparison may be found not inappropriate. As in the construction of an edifice the artisans, who are inferior agents, prepare and dispose mortar, lime, timber, and the other materials; whilst, however, the completion of the work belongs to the architect; so in like manner should Confirmation which is as it were the completion of the spiritual edifice, be administered by no other than episcopal hands.

A sponser required,
and why.

In Confirmation, as in Baptism, a sponser is required. If the gladiator who presents himself as a combatant, has occasion for the skill and address of a master, to direct him by what thrusts and passes he may, without endangering his own safety, dispatch his antagonist, how much more necessary to the faithful is a guide and instructor, when, sheathed as it were in the panoply of this Sacrament, they engage in the spiritual conflict, in which eternal salvation is to reward the success of the victor. Sponsors, therefore are, with great propriety, required in the administration of this Sacrament also; and the same affinity which, as we have already shown, is contracted in Bap-

Consequent
affinity.

(26) Episcopum ministrum esse ordinarium Confirmationis tradunt Urbanus Papa Epist. ad omnes Christianos in fine; Eusebius Papa Epist. 3. ad Episcop. Tusciæ et Campaniæ Damasus Papa, Epist. 4. ad Pros. et cæteros Episc. Orthodox. circa med. Innocentius Papa Epist. 1. ad Veren. c. 3. Leo Papa Epist. 88. ad Germanz et Galliæ Episc. Melchiades Papa, Epist. ad Episc. Hispaniæ. Clemens item Papa, Epist. 4. Concil Wormaciense, c. 8. et Florent. de Sacram. Horum summorum Pontificum Epist. habentur in tomis Conciliorum fere omnes in primo juxta cujusque ætatem. Vide insuper August. in quæst. novi Testam. quæst. 42.

tism, impeding the lawful marriage of the parties, is also contracted in Confirmation. (27)

To pass over in silence those who have arrived at such a degree of impiety, as to have the hardihood to contemn and despise this Sacrament; since in receiving Confirmation it frequently happens, that the faithful betray inconsiderate precipitation or unpardonable neglect, it is the duty of the pastor to make known the age and dispositions which its sanctity demands.

The faithful to be instructed in the age and dispositions for Confirmation.

They are, in the first place, to be informed that this Sacrament is not essential to salvation; but that although not essential, it is not therefore to be omitted: on the contrary, in a matter so holy, through which the gifts of God are so liberally bestowed, the greatest care should be taken to avoid all neglect; and what God proposed for the common sanctification of all, all should desire with intense earnestness. (28) Describing this admirable effusion of the Holy Spirit, S. Luke says: "And suddenly there came a sound from heaven, as of a mighty wind coming, and it filled the whole house, where they were sitting:" and a little after, "and they were all filled with the Holy Ghost." (29) From these words we may infer, that as the house in which they were assembled, was a type and figure of the church, the Sacrament of Confirmation, which had its existence for the first time on that day, is intended for the use of all the faithful. This is also an easy inference from the nature of the Sacrament: Confirmation is necessary for those who have occasion for spiritual increase, and hope to arrive at religious perfection; but to this all should aspire, for as Nature intends that all her children should grow up and reach full maturity, although her wishes are not always realised; so it is the earnest desire of the Catholic Church, the common mother of all, that those whom she has regenerated by Baptism, may be brought to perfect maturity in Christ. This happy

Confirmation instituted for the use of all the faithful.

(27) Trid. Sess. 24. c. 2. de reform. matrim.

(28) De consec. dist. 5. c. 2. et 3. item Conc. Aurel. c. 5. Hugo de sanct. Vict. de Sacram. lib. 2. p. 7. c. 59.

(29) Acts, ii, 2. 4.

consummation can be accomplished only through the mystic unction of Confirmation; and hence it is clear, that this Sacrament is equally intended for all the faithful.

The proper age for its reception.

It is to be observed, that the Sacrament of Confirmation may be administered to all, as soon as they have been baptised; but, until children shall have reached the use of reason, its administration is inexpedient. If not postponed to the age of twelve, it should therefore be deferred until at least that of seven. Confirmation has not been instituted as necessary to salvation; but to enable us to be armed and prepared, whenever we may be called upon, to fight for the faith of Christ; and for this conflict no one will consider children, not yet arrived at the use of reason, fit subjects.

Dispositions for receiving it worthily.

From what has been said, it follows, that persons of mature years who are to be confirmed, must, if they hope to receive the grace of this Sacrament, not only bring with them faith and devotion, but also be pierced with heartfelt compunction for the grievous sins into which they may have had the misfortune to fall. The pastor, therefore, will labour to induce them to have previous recourse to the tribunal of penance, will endeavour to excite them to fasting and other exercises of devotion, and will exhort them to the revival of that laudable practice of the ancient Church, of receiving the Sacrament of confirmation fasting. (30) To induce the faithful to enter into these dispositions would appear no difficult task, if they but learn to appreciate the blessings and extraordinary effects which flow from this Sacrament.

Effects of confirmation.

I.

The pastor therefore will teach, that in common with the other sacraments, Confirmation, unless some obstacle be opposed by the receiver, imparts new grace. We have already shown, that it is the property of these sacred and mystic signs, at once to indicate and produce grace; and as we cannot imagine grace and sin to coexist in the soul, it follows, as a necessary consequence, that it also remits sin.

(30) D. Th. p. 3. q. 72. a. ad. 2 Conc. Aur. c. 2.

Besides these properties, common alike to this and the other Sacraments, it is the peculiar characteristic of confirmation to perfect the grace of baptism: those who are initiated into the Christian religion, share, as it were, the tenderness and infirmity of new-born infants; but they afterwards gather strength from the Sacrament of chrism, to combat the assaults of the world, the flesh, and the devil, and are confirmed in faith to confess and glorify the name of our Lord Jesus Christ. From this last mentioned circumstance it arose, no doubt, that the Sacrament was distinguished by the name of confirmation. This its name is not, as some with equal ignorance and impiety have imagined, derived from the supposed circumstance of baptised persons, when grown to maturity, formerly presenting themselves before the bishop to confirm their adherence to the faith of Christ, which they had embraced in baptism; an opinion, according to which, confirmation would not seem to differ from catachetical instruction. Of such a practice no proof can be adduced, no vestige traced; and this sacrament is called Confirmation, because by virtue of it, God confirms in us what was commenced in baptism, and conducts to the perfection of solid Christian virtue. (31)

II.

An error refuted.

Not only does this Sacrament confirm; it also increases divine grace in the soul: "The Holy Ghost," says Melchisedes, "who descends with salutary influence on the waters of baptism, imparts the plenitude of grace to innocence: in confirmation, the same Holy Ghost gives an increase of divine grace, and not only an increase, but an increase after a wonderful manner." (32) This extraordinary efficacy of confirmation, the Scriptures beautifully express by a metaphor: "stay you in the city," says our Lord speaking of this Sacrament, "until you be indued with power from on high." (33)

III.

Its efficacy illustrated.

(31) Trid. Sess. 7. can. 1 de confir.

(32) De cons. dist. 5. c. Spiritus. Euseb. Emis. hom. in die Pent.

(33) Luke, xxiv. 49.

this, no doubt, will have great influence on the minds of the faithful) the pastor has only occasion to explain the effects which it produced on the Apostles themselves. Before, and even at the very time of the passion, so weak and listless were they, that no sooner was our Lord apprehended, than they all fled; (34) and Peter, who was destined to be the rock and foundation of the Church, and who had displayed an unshaken constancy, and an intrepid spirit to be dismayed by the appearance of no danger, (35) was so terrified at the voice of one weak woman, as to deny once, and again, and a third time, that he was a disciple of Jesus Christ. (36) Even after the resurrection they remained, through fear of the Jews, shut up in a house, the doors being closed. (37) But how extraordinary the revolution! On the day of Pentecost, filled with the grace of the Holy Ghost, they fearlessly; and in defiance of all danger, proclaim the Gospel, not only through Judea, but throughout the world; (38) they deem it the greatest happiness, to be thought worthy to suffer contumely, chains, tortures, and crucifixion itself, for the name of Christ. (39)

IV. Confirmation has also the effect of impressing a character; and hence, as we said before, with regard to baptism, and as will be more fully explained in its proper place, with regard to orders, it is on no account to be administered a second time. If these things are frequently and accurately explained, it is almost impossible that the faithful, knowing the utility and dignity of this Sacrament, should not use every exertion to receive it with piety and devotion. (40)

Its rites and ceremonies explained.

The rites and ceremonies used in the administration of this Sacrament, now remain lightly to glanced at: the advantages of this explanation the pastor will at once see,

(34) Matth. xxvi. 56.

(35) Matth. xvi. 18—26. 51.

(36) Matth. xxvi. 70. 72. 74.

(37) John, xx. 19.

(38) Acts, ii. 1.

(39) Acts, v. 41.

(40) Confirmationem non esse iterandam, vide de Consec. dist. 5. c. dictum est, & cap. de hom. D. Thom. p. 5. q. 72. art. 5.

by reverting to what we have already said on this subject, in its proper place. The forehead of the person to be confirmed is anointed with sacred chrism; for in this Sacrament the Holy Spirit pours himself into the souls of the faithful, and imparts to them increased strength and courage, to enable them, in the spiritual contest, to fight manfully, and to resist successfully their most implacable foes. They are therefore told, that henceforward, they are not to be deterred by fear or shame, feelings of which the countenance is the principal index, from the open confession of the name of Christ. (41) Besides, the mark by which the Christian is distinguished from all others, as the soldier is distinguished by his peculiar military badges, should be impressed on the forehead, the most dignified and conspicuous part of the human form.

Unction of the forehead.

Sign of the cross.

The festival of Pentecost was also chosen for its solemn administration, because the Apostles were then strengthened and confirmed by the power of the Holy Ghost; (42) and also to remind the faithful, by the recollection of that supernatural event, of the number and magnitude of the mysteries contained in that sacred unction.

Why administered at Pentecost.

The person, when confirmed, receives a gentle slap on the cheek from the hand of the bishop, to remind him, that as a courageous champion, he should be prepared to brave with unconquered resolution, all adversities for the name of Christ.

The gentle slap on the cheek.

Finally, he receives the kiss of peace, to give him to understand that he has been blessed with the fulness of divine grace, and with that "peace which surpasseth all understanding." (43) These things will be found to contain a summary of the exposition to be given by the pastor on the Sacrament of confirmation; but let them be delivered, not so much in the cold language of formal instruction, as in the burning accents of fervent piety; so as to penetrate into the minds, and inflame the hearts of the faithful.

The kiss of peace.

(41) Rhaban. lib. 1. de instit. cleric. c. 30. et habetur de consec. dist. 5, c. noviss. Aug. in Ps. 141, D. Thom. 3. p. q. 71. art. 9.

(42) Acts, ii, 2.

(43) Phil. iv. 7.

ON THE SACRAMENT OF THE EUCHARIST.

Dignity of the Eucharist, matter of frequent exposition, to deter from its abuse,

OF all the sacred mysteries bequeathed to us by our Lord, as unfailing sources of grace, there is none that can be compared to the most holy Sacrament of the Eucharist: for no crime, therefore, is there reserved by God a more terrible vengeance than for the sacrilegious abuse of this adorable Sacrament, which is replete with holiness itself. (1) The Apostle illumined with wisdom from above, clearly saw and emphatically announced these awful consequences, when having declared the enormity of their guilt, "who discern not the body of the Lord," he immediately added, "therefore are there many infirm and weak among you, and many sleep." (2) That the faithful, therefore, deeply impressed with the divine honor due to this heavenly Sacrament, may derive from its participation, abundant fruit of grace, and escape the just anger of God, the pastor will explain with indefatigable diligence, all those things which seem best calculated to display its majesty.

Its institution.

Following the example of S. Paul, who declares to the Corinthians what he had received from the Lord, the pastor will begin by explaining to the faithful the circumstances of its institution: these he will find thus clearly recorded by the Evangelist—our Lord, who "having loved his own, loved them to the end," (3) to give them some admirable and divine pledge of this his love, aware that the hour was come when he should pass out of this world to the Father, by an effect of wisdom which transcends the order of nature, devised a means of being always present with his own. Having celebrated the feast of the paschal lamb with his disciples, that the figure

(1) Dionys. de Eccl. Hier. c. 6, et de consec. dist. c. 2. nihil in.

(2) 1 Cor. xi. 30.

(3) John, xiii. 1.

might give way to the reality, the shadow to the substance, "Jesus took bread, and giving thanks to God, blessed and brake, and gave to his disciples, and said, take ye and eat: This is my body, which shall be delivered for you: this do for the commemoration of me: and taking the chalice also after he had supped, he said, this chalice is the New Testament in my blood: this do, as often as you shall drink it in commemoration of me."(4)

Satisfied that language could supply no one word sufficiently comprehensive to give full expression to the dignity and excellence of this Sacrament, sacred writers have endeavoured to express it by a variety of appellations. It is sometimes called "The Eucharist," a word which may be translated, "the good grace," or "the thanksgiving:" the propriety of the one appears from two considerations: the Eucharist gives a foretaste of eternal life, of which it is written: "The grace of God is life everlasting:"(5) it also contains Christ our Lord, the true grace, and the source of all heavenly gifts. The other translation is no less appropriate, for when we offer this most spotless victim, we render to God a homage of infinite value, in return for all the benefits which we have received from his bounty, particularly, for the inestimable treasure of grace bestowed on us in this Sacrament. The word "thanksgiving," also accords with the conduct of our Lord, when instituting this mystery: "Taking bread, he brake it, and gave thanks"(6) David too, contemplating the grandeur of this mystery, says, "He hath made a remembrance of his wonderful works, being a merciful and gracious Lord: he hath given food to them that fear him;"(7) but he had premised these words of thanksgiving: "His work is praise and magnificence."(8)

Why called
"the Eu-
"charist."

(4) Math. xxvi. 26.—Mark, xiv. 22.—Luke, xxii. 19.—1 Cor. xi. 24.—De Euch. institutione vide Trid. Sess. 15, c. 2, de Euch. Leo serm. 7, de Pass. c. 3, Euseb. Emiss. hom. 4, et habetur de consec. dist. 2. 1. quin corpus.

(5) Rom. vi. 23.

(6) Mark, xxvi. 26.—Mark, xiv. 22.—Luke, xxii. 19.—1 Cor. xi. 24.

(7) Ps. cx. 4, 5.

(8) Ps. cx. 5.—Chrysost. hom. 24 in 1 ad Cor. ad hæc verba, Calix be-

The Eucharist designated by other appellations: "sacrifice," "communion."

"The Sacrament of peace and charity."

"Viaticum."

"The Supper."

It is also frequently called "The Sacrifice," of which we shall treat more at large in the subsequent part of this exposition. It is also called "Communion," a word borrowed from the Apostle, when he says: "The chalice of benediction which we bless, is it not the communion of the blood of Christ? And the bread which we break, is it not the participation of the body of the Lord?" (9) "This Sacrament," to use the words of Damascene, "unites us to Christ, and renders us partakers of his flesh, and of his divinity, reconciles us to each other in the same Christ, and consolidates us as it were into one body." (10) Hence it is also called the Sacrament of peace and charity; giving us to understand how unworthy the name of Christians are they, who indulge in enmity; and that hatred, discord, and strife are to be banished from the society of the faithful, as their worst enemies; an obligation which becomes still more imperative when we reflect that in the daily oblation of the sacred mysteries, we profess to study with watchful solicitude, to preserve peace and charity inviolate. Sacred writers also frequently call it "The Viaticum," as well because it is the spiritual food by which we are supported during our mortal pilgrimage; as also, because it prepares for us a passage to eternal happiness and everlasting glory. Hence, in accordance with the ancient practice of the Church, none of the faithful are suffered to depart this life, without being previously fortified with this living bread from heaven. The name of "The Supper" has also been sometimes given to this Sacrament by the most ancient Fathers, in imitation of the Apostle, (11) because it was instituted by our Lord at the saving mystery of The Last Supper. (12) nedictionis. Cypr. lib. de lapsis. Ambr. lib. 5, de Sacr. c. 5. D. Th. p. 3, q. 73, a. 4.

(9) 1 Cor. x. 16.

(10) Damasc. lib. 4, de fid. orthod. c. 4. Vid. Iren. lib. 5, c. 7, Chrys. hom. 44 et 45 in Joan. Cyrill. in lib. 7. in Joan. c. 13. Cyrill. Hier. Catech. 4, Aug. Tract. 26, in Joan. Trid. sess. 13. de Euchar. in præf. Concil. Nicæni. 21, Cart. 4, c. 77 et 26, q. 6, passim.

(11) 1 Cor. xi. 20.

(12) Cypr. de cœna. Domini.

This circumstance, which regards the time of its institution, does not however justify the inference that the Eucharist is to be consecrated or received by persons not fasting: the salutary practice of consecrating and receiving it fasting, introduced, as ancient writers record, by the Apostles, has always been observed in the Church. (13)

The Eucharist to be consecrated and received, fasting.

Having thus premised an explanation of the names by which this Sacrament is distinguished, the pastor will teach that it has all the qualities of a true Sacrament, and is one of the seven which have been at all times recognised and revered by the Catholic Church. Immediately after the consecration of the chalice, it is called "a mystery of faith;" and to omit an almost innumerable host of sacred writers, vouchers of the same doctrine, that the holy Eucharist is a Sacrament is demonstrated by the very nature of a Sacrament. It has sensible and outward signs: it signifies and produces grace in the soul; and all doubt as to its institution by Christ is removed by the Apostle and the Evangelists. These circumstances, combining as they do to establish the truth of the Sacrament, supersede the necessity of pressing the matter by further argument. (14)

A Sacrament.

That in the Eucharist there are many things to which sacred writers have occasionally given the name of Sacrament, the pastor will particularly observe: sometimes its consecration, sometimes its reception, frequently the body and blood of our Lord which are contained in it, are called the Sacrament; because, as S. Augustine observes, this Sacrament consists of two things, the visible species of the elements, and the invisible flesh and blood of our Lord Jesus Christ. (15) We also say that this Sacrament

The name of Sacrament, given to many things in the Eucharist, strictly applies to the species only.

(13) Aug. Epist. 188, c. 6.

(14) Aug. lib. 3. de Trinit. cap. 4, et l. 20, contra Faust. cap. 13, Ambr. lib. 1. de sacram. cap. 2. Trid. sess. 13. de Euch. c. 5. D. Thom. 3. p. q. 73. art. 1.

(15) De Catec. erud. lib. 6, c. 16.—August. hic ad sensum potius quam ad verba citatus; sed lege hac de materia librum Lanfranci contra Berengarium; constat, 23, tantum capitibus: vide de consecr. dist. 2. fere tota.

is to be adored, (16) meaning of course the body and blood of our Lord. But all these, it is obvious, obtain the name of Sacrament in its less strict sense: the species of bread and wine, strictly speaking, constitute the Sacrament.

The Eucharist differs from the other Sacraments.

I.

II.

The great points of difference between this and the other Sacraments are easily understood: the other Sacraments are perfected by the use of their matter, that is, by their administration; baptism, for instance, becomes a Sacrament, when the ablution has been performed: the Eucharist is constituted a Sacrament by the sole consecration of the elements, and when preserved in a pyxis, or deposited in a tabernacle, under either species, it ceases not to be a Sacrament. In the material elements of which the other Sacraments are composed, no change takes place; in baptism, for instance, the water, in confirmation, the chrism, lose not in their administration, the nature of water and of oil; whilst in the Eucharist, that which before consecration, was bread and wine, becomes, after consecration, really and substantially the body and blood of our Lord.

The Sacramental matter composed of two elements, but constitutive of one Sacrament.

But although in the Eucharist the sacramental matter consists of two elements, that is of bread and wine; yet, guided by the authority of the Church, we profess that they are elements not of two, but of one Sacrament. This is proved by the very number of the Sacraments, which, according to the doctrine of apostolic tradition, and the definitions of the Councils of Lateran, (17) Florence, (18) and Trent, (19) is confined to seven. It also follows from the nature of the Holy Eucharist: the grace which it imparts renders us one mystic body; and to accord with what it accomplishes, the Eucharist must constitute but one Sacrament—one, not by consisting of one element, but by signifying one thing. Of this the analogy which

(16) Trid. sess. 15, de Euch. cap. 5, et can. 6.

(17) Ex Conciliis citatis Lateranense generale sub Innocent II.—Non numerat quidem distincte septem Sacramenta, sed ex variis Canonib. satis clare colliguntur.

(18) Florent. in doct. de sacram.

(19) Trid. sess 7, can. 1.

exists between this our spiritual food, and the food of the body, furnishes an illustration. Meat and drink, although two different things, are used only for one object, the sustenance of the body; so should the two different species of the Sacrament, to signify the food of the soul, be significant of one thing only, and constitute therefore but one Sacrament. The justness of this analogy is sustained by these words of our Lord: "My flesh is meat indeed, and my blood is drink indeed." (20)

What the Sacrament of the Eucharist signifies, the pastor will also carefully explain, that on beholding the sacred mysteries, the faithful may also, at the same time, feed their souls on the contemplation of heavenly things. This Sacrament, then, is significant of three things—the passion of Christ, a thing past—divine grace, a thing present—and eternal glory, a thing future. It is significant of the passion of Christ: "This do," says our Lord, "for a commemoration of me." (21) "As often," says the Apostle, "as you shall eat this bread, and drink the chalice, you shall show the death of the Lord, until he come." (22) It is significant of divine grace, which is infused, on receiving this sacrament, to nurture and preserve the soul. (23) As by Baptism, we are begotten to newness of life, and by Confirmation, are strengthened to resist Satan and to profess openly the name of Christ; so, by the Sacrament of the Eucharist, are we spiritually nurtured and supported. It is also significant of eternal glory, which, according to the divine promises, is reserved for us in our celestial country. These three things, distinguished as they are by different times, past, present, and future, the Holy Eucharist, although consisting of different species, marks as significantly as if they were but one.

The Eucharist signifies three things.

I.

II.

III.

To consecrate the Sacrament validly, to instruct the faithful in that of which it is the symbol, and to kindle in their souls an ardent desire of possessing the invaluable treasure which it signifies, it is of vital importance that

The matter of this Sacrament.

(20) John, vi. 56.

(21) Luke, xxii. 19.

(22) 1 Cor. xi. 26.

(23) Tertul. de Resur. carnis, c. 8.

the pastor make himself acquainted with its matter. The matter of this Sacrament is two-fold, consisting of wheaten bread and of wine pressed from the grape, mixed with a little water. The first element, then, (of the latter we shall treat hereafter) is bread: as the Evangelists, Matthew, (24) Mark, (25) and Luke, (26) testify: "Christ "our Lord," say they, "took bread into his hands, blessed, "and brake it, saying, THIS IS MY BODY;" and according to S. John, he denominated himself bread in these words: "I am the living bread that came down from heaven." (27)

The sacramental bread, wheaten.

As, however, there are different sorts of bread, composed of different materials, such as wheat, barley, pease, or made in different manners, such as leavened and unleavened; it is to be observed that, with regard to the former, the sacramental matter, according to the words of our Lord, should consist of wheaten bread; for when we simply say bread, we mean, according to common usage, wheaten bread." (28) This is also distinctly declared by a figure of the Holy Eucharist in the Old Testament: the Lord commanded that the loaves of proposition, which prefigured this Sacrament, should be made of "fine "flower." (29)

Also, unleavened.

As, therefore, wheaten bread alone is the proper matter of this Sacrament, a doctrine handed down by Apostolic tradition, and confirmed by the authority of the Catholic Church; it may also be inferred from the circumstances in which the Eucharist was instituted, that this wheaten bread should be unleavened. It was consecrated and instituted by our Lord, on the first day of unleavened bread, a time when the Jews were prohibited by the law, to have leavened bread in their houses. (30) Should the words of the Evangelist S. John, who says that all Objection answered.

(24) Matth. xxvi. 26. (25) Mark, xiv. 22. (26) Luke, xxii. 19.

(27) John, vi. 41. Vide de consecr. dist. 2. c. 1. et 2. et 55. ubi habes de hac materia decreta Alexandr. Pap. in 1. Epist. ad omnes Orthodoxos et Cypr. lib. 2. Epist. 3. et Ambr. l. 4. de Sacram. c. 4. vide etiam Iren. l. 4. c. 34. et l. 5. c. 2. (28) D. Th. 3. p. 9. 74. c. 3. (29) Lev. xxiv. 5.

(30) Matth. xxvi. 17. Mark, xiv. 12. Luke, xxii. 7. Vid. l. 3. decretal. tit. de celebrat. Missarum, c. ult. ubi habes auctoritatem Honorii Pap. 3.

this was done before the Passover, be objected, the objection is one of easy solution: by "the day before the Pasch," (31) S. John understands the same day, which the other Evangelists designate "the first day of unleavened bread." He had for object, principally, to mark the natural day, which does not commence until sunrise; and the first natural day of the Pasch, therefore, being Friday, "the day before the Pasch" means Thursday, on the evening of which the festival of unleavened bread began, and on which our Lord celebrated the Pasch and instituted the Holy Eucharist. Hence, S. Chrysostome understands the first day of unleavened bread to be the day, on the evening of which the unleavened bread was to be eaten. (32) The peculiar propriety of the consecration of unleavened bread, to express that integrity and purity of heart, with which the faithful should approach this Sacrament, we learn from these words of the Apostle: "Purge out the old leaven, that you may be a new paste, as you are unleavened; for Christ our Pasch is sacrificed. Therefore, let us feast not with the old leaven, not with the leaven of malice and wickedness, but with the unleavened bread of sincerity and truth." (33)

This property of the bread, however, is not to be considered so essential as that its absence must render the Sacrament null: both sorts, leavened and unleavened, are called by the common name, and have each the nature and properties, of bread. (34) No one, however, should on his own individual authority, have the temerity to depart from the laudable rite, observed in the Church to which he belongs; and such departure is the less warrantable in priests of the Latin Church, commanded, as they are, by authority of the supreme Pontiff, to celebrate the sacred mysteries with unleavened bread only. (35) With regard to the first element of this Sacrament, this exposition will be found sufficiently comprehensive. We Unleavened bread not essential.

(31) John, xiii. 1. (32) In Math. hom. 83. (33) 1 Cor. v. 7: 8:

(34) Concil Florent. sess. ult.

(35) Lib. 2. decret. de celebr. miss. c. final.

may, however, observe in addition, that the quantity of bread to be used is not determined, depending as it does upon the number of communicants, a matter which cannot be defined.

The second element, wine of the grape, mingled with a little water.

We come next to treat of the second element of this Sacrament, which forms part of its matter, and consists of wine, pressed from the grape, mingled with a little water. That our Lord made use of wine, in the institution of this Sacrament, has been at all times the doctrine of the Catholic Church. He himself said: "I will not drink, henceforth, of this fruit of the vine, until that day." (36) On these words of our Lord, S. Chrysostome observes: "Of the fruit of the vine, which certainly produces wine not water; as if he had it in view, even at so early a period, to crush by the evidence of these words the heresy which asserted that water alone is to be used in these mysteries." (37) With the wine used in the sacred mysteries, the Church of God, however, has always mingled water, because, as we know on the authority of councils and the testimony of S. Cyprian, our Lord himself did so; (38) and also because this admixture renews the recollection of the blood and water which issued from his sacred side. The word water we also find used in the Apocalypse, to signify the people, (39) and, therefore, water mixed with wine signifies the union of the faithful with Christ their head. This rite, derived from apostolic tradition, the Catholic Church has at all times observed. The propriety of mingling water with the wine rests, it is true, on authority so grave, that to omit the practice would be to incur the guilt of mortal sin; however, its sole omission would be insufficient to render the Sacrament null. But care must be taken not only to mingle water with the wine, but also to mingle it in small quantity; for in the opinion of ecclesiastical writers, the water is changed into wine. Hence, these words of Pope

(36) Matth. xxvi. 29. Mark, xiv. 25. (37) Hom. 83. in Matth.

(38) Cyp. lib. 1. epist. 5. Trid. sess. 22. de sacrif. miss. c. 7. et can. 9.

(39) Apoc. xvii. 15.

Honorius : “ A pernicious abuse has prevailed, for a long “ time, amongst you, of using in the holy sacrifice a greater “ quantity of water than of wine ; whereas in accordance “ with the rational practice of the Universal Church, the “ wine should be used in much greater quantity than the “ water.” (40) We have now treated of the only two elements of this Sacrament ; and although some dared to do otherwise, many decrees of the Church justly enact that no celebrant offer any thing but bread and wine. (41)

We now come to consider the aptitude of these two elements to declare those things of which they are the sensible signs. In the first place, they signify Christ, the true life of the world ; for our Lord himself has said :
 “ My flesh is meat indeed, and my blood is drink indeed.”
 (42) As, therefore, the body of our Lord Jesus Christ nourishes to eternal life, those who receive it with purity and holiness, with great propriety is this Sacrament composed principally of those elements which sustain life ;
 thus giving the faithful to understand, that the soul is nurtured with grace by a participation of the precious body and blood of Christ. These elements serve also to prove the dogma of the real presence. Seeing, as we do, that bread and wine are every day changed by the power of nature, into human flesh and blood, we are, by the obvious analogy of the fact, the more readily induced to believe that the substance of the bread and wine is changed, by the celestial benediction, into the real body and blood of Christ. (43) This admirable change also contributes to illustrate what takes place in the soul. As the bread and wine, although invisibly, are really and substantially, changed into the body and blood of Christ, so are we,
 although interiorly and invisibly, yet really renewed to life, receiving in the Sacrament of the Eucharist, the true life. Moreover, the body of the Church, although one, and undivided, consists of the union of many members,

Peculiar aptitude of these elements.
 I.

II.

III.

IV.

(40) Habetur l. 3. Decretal, de cel. miss. c. 13.

(41) Vid. de consecr. dist. 2. c. 1. 2. et seq.

(42) John, vi. 56.

(43) Damas, l. 4. de fid. orthodox. c. 14.

and of this mysterious union nothing is more strikingly illustrative than bread and wine. Bread is made from many grains, wine is pressed from many grapes, and thus are we too, although many, closely united by this mysterious bond of union, and made as it were one body.

The form to be used in the consecration of the bread, proved from Scripture ;

from the Fathers and Councils ;

from reason

The form to be used in the consecration of the bread, we now come to explain ; not, however, with a view that the faithful should be taught these mysteries, unless necessity require it, (a knowledge of them is obligatory on ecclesiastics alone) but to obviate the possibility of mistakes on the part of the celebrant, through ignorance of the form ; mistakes, were they to occur, as discreditable to the minister, as derogatory to the dignity of the divine mysteries. From the Evangelists Matthew and Luke, and also from the Apostle, we learn that the form of the Sacrament consists in these words : “ THIS IS MY BODY.” We read that when they had supped, “ Jesus took bread, “ and blessed and brake and gave to his disciples, saying: “ take and eat, THIS IS MY BODY ;” (44) and this form of consecration, made use of by Jesus Christ, has been uniformly and inviolably observed in the Catholic Church. The testimonies of the Fathers in proof of its legitimacy, may be here omitted : to enumerate them would prove an endless task. The decree of the Council of Florence to the same effect, because of easy access to all, it is also unnecessary to cite. The necessity of every other proof is superseded by these words of the Saviour : “ This do for a “ commemoration of me.” (45) This command of our Lord embraces not only what he did, but also what he said, and has more immediate reference to his own words uttered not less for the purpose of effecting, than of signifying what they effected. (46)

(44) Matth. xxvi. 26. Mark, xiv. 22. Luke, xxii. 19. 1 Cor. xi. 24.

(45) Luke, xxii. 19. In decret de sacram. item Trid. sess. 13. c. 1.

(46) Quod ad Patres attinet, vid. Amb. l. 4. de sacram. c. 4. et 5. Chrys. hom. de prodit. Judæ. Aug. l. 3. de Trinit. c. 4. Iren. l. 4. contr. hær. c. 34. Orig. lib. 8. contr. Celsum. Hesich. l. 6. in Levit. c. 22. Cyril. Alex. epist. ad Calosorum episcop. Tertul. l. 4. contr. Marc. in Hier. epist. 1.

from reason alone. The form of a Sacrament is that which signifies what is accomplished in the Sacrament: what is accomplished in the Eucharist, that is the conversion of the bread into the true body of our Lord, the words "this is my body" signify and declare: they therefore constitute the form. The words of the Evangelist, "he blessed," go to support this reasoning. They are equivalent to saying: "taking bread, he blessed it, saying, this is my body." (47) The words "take and eat," it is true, precede the words "this is my body," but they evidently express the use, not the consecration of the matter, and cannot, therefore, constitute the form. But although not necessary to the consecration of the Sacrament, they are not, however, on any account, to be omitted. The conjunction "for" has also a place amongst the words of consecration; otherwise it would follow that, if the Sacrament were not to be administered to any one, it should not, or even could not be consecrated; whereas, that the priest by pronouncing the words of our Lord, according to the institution and practice of the Church, truly consecrates the proper matter of the Sacrament, although it should afterwards happen never to be administered, admits not the least shadow of doubt.

The form of the consecration of the wine, the other element of this Sacrament, is, for the reasons assigned with regard to the bread, necessary to be accurately known, and clearly understood by the priest. It is firmly to be believed that the form of consecrating the chalice is comprehended in these words: "THIS IS THE CHALICE OF MY BLOOD OF THE NEW AND ETERNAL TESTAMENT: THE MYSTERY OF FAITH: WHICH SHALL BE SHED FOR YOU, AND FOR MANY TO THE REMISSION OF SINS." (48) These words are for the most part taken from Scripture. Some of them, however, have been preserved in the Church by apostolic tradition. The words "this is the chalice" are taken from S. Luke, (49) and are also mentioned by the Apostle. (50) The words that immediately follow, "of

The form to be used in the consecration of the wine, proved from Scripture;

(47) Matth. xxvi. 26.

(48) Decretal. l. 3. de celeb. miss. c. 6.

(49) Luke, xxii. 20.

(50) 1 Cor. xi. 25.

“ my blood, or my blood of the new testament, which shall be shed for you, and for many to the remission of sins,” are taken in part from S. Luke, (51) and in part from S. Matthew. (52) The words “ and eternal,” and also the words “ the mystery of faith,” have been transmitted to us by holy tradition, the interpreter and guardian of Catholic unity. Of the legitimacy of this form we cannot entertain a shadow of doubt, if we attend to what has been already said of the form used in the consecration of the bread. The form to be used in the consecration of this element, should, confessedly, consist of words signifying that the substance of the wine is changed into the blood of our Lord: this the words already cited clearly declare; and therefore, they alone exclusively constitute the form.

Expresses three effects of the blood of the Saviour.

I.

II.

III.

The form of conse-crating the wine, explained.

They also express certain admirable fruits produced by the blood of Christ, which was shed on Calvary, fruits which belong in a special manner to this Sacrament. Of these one is admission into the eternal inheritance to which we have acquired a right by “ the new and everlasting testament:” (53) another is admission to righteousness by “ the mystery of faith,” for “ God hath proposed” Jesus “ to be a propitiation through faith in his blood, to the showing of his justice, that he himself may be just, and the justifier of him, who is of the faith of Jesus Christ:” (54) a third is the remission of sin. (55)

But as the words of consecration are replete with mysteries, and are most appropriate in their application to our present subject, they demand a more minute consideration. When, therefore, it is said: “ This is the chalice of my blood,” (56) these words are to be understood to mean: “ This is my blood which is contained in this chalice.” The mention of “ the chalice,” at the moment of its consecration, to be the drink of the faithful, is peculiarly appropriate: without its mention as the vessel in

(51) Luke, xxiii. 20. (52) Matth. xxvi. 28. (53) Heb. x. 20. xiii. 20.

(54) Rom. iii. 25; 26.

(55) Heb. ix. 12.

(56) Decret. l. 3. de cel. Miss. c. 8.

which it is contained, the words: "This is my blood," would not seem sufficiently to designate this supernatural species of drink. Next follow the words: "of the New Testament;" they are added to give us to understand, that the blood of the Saviour is not now given figuratively, as in the Old Law, of which we read in the Apostle, that without blood a Testament is not dedicated; (57) but really and truly given, a prerogative peculiar to the New Testament. Hence the Apostle says: "Therefore, Christ is the mediator of the New Testament, that by means of his death, they who are called may receive the promise of eternal inheritance." (58) The word "eternal" refers to the eternal inheritance, our title to which has been purchased by Christ the Lord, the eternal Testator. The words "mystery of faith," which are added, exclude not the reality, but signify that what lies concealed under the veil of mystery, and is far removed from the ken of mortal eye, is to be believed with the certainty of faith. Here, however, these words bear an import entirely different from that which they have when applied to baptism. Here, the mystery of faith consists in this, that we see by faith the blood of Christ, veiled under the species of wine; but baptism is properly called by us "the Sacrament," by the Greeks, "the mystery of faith," because it comprises the entire profession of the faith of Christ. There is also another reason why the blood of our Lord is called "the mystery of faith." In its belief human reason experiences the greatest difficulties, because faith proposes to us to believe that the Son of God, God and man, suffered death for our redemption, a death signified by the Sacrament of his blood. His passion, therefore, is more appropriately commemorated here, in the words, "which shall be shed for the remission of sins," than at the consecration of his body. The separate consecration of the blood places before our eyes, in more vivid colours, his passion, crucifixion, and death. The additional words, "for you and for many," are taken, some from S. Matthew, (59) some from S. Luke, (69) and under the guidance of the Spirit of God, combined together by the Catholic Church. They serve emphatically to designate the fruit and advantages of his passion. Looking to the efficacy of the passion, we believe that the Redeemer shed his blood for the salvation of all men; but looking to the advantages, which mankind derive from its efficacy, we find, at once, that they are not extended to the whole, but to a large proportion of the human race. When, therefore, our Lord said: "for you," he meant either those who were present, or those whom he had chosen from amongst the Jews, amongst whom were, with the exception of Judas, all his disciples with whom he then conversed; but when he adds, "for many," he would include the remainder of the elect from amongst the Jews and Gentiles. With great propriety therefore, were the words, for all, omitted, because here the fruit of the passion is alone spoken of, and to the elect only did his passion bring the fruit of salvation. This the words of the Apostle declare, when he says, that Christ was offered once, to take away the sins of many; (61) and the same truth is conveyed in these words of our Lord recorded by S. John: "I pray for them, I pray not for the world; but for them whom thou hast given me, because they are thine." (62) The words of consecration also convey many other truths; truths, however, which the pastor, by the daily meditation and study of divine things, and aided by grace from above, will not find it difficult to discover.

(57) Heb. ix. 18.

(58) Heb. ix. 15.

This sublime mystery to be judged of by faith, not by the senses.

To return to those things, of which the faithful are on no account to be suffered to remain ignorant, the pastor, aware of the awful denunciation of the Apostle against those who discern not the body of the Lord, (63) will, first of all, impress on the minds of the faithful, the necessity of detaching, as much as possible, their minds and understandings from the dominion of the senses, for were they, with regard to this sublime mystery, to constitute the senses the only tribunal to which they are to appeal, the awful consequence must be, their precipitation into the extreme of impiety. Consulting the sight, the touch, the smell, the taste, and finding nothing but the appearances of bread and wine, the senses must naturally lead them to think, that this Sacrament contains nothing more than bread and wine. Their minds, therefore, are as much as possible to be withdrawn from subjection to the senses, and excited to the contemplation of the stupendous power of God.

(59) Matt. xxvi. 28. (60) Luke, xxii. 20. (61) Heb. ix. 26.

(62) John, xvii. 9. (63) 1 Cor. xi. 29.

The Catholic Church, then, firmly believes, and openly professes that in this Sacrament, the words of consecration accomplish three things; first, that the true and real body of Christ, the same that was born of the Virgin, and is now seated at the right hand of the Father in heaven, is rendered present in the Holy Eucharist; (64) secondly, that however repugnant it may appear to the dictate of the senses, no substance of the elements remains in the Sacrament; (65) and thirdly, a natural consequence from the two preceding, and one which the words of consecration also express, that the accidents which present themselves to the eyes, or other senses, exist in a wonderful and ineffable manner without a subject. The accidents of bread and wine we see; but they inhere in no substance, and exist independently of any. The substance of the bread and wine is so changed into the body and blood of our Lord, that they, altogether, cease to be the substance of bread and wine.

The words of consecration effect three things.
I.

II.

III.

To proceed in order, the pastor will begin with the first, and give his best attention to show, how clear and explicit are the words of our Saviour, which establish the real presence of his body in the Sacrament of the Eucharist. When our Lord says: "This is my body, this is my

The real presence proved from Scripture,

(64) Vide Dionys. de Eccl. Hierarch. c. 5, Ignat. Epist. ad Smyr. Just. Apol. 2, Iren. l. 4, c. 34, et l. 5. c. 2. Trid. Sess. 13, c. 1, de Euch.

(65) Cypr. de coena domini Euseb. Emiss. hom. 5. de Pasch. Cyril. Hieros. Catech. l. 3 et 4, Ambr. l. 4, de Sacram. c. 4, Chrysost. hom. 83, in Matt. et 60, ad pop. Antioch.

“ blood,” (66) no man however ignorant, unless he labours under some obliquity of intellect, can mistake his meaning; particularly if he recollect, that the words “body” and “ blood ” refer to his human nature, the real assumption of which by the Son of God no Catholic can doubt. To use the admirable words of S. Hilary, a man not less eminent for piety than learning: “ When our Lord himself declares, as our faith teaches us, that his flesh is “ meat indeed, what room can remain for doubt?” (67) The pastor will also adduce another passage from Scripture in proof of this sublime truth: having recorded the consecration of bread and wine by our Lord, and also the administration of the sacred mysteries to the Apostles, by the hands of the Saviour, the Apostle adds: “ But let “ a man prove himself, and so eat of that bread and drink “ of the chalice, for he that eateth and drinketh unwor- “ thily, eateth and drinketh judgment to himself, not “ discerning the body of the Lord.” (68) If, as heresy asserts, the Sacrament presents nothing to our veneration but a memorial and sign of the passion of Christ, why exhort the faithful, in language so energetic, to prove themselves? The answer is obvious: by the heavy denunciation contained in the words “ judgment,” the Apostle marks the enormity of his guilt, who receives unworthily, and distinguishes not from common food the body of the Lord, concealed beneath the eucharistic veil. The preceding words of the Apostle develop more fully his meaning: “ The chalice of benediction,” says he, “ which we bless, is it not the communion of the “ blood of Christ? and the bread which we break is it not “ the participation of the body of the Lord?” (69)—words which prove to demonstration the real presence of Jesus Christ in the holy Sacrament of the Eucharist.

From tradition,

These passages of Scripture, are, therefore, to be expounded by the pastor, and he will emphatically press

(66) Matt. xxvi. 28.—Mark, xiv. 22, 24.—Luke, xxii. 19.

(67) S. Hilary. l. 8, de Trinitat. super illa verba velut unum.

(68) 1 Cor. xi. 28, 29.

(69) 1 Cor. x. 16.

upon the attention of the faithful, that their meaning, in itself obvious, is placed beyond all doubt by the uniform interpretation and authority of the Holy Catholic Church. That such has been at all times the doctrine of the Church, may be ascertained in a two-fold manner; by consulting the Fathers who flourished in the early ages of the Church and in each succeeding century, who are the most unexceptionable witnesses of her doctrine, and all of whom teach in the clearest terms, and with the most entire unanimity, the dogma of the real presence; and also by appealing to the Councils of the Church, convened on this important subject. To adduce the individual testimony of each Father would prove an endless task—enough, that we cite, or rather point out a few, whose testimony will afford a sufficient criterion by which to judge of the rest. Let S. Ambrose first declare his faith: in his book on “the Initiated” he says, that the same true body of our Lord, which was assumed of the Virgin, is received in this Sacrament; a truth which he declares is to be believed with the certainty of faith; and in another place he distinctly tells us, that before consecration it is bread, but after consecration it is the flesh of Christ. (70) S. Chrysostome, another witness of equal fidelity and weight, professes and proclaims this mysterious truth, particularly in his sixtieth homily on those who receive the sacred mysteries unworthily; and also in his forty-fourth and forty-fifth homilies on S. John: “Let us,” says he, “obey, not contradict God, although what he says may seem contrary to our reason and our sight: his words cannot deceive, our senses are easily deceived.” (71) With the doctrine thus taught by S. Chrysostome, that uniformly taught by S. Augustine fully accords, particularly when in his explanation of the thirty-third Psalm, he says: “To carry himself in his own hands, is impossible to man, and pe-

(70) Lib. 4, de Sacr. c. 4, et de iis qui myster. init. c. 9. vide et de consec. dist. 2, plurim. in locis.

(71) S. Chrys. ad popul. Antioch. homil. 60 et 61.

“culiar to Christ alone : he was carried in his own hands, “when giving his body to be eaten, he said, This is my “body.” (72) To pass by Justin and Irenæus, S. Cyril, in his fourth book on S. John, declares in such express terms, that the body of our Lord is contained in this Sacrament, that no sophistry can distort, no captious interpretations obscure his meaning. Should the pastor wish for additional testimonies of the Fathers, he will find it easy to add the Hilaries, the Jeromes, the Denises, the Damascenes, and a host of other illustrious names, whose sentiments on this most important subject he will find collected by the labour and industry of men eminent for piety and learning. (73)

From Councils,

Another means of ascertaining the belief of the Church on matters of faith, is the condemnation of the contrary doctrine. That the belief of the real presence was that of the universal Church of God, unanimously professed by all her children, is demonstrated by a well authenticated fact. When in the eleventh century, Berengarius presumed to deny this dogma, asserting that the Eucharist was only a sign, the innovation was immediately condemned by the unanimous voice of the Christian world. The Council of Vercelli, convened by authority of Leo IX., denounced the heresy, and Berengarius himself retracted and anathematized his error. Relapsing, however, into the same infatuation and impiety, he was condemned by three different Councils, convened, one at Tours, the other two at Rome : of the two latter, one was summoned by Nicholas II., the other by Gregory VII. The general Council of Lateran held under Innocent III., further ratified the sentence ; and the faith of the Catholic Church, on this point of doctrine, was more fully declared and

(72) Divus Augustinus in Psalm, xxiii. Conc. 1, a medio ad finem usque. Cyril. l. 4, in Joan. c. 33, et 14, et lib. 1, c. 13. Inst. Apolog. 2, sub finem ad Antonium Pium.

(73) Iren. l. 5, contra herætic. et l. 5, in Joan. c. 34. Dionys. Eccles. Hier. c. 3, Hilar. l. 8, de Trinit. Hieron. epist. ad Damascen. Damas. l. 4, de orthod. fid. c. 14.

more firmly established in the Councils of Florence and Trent.

If, then, the pastor carefully explain these particulars, his labors will be blessed with the effect of strengthening the weak, and administering joy and consolation to the pious; (of those who, blinded by error, hate nothing more than the light of truth, we have all mention) and this two-fold effect will be more securely attained, as the faithful cannot doubt that this dogma is numbered amongst the articles of faith. Believing and confessing as they do, that the power of God is supreme, they must also believe, that his omnipotence can accomplish the great work which we admire and adore in the Sacrament of the Eucharist; and again, believing as they do, the Holy Catholic Church, they must necessarily believe that the doctrine expounded by us, is that which was revealed by the Son of God.

And confirmed by reason.

II.

But nothing contributes more to light up in the pious soul that spiritual joy, of which we have spoken; nothing is more fertile of spiritual fruit, than the contemplation of the exalted dignity of this most august Sacrament. From it we learn how great must be the perfection of the gospel dispensation, under which we enjoy the reality of that, which under the Mosaic Law was only shadowed by types and figures. Hence S. Denis, with a wisdom more than human, says, that our Church is a mean between the synagogue and the heavenly Jerusalem, and participates of the nature of both. (74) The perfection of the Holy Catholic Church, and her exalted glory, removed only by one degree from heaven, the faithful cannot sufficiently admire. In common with the inhabitants of heaven, we, too, possess Christ, God and man, present with us; but they, and in this they are raised a degree above us, are admitted to the actual enjoyment of the beatific vision, whilst we, with a firm and unwavering faith, offer the tribute of our homage to the Divine Majesty present with us, not, it is true, in a manner visible

The dignity conferred on the Church by the institution of this Sacrament.

(74) De Eccl. Hierar. c. 3, p.1.

to mortal eye, but hidden by a miracle of power, under the veil of the sacred mysteries. How admirably does not this Sacrament, also, display to us the infinite love of Jesus Christ to man ! It became the goodness of the Saviour not to withdraw from us that nature, which he assumed for our sake, but to desire, as far as possible, to dwell permanently amongst us, at all times strictly verifying the words: " My delight is to be with the children " of men." (75)

Christ whole and entire, present in this Sacrament.

Here the pastor will also explain to the faithful, that in this Sacrament are contained not only the true body of Christ, and all the constituents of a true body; but also Christ whole and entire—that the word Christ designates the man-God, that is to say, one Person in whom are united the divine and human natures—that the Holy Eucharist, therefore, contains both, and whatever is included in the idea of both, the divinity and humanity whole and entire, the soul, the body and blood of Christ with all their component parts—all of which faith teaches us are contained in the Sacrament. In heaven the whole humanity is united to the divinity in one hypostasis, or person, and it were impious, therefore, to suppose that the body of Christ, which is contained in the Sacrament, is separated from his divinity. (76)

In this Sacrament, some things effected by the words of consecration, some by concomitance.

The pastor, however, will not fail to observe, that in the Sacrament all are not contained after the same manner, or by the same efficacy: some things, we say, the efficacy of consecration accomplishes; for as the words of consecration effectuate what they signify, sacred writers usually say, that whatever the form expresses, is contained in the Sacrament by virtue of the Sacrament; and hence, could we suppose any one thing to be entirely separated from the rest, the Sacrament, in their opinion, would be found to contain solely what the form expresses. But, some things are contained in the Sacrament, because united to those which are expressed in the form; for instance the words: "This is my body," which comprise the form used to consecrate the bread, signify the body of the Lord, and hence, the body of the Lord is contained in the Eucharist, by virtue of the Sacrament. As, however, to the body are united his blood, his soul, his divinity, they too must be found to coexist in the Sacrament, not, however, by virtue of the consecration, but by virtue of the union that subsists between them and his body; and this theologians express by the word "concomitance." Hence it is clear, that Christ, whole and entire, is contained in the Sacrament; for when two things are actually united, where one is, the other must also be. Hence it also follows, that Christ, whole and entire, is contained under either species, so that as under the species of bread, are contained not only the body, but also the blood and Christ entire; so, in like manner, under the species of wine are contained not only the blood, but also the body and Christ entire.

(75) Prov. viii. 51.

(76) Vide de consec. dist. 2, multis in locis, item Amb. de iis qui myst. iuit. c. 9, D. T. p. 3. q. 76, art. 1.

These are matters on which the faithful cannot entertain a doubt. Wisely, however, was it ordained that two distinct consecrations should take place: they represent in a more lively manner, the passion of our Lord, in which his blood was separated from his body; and hence, in the form of consecration we commemorate the effusion of his blood. The Sacrament is to be used by us as the food and nourishment of our souls; and it was most accordant with this its use, that it should be instituted as meat and drink, which obviously constitute the proper food of man.

The pastor will also inform the faithful, that Christ, whole and entire, is contained not only under either species, but also in each particle of either species: "Each," says S. Augustine, "receives Christ the Lord entire in each particle: he is not diminished by being given to many, but gives himself whole and entire to each." (77) This is also an obvious inference from the narrative of the Evangelists: it is not to be supposed that the bread used at the Last Supper was consecrated by our Lord in sepa-

The elements, why separately consecrated

Christ, whole and entire in each particle of either species.

(77) August. de consec. dist. 2. c. singulis.

rate parts, applying the form particularly to each, but that all the sacramental bread then used, was consecrated in sufficient quantity to be distributed amongst the Apostles, at the same time and with the same form. That the consecration of the chalice also, was performed in the same manner, is obvious from these words of the Saviour: "Take and divide it amongst you." (78)

Transubstantiation proved from reason

What has been hitherto said is intended to enable the pastor to show, that the body and blood of Christ are really and truly contained in the Sacrament of the Eucharist. That the substance of the bread and wine does not continue to exist in the Sacrament after consecration is the next subject of instruction which is to engage his attention; a truth which, although well calculated to excite our profound admiration, is yet a necessary consequence from what has been already established. If, after consecration, the body of Christ is really and truly present under the species of bread and wine, not having been there before, it must have become so by change of place—by creation—or by transubstantiation. It cannot be rendered present by change of place, because it would then cease to be in heaven, for whatever is moved must necessarily cease to occupy the place from which it is moved. Still less can we suppose it to be rendered present by creation, an idea which the mind instantly rejects. In order that the body of our Lord be present in the Sacrament, it remains, therefore, that it be rendered present by transubstantiation, and of course, that the substance of the bread entirely cease to exist. Hence our predecessors in the faith, the Fathers of the general Council of Lateran, (79) and of Florence, (80) confirmed by solemn decrees the truth of this Article. In the Council of Trent it was still more fully defined in these words: "If any one shall say, that in the holy Sacrament of the Eucharist the substance of the bread and wine remains, together with the body and blood of our Lord Jesus Christ, let him be

From the Councils of the Church.

(78) Luke, xxii. 17.

(79) Lateran. Concil. c. 1.

(80) Flor. in epist. Eugenii IV. data ad Arm, & a Concilio approbata.

“anathema.”(81) The doctrine thus defined is a natural inference from the words of Scripture. When instituting this Sacrament our Lord himself said: “This is my body:” (82) the word “this,” expresses the entire substance of the thing present; and therefore, if the substance of the bread remained, our Lord could not have said: “This is my body.” In S. John he also says: “The bread that I will give is my flesh, for the life of the world:” (83) the bread which he promises to give, he here declares to be “his flesh.” A little after he adds: “Unless you eat the flesh of the Son of Man, and drink his blood, you shall not have life in you;”(84) and again, “My flesh is meat indeed, and my blood is drink indeed.”(85) When, therefore, in terms so clear and so explicit, he thus calls his flesh “meat indeed,” and his blood “drink indeed,” he gives us sufficiently to understand, that the substance of the bread and wine no longer exists in the Sacrament. Whoever turns over the pages of the Holy Fathers, will easily perceive, that, on the doctrine of Transubstantiation, they have been at all times unanimous. S. Ambrose says: “you say, perhaps, ‘this bread is no other than what is used for common food:’ before consecration it is indeed bread; but, no sooner are the words of consecration pronounced, than from bread it becomes the flesh of Christ.” (86) To prove this position more clearly, he elucidates it by a variety of comparisons and examples. In another place, when explaining these words of the Psalmist: “Whatsoever the Lord pleased he hath done in heaven and on earth,”(87) he says: “Although the species of bread and wine are visible, yet faith tells us that after consecration, the body and blood of Christ are alone there.” (88) Explaining the same doctrine almost in the same words, S. Hilary says, that although ex-

From Scripture.

From the concurrent testimony of the Fathers.

(81) Trid. sess. 13, can. 4.

(82) Matth. xxvi. 26.—Mark, xiv. 22.—Luke, xxi. 18.—1 Cor. xi. 24.

(83) John, vi. 52. (84) John, vi. 54. (85) John, vi. 56.

(86) Lib. 4, de sacr. c. 4. et c. 5, c. 4. (87) Ps. cxxxiv. 6.

(88) De consec. dist. 2. c. omnia.

ternally it appear bread and wine, yet in reality it is the body and blood of the Lord. (89)

The Eucharist, why called bread after consecration.

Here the pastor will not omit to observe to the faithful, that we should not at all be surprised, if even after consecration, the Eucharist is sometimes called bread: it is so called because it has the appearance and still retains the natural quality of bread, which is to support and nourish the body. That such phraseology is in perfect accordance with the style of the Holy Scriptures, which call things by what they appear to be, is evident from the words of Genesis, which say, that Abraham saw three men, when, in reality, he saw three angels; (90) and the two angels also, who appeared to the Apostles after the ascension of our Lord, are called not angels, but men. (91)

The manner in which this conversion is to be explained to the people.

To explain this mystery in a proper manner is extremely difficult. On the manner of this admirable conversion, the pastor, however, will endeavour to instruct those who are more advanced in the knowledge and contemplation of divine things: those who are yet weak may, it were to be apprehended, be overwhelmed by its greatness. This conversion, then, is so effectuated that the whole substance of the bread and wine is changed by the power of God, into the whole substance of the body of Christ, and the whole substance of the wine, into the whole substance of his blood, and this, without any change in our Lord himself: he is neither begotten, nor changed, nor increased, but remains entirely and substantially the same. This sublime mystery S. Ambrose thus declares: "You see how efficacious are the words of Christ; if, then, the word of the Lord Jesus is so powerful as to summon creation into existence, shall it not require a less exercise of power, to make that subsist, which already has existence, and to change it into another thing?" (92) Many other Fathers, whose authority is too grave to be questioned, (89) Hilar. de Trin. l. 8, et de consec. dist. 2. cap. 28.

(90) Gen. xviii. 2.

(91) Acts, i. 10. vid. D. Thom. 3, p. q. 75, art. 3 & 4.

(92) D. Ambr. l. 4. de sacr. c. 4.

have written to the same effect: "We faithfully confess," says S. Augustine, "that before consecration it is bread and wine, the produce of nature; but after consecration it is the body and blood of Christ, consecrated by the blessing." (93) "The body," says Damascene, "is truly united to the divinity, the body assumed of the virgin; not that the body thus assumed descends from heaven, but that the bread and wine are changed into the body and blood of Christ." (94) This admirable change, as the Council of Trent teaches, the Catholic Church most appropriately expresses by the word "transubstantiation." (95) When, in the natural order, the form of a being is changed, that change may be properly termed "a transformation;" in like manner, when, in the Sacrament of the Eucharist, the whole substance of one thing passes into the whole substance of another, the change our predecessors in the faith wisely and appropriately called "transubstantiation." But according to the admonition so frequently repeated by the Holy Fathers, the faithful are to be admonished against the danger of gratifying a prurient curiosity, by searching into the manner in which this change is effected. It mocks the powers of conception, nor can we find any example of it in natural transmutations, nor even in the wide range of creation. The change itself is the object not of our comprehension, but of our humble faith; and the manner of that change forbids the temerity of a too curious enquiry. (96)

This conversion appropriately called transubstantiation.

A mystery not to be curiously searched into.

The same salutary caution should also be observed by the pastor, with regard to the mysterious manner in which the body of our Lord is contained whole and entire under the least particle of the bread. (97) Such inscrutable mysteries should scarcely ever become matter of disquisition.

The same salutary caution again necessary.

(93) Citatur de consec. dist. 2, can. Nos autem.

(94) Lib. 4, de orthod. fid. c. 14.

(95) Trid. sess. 13, c. 4, et can. 2, et de consec. distinct. 2, c. panis.

(96) Eccli. iii. 22.

(97) D. Thom. 3, p. q. 76, Trid. sess. 13, c. 3, et can. 3, et Florent. in decret. Eugen.

Should Christian charity, however, require a departure from this salutary rule, the pastor will recollect first to prepare and fortify his hearers, by reminding them, that “no word shall be impossible with God.” (98)

The body of our Lord present in the Sacrament, not as in a place.

The pastor will next teach, that our Lord is not in the Sacrament as in a place: place regards things, only inasmuch as they have magnitude; and we do not say that Christ is in the Sacrament inasmuch as he is great or small, terms which belong to quantity, but inasmuch as he is a substance. The substance of the bread is changed into the substance of Christ, not into magnitude or quantity; and substance, it will be acknowledged, is contained in a small as well as in a large space. The substance of air, for instance, whether in a large or in a small quantity, and that of water whether confined in a vessel, or flowing in a river, must necessarily be the same. As, then, the body of our Lord succeeds to the substance of the bread, we must confess it to be in the Sacrament after the same manner, as the bread was before consecration: whether the substance of the bread was present in greater or less quantity is a matter of entire indifference.

The accidents remain in the Eucharist without a subject.

We now come to the third effect produced by the words of consecration, the existence of the species of bread and wine in the Sacrament without a subject, an effect as stupendous as it is admirable. What has been said in explanation of the two preceding points, must facilitate the exposition of this mysterious truth. We have already proved that the body and blood of our Lord are really and truly contained in the Sacrament, to the entire exclusion of the substance of the bread and wine: the accidents cannot adhere in the body and blood of Christ: they must, therefore, contrary to the physical laws, subsist of themselves, inhering in no subject. This has been, at all times, the doctrine of the Catholic Church; and the same authorities by which we have already proved, that the substance of the bread and wine ceases to exist in the Eucharist, go to establish its truth.(99) But it becomes the piety of the faithful, omitting subtle disquisitions, to revere and adore in the simplicity of faith, the majesty of this august Sacrament; and with sentiments of gratitude and admiration, to recognise the wisdom of God in the institution of the holy mysteries, under the species of bread and wine. To eat human flesh, or to drink human blood, is most revolting to human nature, and, therefore, has God, in his infinite wisdom, established the administration of the body and blood of Christ, under the forms of bread and wine, the ordinary and agreeable food of man. From its administration under these forms, also flow two other important advantages: it obviates the calumnious reproaches of the unbeliever, to which a manducation of the body and blood of our Lord, under human form, must be exposed; whilst, by receiving him under a form in which he is impervious to the senses, our faith is augmented, "which," as S. Gregory observes, "has no merit in those things, " which fall under the jurisdiction of reason."(100) But what has been hitherto said on this subject, demands much prudent precaution in its exposition; and in this the pastor will be guided by the capacity of his hearers, by times and circumstances.

Duties of piety towards this Sacrament.

The Eucharist, why instituted under the forms of bread and wine.

With regard to the salutary effects of this Sacrament, these, because most necessary to be known by all, the pastor will expound to all, indiscriminately and without reserve.(101) What we have said at such length on this subject, is to be made known to the faithful, principally with a view to make them sensible of the advantages which flow from its participation, advantages too numerous and important to be expressed in words, and amongst which the pastor must be content to select one or two points for

The salutary effects of the Eucharist to be fully explained to all, and how.

(99) Vid. de consecr. dist. 2, c. Nos autem et Decretal. lib. 1, tit. de caleb. Miss. c. cum Matth. et D. Th. 3, p. q. 75, a. 3, et q. 77, a. 1.

(100) Hom. 26, super Evangelia, vid. Cyrill. lib. 4, in Joan. c. 22, Cypr. de Cœna Domini. Ambr. de Sacram. l. 4, c. 4, Aug. Tract. 27, in Joan. D. Thom. p. 5, q. 74, a. 1, et q. 75, a. 1.

(101) Trid. sess. 13, c. 3, et can. 5, Iren. l. 4, c. 14, Cyril. l. 4, in Joan. c. 11 et 14. Chrysost. hom. 45, in Joan. D. Thom. 5, p. q. 79.

I. explanation, to show the superabundant graces with which the holy mysteries abound. To this end it will be found conducive, to premise an explanation of the nature and efficacy of the other Sacraments, and then compare the Eucharist to the living fountain, the other Sacraments to so many rivulets. With great truth is the Holy Eucharist called the fountain of all grace, containing as it does, after an admirable manner, the source of all gifts and graces, the author of all the Sacraments, Christ our Lord, from whom as from their source, they derive all their goodness and perfection. This comparison, therefore, serves to show how great are the treasures of grace, which are derived from this Sacrament.

II. It will also be found expedient to consider attentively the nature of bread and wine, the symbols of this Sacrament: what bread and wine are to the body, the Eucharist is, in a superior order, to the health and joy of the soul. It is not, like bread and wine, changed into our substance; but, in some measure, changes us into its own nature, and to it we may apply these words of S. Augustine: "I am the food of the grown: grow and thou shalt partake of this food; nor shalt thou change me into thee, as thou dost thy corporal food, but thou shalt be changed into me." (102) If then "grace and truth come by Jesus Christ," (103) these spiritual treasures must be poured into that soul, which receives with purity and holiness, him who says of himself: "He that eateth my flesh and drinketh my blood, abideth in me and I in him." (104) Those who piously and religiously receive this Sacrament, receive, no doubt, the Son of God into their souls, and are united, as living members, to his body; for it is written: "He that eateth me, the same also shall live by me;" (105) and also: "The bread that I will give is my flesh, for the life of the world." (106) Explaining these words of the Saviour, S. Cyril says: "The Eternal Word, uniting him-

I.
It imparts
grace.

(102) Lib. 7. Conf. c. 10. Vid. Ambr. l. 5. de sacr. c. 4. et Crys. hom. 45. in Joan.

(103) John, i. 17.

(104) John, vi. 57.

(105) John, vi. 58.

(106) John, vi. 52.

“self to his own flesh, imparted to it a vivifying power ;
 “it became him, therefore, to unite himself to us after a “wonderful manner, through his sacred flesh and precious “blood, which we receive in the bread and wine, conse“crated by his vivifying benediction.” (107)

But when it is said, that this Sacrament imparts grace, it is not intended to mean that, to receive this Sacrament with advantage, it is unnecessary to be previously in the state of grace. Natural food can be of no use to a person who is already dead, and in like manner the sacred mysteries can avail him nothing, who lives not in Spirit. Hence this Sacrament has been instituted under the forms of bread and wine, to signify, that the object of its institution is not to recall to life a dead soul, but to preserve life to a living one. We say that this Sacrament imparts grace, because even the first grace, which all should have before they presume to approach this Sacrament, least they “eat and drink judgment to themselves,” (108) is given to none unless they desire to receive the Holy Eucharist, which is the end of all the Sacraments, the symbol of ecclesiastical unity, to which he who does not belong, cannot receive divine grace. Again, as the body is not only supported but increased by natural food, from which we derive new pleasure every day ; so also the life of the soul is not only sustained but invigorated by feasting on the Eucharistic banquet, which imparts to it an increasing zest for heavenly things. With strictest truth and propriety, therefore, do we say that this Sacrament, which may be well compared to manna, “having in it all that is delicious, “and the sweetness of every taste,” imparts grace to the soul. (109)

To communicate worthily we must be in the state of grace.

That the Holy Eucharist remits lighter offences, or, as they are commonly called, venial sins, cannot be matter of doubt. Whatever losses the soul sustains by falling into some slight offences, through the violence of passion, these the Eucharist, which cancels lesser sins, repairs in

II.
 The Eucharist remits venial sins.

(107) Lib. 4. in Joan, c. 12, 14. et ep. 10. ad Nestor.

(108) 1 Cor. xi. 29.

(109) Wisd. xvi, 20.

the same manner, not to depart from the illustration already adduced, that natural food, as we know from experience, gradually repairs the daily waste caused by the vital heat of the system. Of this heavenly Sacrament justly therefore, has S. Ambrose said: "This daily bread is taken as a "remedy for daily infirmity."(110) This however, is to be understood of venial imperfections only.

III. The Holy Eucharist is also an antidote against the contagion of sin, and a shield against the violent assaults of temptation. (111) It is, as it were, a heavenly medicine, which secures the soul against the easy approach of virulent and deadly infection. S. Cyprian records that when, in the early ages of the Church, Christians were hurried in multitudes by tyrants, to torments and death, because they professed the name of Christ, they received, from the hand of the bishop, the Sacrament of the body and blood of our Lord, lest, perhaps, overcome by excess of torments, they should yield in the saving conflict. (112) It

Is an antidote against the contagion of sins.

IV. Represses concupiscence.

V. Facilitates the attainment of eternal life.

also represses the licentious desires of the flesh, and keeps them in due subjection to the spirit: in proportion as it inflames the soul with the fire of charity, in the same proportion does it necessarily extinguish the fire of concupiscence. Finally, to narrow within the compass of a few words all the advantages and blessings which emanate from this Sacrament, the Holy Eucharist facilitates to an extraordinary degree, the attainment of eternal life: "He that "cateth my flesh, and drinketh my blood," says the Redeemer, "hath everlasting life, and I will raise him up on "the last day." (113) The grace which it imparts, brings peace and tranquillity to the soul; and when the hour shall have arrived in which he is to take his departure from this mortal life, like another Elias, who in the strength of his miraculous repast, walked to Horeb the mount of God,(114) the Christian, invigorated by the strengthening influence of this heavenly food, shall wing his way to the mansions of everlasting glory and never-ending bliss. All these important particulars the pastor will be able fully to expound to the faithful, if he but dilate on the sixth chapter of S. John, in which are developed the manifold effects of this Sacrament; or if, glancing through the life and actions of our Lord, he shows that if they who received him beneath their roof during his mortal life, (115) or were restored to health by touching his vesture, or even the hem of his garment,(116) were justly deemed happy, how much more happy we, into whose souls, resplendent as he is with unfading glory, he disdains not to enter, to heal all our spiritual wounds, to enrich us with his choicest gifts, and to unite us to himself!

(110) Lib. 4. de Sacram. c. 6. et l. c. 4. Innocent. III. l. 4. de myst. Miss. c. 44. Cyrill. lib. 4. in Joan, c. 17. et lib. 3. c. 56. Inter. opera D. Bernardi habetur cujusdam sermo domini, qui incipit: PANEM ANGELO-RUM, et singularis est de Euchar. videatur, et D. Thom. 5. p. q. 79.

(111) Aug. tract. 26. in Joan. (112) Lib. 1. Epist. 2. ad Cornel.

(113) John, vi. 55. Vid. Chrys. de sacerdotio, dial. c. D. Thom. 3. p. q. 79<sup>a</sup> art. 2.

These effects explained and illustrated.

But to excite the faithful to emulate better gifts, (117) the pastor will also point out who they are, who derive these inestimable blessings from a participation of the holy mysteries, reminding them that Christians may communicate differently and with different effects. Hence our predecessors in the faith, as we read in the Council of Trent,(118) distinguished three classes of communicants—Some receive the Sacrament only: such are those sinners who dread not to approach the holy mysteries with polluted lips and depraved hearts, who, as the Apostle says, “eat and drink unworthily.” (119) Of this class of communicants S. Augustine says: “He who dwells not in Christ, and in whom Christ does not dwell, most certainly eats not spiritually his flesh, although carnally and visibly he press with his teeth the Sacrament of his flesh and blood.” (120) Not only, therefore, do those who receive the Holy Eucharist with these dispositions, obtain no fruit from its participation; but, as the Apostle says, “they eat and drink judgment to themselves.”(121) Others are said

The manner of communicating threefold:

Sacramentally,

Spiritually.

(114) 3 Kings, xix. 8. (115) Luke, xix. 9. (116) Matth. xiv. 36 & ix. 20.
 (117) 1 Cor. xii. 51. (118) De consecr. dist. 2. can. 46. sess. 13. cap. 8.
 (119) 1 Cor. xi. 29. (120) In Joan. tract. 16. et contra Donat. lib. 5. c. 8.
 (121) 1 Cor. xi. 29.

Sacramentally and spiritually.

to receive the Holy Eucharist in spirit only: they are those who, inflamed with a lively "faith that worketh by charity," (122) participate in desire, of this celestial food, from which they receive, if not the entire, at least very considerable fruit. Lastly, there are some who receive the Holy Eucharist both spiritually and sacramentally, those who, according to the advice of the Apostle, having first proved themselves, (123) approach this divine banquet, adorned with the nuptial garment, (124) and derive from it all those superabundant graces which we have already mentioned. Those therefore, who, having it in their power to receive, with due preparation, the Sacrament of the body and blood of the Lord, are yet satisfied with a spiritual communion only, manifestly deprive themselves of a heavenly treasure of inestimable value.

Necessity of previous preparation.

We now come to point out the manner in which the faithful should be previously prepared for sacramental communion. To demonstrate the necessity of this previous preparation, the example of the Saviour is to be proposed to the faithful. Before he gave to his Apostles the Sacrament of his body and blood, although they were already clean, he washed their feet, to declare that we must use extreme diligence to bring with us to its participation the greatest integrity and innocence of soul. In the next place, the faithful are to understand, that as he who approaches thus prepared and disposed, is adorned with the most ample gifts of heavenly grace, so on the contrary, he who approaches without this preparation and without these dispositions, not only derives from it no advantage, but plunges his own soul into the most unutterable misery. It is the property of the best and most salutary medicine, if seasonably applied, to be productive of the greatest benefit, but if unseasonably, to prove most pernicious and destructive. It cannot, therefore, excite our surprise, that the great and exalted gifts of God, when received into a soul properly predisposed, are of the greatest assistance towards the attainment of salvation; whilst to those who receive them without these necessary dispositions, they bring with them eternal death. Of this, the Ark of the Lord affords a convincing illustration: the people of Israel possessed nothing more precious; it was to them the source of innumerable blessings from God; but, when borne off by the Philistines, it brought on them a most destructive plague and the heaviest calamities, heightened, as they were, by eternal disgrace. (125) Food when received into a healthy stomach nourishes and supports the body; but the same food, when received into a stomach replete with peccant humours, generates malignant disease. (126)

(122) Gal. v. 6. (123) 1. Cor. xi. 28. (124) Matt. xxii. 11.

The first preparation, then, which the faithful should make, is to distinguish table from table, this sacred table from profane tables, (127) this celestial bread from common bread. This we do when we firmly believe, that the Eucharist really and truly contains the body and blood of the Lord, of him whom the angels adore in heaven, “at whose nod the pillars of heaven fear and tremble,” (128) of whose glory the heavens and the earth are full. (129) This is to discern the body of the Lord, in accordance with the admonition of the Apostle, (130) venerating rather, the greatness of the mystery, than too curiously investigating its truth by idle disquisition. Another very necessary preparation is to ask ourselves, if we are at peace with, if we sincerely and from the heart love, our neighbour. “If, therefore, thou offerest thy gift at the altar, and there rememberest, that thy brother hath aught against thee, leave there thy offering before the altar, and go first to be reconciled to thy brother, and then coming thou shalt offer thy gift.” (131) We should in the next place, carefully examine our consciences, lest perhaps they be defiled by mortal guilt, which sincere repentance alone can efface. This severe scrutiny is necessary in

Illustration

First preparation;

Second,

Third,

(125) 1 Kings, v. toto.

(126) De præparatione ad Euch. requisita vide Trid. sess. 13. c. 7. et can. 11. Basil. q. 172. regul. brev. et serm. 2, de bapt. Cyprian. toto fere lib. de Lapsis, agendo de Pœnit. Aug. serm. 1. de Temp. Chrys. hom. 44, 45, 46. in Joan. et in Matth. hom. 83. (127) 1 Cor. x. 21. (128) Job. xxvi. 11.

(129) Isa. vi. 5. (130) 1 Cor. xi. 29. (131) Matt. v. 24, 25.

order to cleanse the soul from its defilement, by applying to it the salutary medicine of contrition and confession. The Council of Trent has defined, that no one conscious of mortal sin, and having an opportunity of recurring to a confessor, however contrite he may deem himself, is to approach the Holy Eucharist, until he has been purified by sacramental confession. (132) We should also reflect in the silence of our own hearts, how unworthy we are that God should bestow on us this divine gift, and with the Centurion, of whom our Lord declared, that he found not "so great faith in Israel," we should exclaim: "Lord, "I am not worthy that thou shouldst enter under my "roof." (133) We should also put the question to ourselves, whether we can truly say with Peter: "Lord thou "knowest that I love thee;" (134) and should recollect, that he who sat down at the marriage feast without a nuptial garment, was cast into exterior darkness, and condemned to eternal torments. (135)

Fourth, Our preparation should not, however, be confined to the soul: it should also extend to the body. We are to approach the Holy Eucharist fasting, having neither eaten nor drunk, at least from the preceding midnight. (136) The dignity of so great a Sacrament also demands, that married persons abstain from the marriage-debt, for some days previous to communion, an observance recommended by the example of David, who, when about to receive the show-bread from the hands of the priest, declared, that he and his servants had been "clean from women for three "days." (137) These particulars contain a summary of the principal things to be observed by the faithful, preparatory to receiving the sacred mysteries; and to these heads may be reduced, whatever other preparations piety will suggest to the devout communicant. (138)

(132) Sess. 15. can. 11. Chrys. hom. 50, in Genes. et 20, in Matth. Cypr. in lib. de Lapsis. (135) Matth. viii. 8, 10.

(134) John, xxi. 15. (135) Matth. xxii. 12, 13.

(136) Vid. Aug. epist. 118, c. 6. et lib. 1. ad inquis. Januarii c. 6.

(137) 1 Kings, xxi. 3, 4, 5.

(138) Greg. in responsione 10, ad interrog. Aug. et hab. 33. q. 4, c. 7. Aug. serm. 2. de temp. et 2, 4.

But that none may be deterred by the difficulty of the preparation from approaching the Holy Eucharist, the faithful are frequently to be reminded that they are all bound to receive this Sacrament; and that the Church has decreed that whoever neglects to approach the holy communion once a year, at Easter, subjects himself to sentence of excommunication. (139) However, let not the faithful imagine that it is enough to receive the body of the Lord once a year only, in obedience to the decree of the Church: they should approach oftener; but whether monthly, weekly, or daily, cannot be decided by any fixed universal rule. S. Augustine, however, lays down a most certain rule applicable to all—"Live," says he, "in such a manner as to be able to receive every day." (140) It will therefore be the duty of the pastor frequently to admonish the faithful, that as they deem it necessary to afford daily nutriment to the body, they should also feel solicitous to feed and nourish the soul every day with this heavenly food. The soul stands not less in need of spiritual, than the body of corporal food. Here it will be found most useful to recapitulate the inestimable advantages which, as we have already shown, flow from sacramental communion, and the manna also which was a figure of this Sacrament, and of which the Israelites had occasion to partake every day, may be used as a further illustration. (141) The Fathers, who earnestly recommended the frequent participation of this Sacrament, may be adduced as additional authority to enforce the necessity of frequent communion; and the words, "thou sinnest daily, receive daily," convey the sentiments not alone of S. Augustine, but of all the Fathers who have written on the subject. (142)

All bound to communicate once a year, at Easter.

Importance of frequent communion

The soul stands not less in need of spiritual, than the body of corporal food.

The Fathers, who earnestly recommended the frequent participation of this Sacrament, may be adduced as additional authority to enforce the necessity of frequent communion;

(139) Concil. Lat. c. 28. et habetur l. 5. Decret. tit. de Pœnit. et remiss. cap. omnis utriusque sexus. Trid. sess. 13, 9.

(140) S. Aug. de verbis Domini, ser. 28. qui desumptus est ex. Amb. l. 5. de sacram. c. 4.

(141) Exod. xvi. 21, 22.

(142) Ad frequentem communionem hortantur Augustin. de verbis Domini serm. 28. sed hic sermo cum non sit August. sed Ambr. l. 5. de sacram. c. 4. rejectus est in appendicem tomi 10. item vide eundem Aug. Epist. 118. c. 5. item, Ignat. ad Ephes. satis ante finem. Basil. Epist. ad Cæsar. patr. Ambr.

Daily communion, the practice of the ancient Church.

That there was a time when the faithful approached the Holy Communion every day, we learn from the Acts of the Apostles. All who then professed the faith of Christ, burned with such pure and ardent charity, that devoting themselves, as they did unceasingly, to prayer and other works of piety, (143) they were found prepared to communicate daily. This devout practice which seems to have been interrupted for a time, was again partially revived by Pope Anaæletus, a most holy martyr, who commanded, that all the ministers who assisted at the holy sacrifice, should communicate, an ordinance, as the Pontiff declares, of Apostolic institution. (144) It was also for a long time the practice of the Church, that, as soon as the sacrifice was ended, the priest, turning to the congregation, invited the faithful to the holy table in these words: "Come, brethren, and receive the communion;" and those who were prepared, advanced to receive the holy mysteries with hearts animated by the most fervent devotion. (145) But subsequently, when charity and devotion declined amongst Christians, and the faithful very seldom approached the holy communion, it was decreed by Pope Fabian, that all should communicate thrice every year, at Christmas, at Easter, and at Pentecost, a decree which was afterwards confirmed by many Councils, particularly by the first of Agath. (146) Such, at length, was the decay of piety, that not only was this holy and salutary practice unobserved, but communion was deferred for years. The Council of Lateran, therefore, decreed that all the faithful should communicate, at least, once a year, at Easter, and that the omission should be chastised by exclusion from the so-

Thrice a year, subsequently decreed.

Finally, once a year.

l. 3. de sacr. c. 4. Chrysost. hom. 61. ad pop. Antioch. Cypr. de Ora. Domnica ad hæc verba, panem nostram quot Hieron. epist. 28. ad Lucin vers. finem. Cyril. c. 5. in Joan. c. 57, vide etiam de consec. dist. 2. per multa capita hac de re.

(145) Acts, ii. 42, 46.

(144) De consec. dist. 2, c. 10.

(145) De quotidiana communione vide Dionys. de Eccles. Hierarch. c. 3, parte 2, Hieron. Epist. 28, ad Lucin. Greg. I. 2, dialog. c. 23. Item vide l. de Eccl. dogmat. c. 55, & citatur de consec. dist. 2, c. 13.

(146) Fab. decret. habes de cons. dist. 2. c. 16. & ib. citatur Concil. Agathense c. 18. c. sæculares.

ciety of the faithful. (147) But although this law, sanctioned, as it is, by the authority of God and of his Church, regards all the faithful, the pastor, however, will teach that it does not extend to persons who have not arrived at the years of discretion, because they are incapable of discerning the Holy Eucharist from common food, and cannot bring with them to this Sacrament, the piety and devotion which it demands. To extend the precept to them would appear inconsistent with the institution of this Sacrament by our Lord: "Take," says he, "and eat," (148) words which cannot apply to infants, who are evidently incapable of taking and eating. In some places, it is true, an ancient practice prevailed of giving the Holy Eucharist even to infants; (149) but, for the reasons already assigned, and for other reasons most consonant to Christian piety, this practice has been long discontinued by authority of the same Church. With regard to the age at which children should be admitted to communion, this the parents and confessor can best determine: to them it belongs to ascertain whether the children have acquired a competent knowledge of this admirable Sacrament, and desire to taste this bread of angels.

To whom the obligation of this law extends.

The Eucharist anciently given to infants.

From persons labouring under actual insanity the Sacrament should also be withheld. However, according to the decree of the Council of Carthage, it may be administered to them at the close of life, provided they had evinced, previously to their insanity, a sincerely pious desire of being admitted to its participation, and if no danger arising from the state of the stomach, or other inconvenience or indignity, is to be apprehended. (150)

When to be given, when not to be given to insane persons.

As to the rite to be observed in the administration of this Sacrament, the pastor will teach, that the law of the Church interdicts its administration under both kinds to any but to the officiating priest, unless by special permission of the Church. Christ, it is true, as has been ex-

To be received under both kinds by the officiating priest only, and why.

(147) Citat. l. 5. decr. tit de pæn. & remiss. c. omnes utriusque sexus.

(148) Matth. xxvi. 26.

(149) Cypr. de Lapsis post med.

(150) Conc. Cath. 4. 76.

plained by the Council of Trent, (151) instituted and administered to his Apostles, at his last supper, this great Sacrament under both kinds; but it does not follow of necessity, that by doing so he established a law rendering its administration to the faithful under both species imperative. Speaking of this Sacrament he himself frequently mentions it under one kind only: "If," says he, "any man eat of this bread, he shall live for ever, and "the bread that I will give is my flesh for the life of the "world," and, "He that eateth this bread shall live for "ever." (152) The Church, no doubt, was influenced by numerous and cogent reasons, not only to approve but confirm by solemn decree, the general practice of communicating under one species. In the first place, the greatest caution was necessary to avoid accident or indignity, which must become almost inevitable, if the chalice were

I. administered in a crowded assemblage. In the next place,

II. the Holy Eucharist should be, at all times in readiness for the sick, and if the species of wine remained long unconsumed, it were to be apprehended that it may become vapid. Besides, there are many who cannot bear

III. the taste or smell of wine; lest, therefore, what is intended for the nutriment of the soul should prove noxious to the health of the body, the Church, in her wisdom, has sanctioned its administration under the species of

IV. bread alone. We may also observe that, in many places wine is extremely scarce, nor can it be brought from distant countries without incurring very heavy expense, and encountering very tedious and difficult journeys. Finally, a circumstance which principally influenced the

V. Church in establishing this practice, means were to be devised to crush the heresy which denied, that Christ, whole and entire, is contained under either species, and asserted that the body is contained under the species of bread without the blood, and the blood under the species of wine without the body. This object was attained by communion under the species of bread alone, which places, as it were, sensibly before our eyes, the truth of the Catholic faith. Those who have written expressly on this subject, will, if it appear necessary, furnish the pastor with additional reasons for the practice of the Catholic Church in the administration of the Holy Eucharist.

(151) Sess. 21. decem sub utraque specie can. 1. 2. 3.

(152) John, vi. 52, 59. Unius tantum speciei usum sufficere ad perfectam communionem colliges ex Tertull. l. 2. ad uxorem. Cypr. de Lapsis. Orig. hom. 13, in Exod. Basil. epist. ad Cæsar. patr. Aug. ep. 86. Hier. in Apol. ad Pammach. Chrysost. hom. 41. operis imperf. in Matth.

To omit nothing doctrinal on so important a subject, we now come to speak of the minister of the Sacrament, a point, however, on which scarcely any one is ignorant. The pastor then will teach, that to priests alone has been given power to consecrate and administer the Holy Eucharist. That the unvarying practice of the Church has also been, that the faithful receive the Sacrament from the hand of the priest, and that the priest communicate himself, has been explained by the Council of Trent; (131) and the same holy Council has shown that this practice is always to be scrupulously adhered to, stamped, as it is, with the authoritative impress of Apostolic tradition, and sanctioned by the illustrious example of our Lord himself, who, with his own hands, consecrated and gave to his disciples, his most sacred body. (154).

...
...
...

Priests alone, the ministers of the Eucharist.

To consult as much as possible, for the dignity of this so august a Sacrament, not only is its administration confided exclusively to the priestly order; but the Church has also, by an express law, prohibited any but those who are consecrated to religion, unless in case of necessity, to touch the sacred vessels, the linen or other immediate necessities for consecration. Priest and people may hence learn, what piety and holiness they should possess who consecrate, administer, or receive the Holy of Holies. The Eucharist, however, as was observed with regard to the other Sacraments, whether administered by holy or unholy hands, is equally valid. It is of faith that the effi-

The laity prohibited to touch the sacred vessels, &c.

Efficacy of the Eucharist not affected by the merit or demerit of the minister.

(153) Sess. 13, c. 10.

(154) Matth. xxvi. 26.—Math. xiv. 22.

cacy of the Sacraments does not depend on the merit of the minister, but on the virtue and power of our Lord Jesus Christ.

The Eucharist a sacrifice.

With regard to the Eucharist as a Sacrament, these are the principal points which demanded explanation. Its nature as a sacrifice we now come to explain, that pastors may know what are the principal instructions to be communicated to the faithful regarding this mystery, on Sundays and holidays, in compliance with the decree of the Council of Trent. (155) Not only is this Sacrament a treasure of heavenly riches, which if we turn to good account will purchase for us the favour and friendship of heaven; but it also possesses the peculiar and extraordinary value, that in it we are enabled to make some suitable return to God for the inestimable benefits bestowed on us by his bounty. If duly and legitimately offered, this victim is most grateful and most acceptable to God. If the sacrifices of the old law, of which it is written: "Sacrifices and oblations thou wouldst not; (156) and also, "If thou hadst desired sacrifice, I would, indeed, have given it: with burnt-offering thou wilt not be delighted," (157) were so acceptable in his sight that, as the Scripture testifies, from them "he smelt a sweet savour," (158) that is to say, they were grateful and acceptable to him; what have we not to hope from the efficacy of a sacrifice, in which is immolated and offered no less a victim than he, of whom a voice from heaven twice proclaimed: "This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased." (159) This mystery, therefore, the pastor will carefully explain to the people, that when assembled at its celebration, they may learn to make it the subject of attentive and devout meditation.

Instituted for two great ends.

He will teach, in the first place, that the Eucharist was instituted by our Lord for two great purposes, to be the celestial food of the soul, preserving and supporting spiritual life, and to give to the Church a perpetual sacrifice, by which sin may be expiated, and our heavenly Father, whom our crimes have often grievously offended, may be turned from wrath to mercy, from the severity of just vengeance to the exercise of benignant clemency. Of this the paschal lamb, which was offered and eaten by the Israelites as a sacrament and sacrifice, was a lively figure. (160) Nor could our divine Lord, when about to offer himself to his eternal Father on the altar of the cross, have given a more illustrious proof of his unbounded love for us, than by bequeathing to us a visible sacrifice, by which the bloody sacrifice, which, a little after, was to be offered once on the cross, was to be renewed, and its memory celebrated daily throughout the universal Church even to the consummation of time, to the great advantage of her children.

(155) Sess. 22. princip. c. 8. (156) Ps. xxxix. 7. (157) Ps. l. 18.
 (158) Gen. viii. 21. (159) Matth. iii. 17.

Reflection.

The difference between the Eucharist as a sacrament and sacrifice is very great, and is two-fold: as a sacrament it is perfected by consecration, as a sacrifice all its efficacy consists in its oblation. When deposited in a tabernacle, or borne to the sick, it is, therefore, a sacrament, not a sacrifice. As a sacrament, it is also to the worthy receiver a source of merit, and brings with it all those advantages which we have already mentioned; as a sacrifice it is not only a source of merit but also of satisfaction. As, in his passion, our Lord merited and satisfied for us; so in the oblation of this sacrifice, which is a bond of Christian unity, Christians merit the fruit of his passion, and satisfy for sin.

The difference between the Eucharist as a sacrament and sacrifice, two-fold.

With regard to the institution of this sacrifice, the Council of Trent has obviated all doubt on the subject, by declaring that it was instituted by our Lord at his last supper, whilst it denounces anathema against all who assert, that in it is not offered to God a true and proper sacrifice; or that to offer means nothing more, than that Christ gives himself to be our spiritual food. (161) That sacri-

This sacrifice when, and by whom instituted.

(160) Deut. 16.

(161) Vid. Trid. de Sacrif. Missæ c. 1. 5. Dionys, l. 17. de Eccles. c. 3.

Sacrifice
due to God alone.

fi ce is due to God alone, the holy Council also states the clearest terms. (162) The solemn sacrifice of the Mass, it is true, sometimes offered to honor the memory of the Saints; but it is never offered to them, but to God alone who has crowned them with unfading glory. Neither does the officiating minister say: "I offer sacrifice to thee Peter, or to thee Paul;" but whilst he offers sacrifice to God alone, he renders him thanks for the signal victories won by the martyrs, and implores their patronage, "that they whose memory we celebrate on earth, may vouchsafe to intercede for us in heaven." (163) The doctrine of the Catholic Church with regard to this sacrifice, so received from our Lord, when, at his last supper, committing to his Apostles the sacred mysteries, he said: "This do, for a commemoration of me." (164) He has, as the holy synod has defined, ordained them priests, and commanded them and their successors in the ministry, to immolate and offer in sacrifice his precious body and blood. (165) Of this the words of the Apostle to the Corinthians also afford sufficient evidence: "You cannot say he, "drink the chalice of the Lord, and the chalice of devils: you cannot be partakers of the table of the Lord, and of the table of devils." (166) As then, "the table of devils," we understand the altar upon which sacrifice was offered to them; so by "the table of the Lord," to bring the words of the Apostle to an appropriate conclusion, should be understood the altar on which sacrifice was offered to the Lord.

Figures
and prophecies of this sacrifice.

Should we look for figures and prophecies of this sacrifice in the Old Testament, we find, in the first place that its institution was clearly foretold by Malachy

Ignat. epist. ad Smyrn. Tert. lib. de Orat. Iren. l. 4. c. 32. Aug. l. 10. Civit. Dei, c. 10, et l. 17. c. 20. et l. 18. c. 35. et l. 10. c. 13. et l. 5. c. 8. et alibi passim.—Vide etiam. Sess. 22. de sacrific. Missæ, c. 1, can. 1 & 2.

(162) Trid. Synod. sess. 21. c. 3.

(165) Aug. contra Faust. lib. 20. c. 21.

(164) Luke, xxii. 19.—1 Cor. xi. 24.

(165) Conc. Trid. sess. 22. c. 1.

(166) 1 Cor. x. 21.

these words: "From the rising of the sun, even to the going down thereof, my name is great among the Gentiles, and in every place there is sacrifice, and there is offered to my name a clean oblation: for my name is great among the Gentiles, saith the Lord of hosts." (167) This saving victim was also foretold, as well before as after the promulgation of the Mosaic law, by a variety of sacrifices; for this alone, as the perfection and completion of all, comprises all the advantages which were typified by the other sacrifices. In none of the sacrifices of the old law, however, do we discover a more lively image of the Eucharistic sacrifice than in that of Melchisedech. (168) Our Lord himself, at his Last Supper, offered to his Eternal Father his precious body and blood under the appearances of bread and wine, at the same time declaring himself, "a priest for ever according to the order of Melchisedech." (169)

We, therefore, confess that the sacrifice of the Mass is one and the same sacrifice with that of the cross: the victim is one and the same, Christ Jesus, who offered himself, once only, a bloody sacrifice on the altar of the cross. The bloody and unbloody victim is still one and the same, and the oblation of the cross is daily renewed in the eucharistic sacrifice, in obedience to the command of our Lord: "This do, for a commemoration of me." (170) The Priest is also the same, Christ our Lord: the ministers who offer this sacrifice, consecrate the holy mysteries not in their own but in the person of Christ. This the words of consecration declare: the priest does not say: "This is the body of Christ," but, "This is my body;" and thus invested with the character of Christ, he changes the substance of the bread and wine into the substance of his real body and blood. (171) That the holy sacrifice of the Mass, therefore, is not only a sacrifice of praise and

The sacrifice of the Mass the same with that of the cross.

(167) Malach. i. 11,

(168) Gen. xiv. 18.

(169) Heb. vii. 17.—Ps. cix. 4. (170) Luke, xxii. 19.—1 Cor. xi. 24.

(171) Chrys. hom. 2. in 2. ad Timoth. et hom. de prod. Judæ. Ambr. lib. 4. de Sacram. c. 4.

The Mass,
a sacrifice of praise, thanksgiving, and propitiation

thansgiving, or a commemoration of the sacrifice of the cross; but also a sacrifice of propitiation, by which God is appeased and rendered propitious, the pastor will teach as a dogma defined by the unerring authority of a General Council of the Church. (173) If, therefore, with pure hearts and a lively faith, and with a sincere sorrow for past transgressions, we immolate and offer in sacrifice this most holy victim, we shall, no doubt, receive from the Lord "mercy and grace in seasonable aid." (174) So acceptable to God is the sweet odour of this sacrifice, that through its oblation he pardons our sins, bestowing on us the gifts of grace and of repentance. This is the solemn prayer of the Church: as often as the commemoration of this victim is celebrated, so often is the work of our salvation promoted, and the plenteous fruits of that bloody victim flow in upon us abundantly, through this unbloody sacrifice.

Available to the living and the dead:

The pastor will also teach, that such is the efficacy of this sacrifice, that its benefits extend not only to the celebrant and communicant, but also to all the faithful whether living or numbered amongst those who have died in the Lord, but whose sins have not yet been fully expiated. According to apostolic tradition the most authentic, it is not less available when offered for them than when offered in atonement for the sins, in alleviation of the punishments, the satisfactions, the calamities, or for the relief of the necessities, of the living. (175) It is hence easy to perceive, that the Mass, whenever and wherever offered, because conducive to the common interests and salvation of all, is to be considered common to all the faithful.

Common to all the faithful.

Its rites and ceremonies.

This great sacrifice is celebrated with many solemn rites and ceremonies: of these rites and ceremonies let none be deemed useless or superfluous: all on the contrary tend to display the majesty of this august sacrifice, and to excite the faithful, by the celebration of these saving mysteries, to the contemplation of the divine things which lie con-

(173) Trident. sess. 22. de sacrif. Missæ, c. 2. & can. 5.

(174) Hebr. iv. 16.

(175) Trid. Synod. sess. 22. cap. 206.

celebrated in the eucharistic sacrifice. On these rites and ceremonies we shall not enter at large: they require a more lengthened exposition than is compatible with the nature of the present work; and the pastor has it in his power to consult on the subject, a variety of treatises composed by men eminent alike for piety and learning. What has been said will, with the divine assistance, be found sufficient to explain the principal things which regard the Holy Eucharist both as a sacrament and sacrifice.

---

ON THE SACRAMENT OF PENANCE.

---

As the frailty and weakness of human nature are universally known and felt, no one can be ignorant of the paramount necessity of the Sacrament of Penance. If, therefore, in the exposition of the different matters of instruction, we are to measure the assiduity of the pastor by the weight and importance of the subject, we must come to the conclusion that, in expounding this Sacrament, he can never be sufficiently assiduous. Its exposition demands an accuracy superior to that of baptism. Baptism is administered but once, and cannot be repeated; penance may be administered and becomes necessary, as often as we may have sinned after baptism, according to the definition of the Fathers of Trent. "For those who fall into sin after baptism," say they, "the sacrament of penance is as necessary to salvation, as is baptism for those who have not been already baptised." (1) On this subject the words of S. Jerome, which say, that penance is "a second plank," (2) are universally known, and highly commended by all who have written on this

Necessity
of the sacrament of Penance.

(1) Sess. 6. de Just. cap. 14. & Sess. 14. de pœnit. cap. 3. in 5 cap.

(2) Hieron. ad hæc verba, Ruit Hierusalem, & epistola 8.

Sacrament. As he who suffers shipwreck has no hope of safety, unless, perchance, he seize on some plank from the wreck; so he that suffers the shipwreck of baptismal innocence, unless he cling to the saving plank of penance, may abandon all hope of salvation. These instructions, however, are intended not only for the benefit of the pastor, but also for that of the faithful at large, whose attention they may awaken, lest they be found culpably negligent in a matter of all others the most important. Impressed with a just sense of the frailty of human nature, their first and most earnest desire should be, to advance, with the divine assistance, in the ways of God, flying sin of every sort. But should they, at any time, prove so unfortunate as to fall, then, looking at the infinite goodness of God, who like the good shepherd binds up and heals the wounds of his sheep, they should have immediate recourse to the sacrament of penance, that by its salutary and medicinal efficacy their wounds may be healed. (3)

Different meanings of the word, penance.

But to enter more immediately on the subject, and to avoid all error to which the ambiguity of the word may give rise, its different meanings are first to be explained. By penance some understand satisfaction; whilst others, who wander far from the doctrine of the Catholic faith, supposing penance to have no reference to the past, define it to be nothing more than newness of life. The pastor, therefore, will teach that the word (pœnitentia) has a variety of meanings. In the first place, it is used to express a change of mind; as when, without taking into account the nature of the object, whether good or bad, what was before pleasing, is now become displeasing to us. In this sense the Apostle makes use of the word, when he applies it to those, "whose sorrow is according to the world, not according to God; and therefore, worketh not salvation but death." (4) In the second place, it is used to express that sorrow which the sinner conceives for sin, not however for sake of God, but for his own sake. A third meaning is when we experience interior sorrow of heart, or give exterior indication of such sorrow, not only on account of the sins which we have committed, but also for sake of God alone whom they offend. To all these sorts of sorrow the word (pœnitentia) properly applies.

I.

(3) Ezech. xxxiv. 16. De Pœnitentia e patribus antiquis scripserunt Tertul. librum unum. Cypr. epistolas plures et unum lib. de Lapsis, Pacianus lib. unum et duas epistolas ad Symproniam, ac de pœnit. et confession. seu paran. ad pœnit. Ambros. libros duos pœnit. Chrysost. Homilias 10. et sermon. de pœnit. Ephrem. lib. et sermon. de pœnit. Fulgentius lib. 2. de remission. peccatorum ad Euthymium, et sess. 14. de pœnit. cap. 5. Greg. Nyssenus orationem de pœnit. Basil. homil. unam quæ est postrema variarum, Augustin. denique lib. unum de vera et falsa pœnitentia, et librum insignem de pœnitentiæ medicina. His adde Marcum Eremitam cujus extat de pœnitent. liber unus, sed caute legendus: de eovide Bellarmin. de Script. Eccles. Qui non habet Patres supra citatos, videat in Decreta Gratiani de pœnitent. 7. distinctiones.

II.

When the Sacred Scriptures say that God repented, (5) the expression is evidently figurative: when we repent of any thing, we are anxious to change it; and thus, when God is said to change any thing, the Scriptures, accommodating their language to our ideas, say that he repents. Thus we read that "it repented him that he had made man," (6) and also that it repented him to have made Saul king. (7)

In what sense God is said to repent.

But an important distinction is to be made between these different significations of the word: to repent, in its first meaning, argues imperfection—in its second, the agitation of a disturbed mind—in the third, penance is a virtue and a sacrament, the sense in which it is here used.

Meaning of penance here.

We shall first treat of penance as a virtue, not only because it is the bounden duty of the pastor to form the faithful, with whose instruction he is charged, to the practice of every virtue; but also, because the acts which proceed from penance as a virtue, constitute the matter as it were, of penance as a sacrament; and if ignorant of it in this latter sense, impossible not to be ignorant also of its efficacy as a sacrament. The faithful, therefore, are Penance as a virtue.

(4) 2 Cor. vii. 10.

(5) Gen. vi. 6. 1 Kings, xv. 11. Ps. cv. 45. Jerem. xxvi. 5.

(6) Gen. vi. 6.

(7) 1 Kings, xv. 11.

first to be admonished and exhorted to labour strenuously to attain this interior penance of the heart, which we call a virtue, and without which exterior penance can avail them very little. (8) This virtue consists in turning to God sincerely and from the heart, and in hating and detesting our past transgressions, with a firm resolution of amendment of life, hoping to obtain pardon through the mercy of God. It is accompanied with a sincere sorrow, which is an agitation and affection of the mind, and is called by many a passion, and if accompanied with detestation, is, as it were, the companion of sin. It must, however, be preceded by faith, for without faith no man can turn to God. Faith, therefore, cannot on any account be called a part of penance. (9) That this inward affection of the soul is, as we have already said, a virtue, the various precepts which enforce its necessity prove; for precepts regard those actions only the performance of which implies virtue. Besides, to experience a sense of sorrow at the time, in the manner, and to the extent which are consonant to reason and religion, is no doubt an exercise of virtue: and this sorrow is regulated by the virtue of penance. Some conceive a sorrow which bears no proportion to the enormity of their crimes: "There are some," says Solomon, "who are glad when they have done evil;" (10) whilst others, on the contrary, consign themselves to such morbid melancholy and to such a deluge of grief, as utterly to abandon all hope of salvation. Such perhaps was the condition of Cain when he exclaimed: "My iniquity is greater than that I may deserve pardon:" (11) such certainly was the condition of Judas, who, "repenting," hanged himself in despair, and thus sacrificed soul and body. (12) Penance therefore, considered as a virtue, assists us in restraining within the bounds of moderation our sense of sorrow.

Supposes
faith.

Proved to be a virtue.

I.

II.

(8) Vide Amb. in sermone de pœn. et citatur de pœnit. dist. 3. cap. pœnitentia. Aug. lib. de vera et falsa pœn. c. 8. et habetur de pœn. 3. c. 4. Greg. hom. 34. in Evang. et lib. 9. Regist. Epist. 59.

(9) Trid. Sess. 14. de pœn. c. 3. can. 4.

(10) Prov. ii. 14.

(11) Gen. iv. 13.

(12) Matth. xxvii. 5.

III.

That penance is a virtue may also be inferred from the ends which the penitent proposes to himself. The first is to destroy sin and efface from the soul its every spot and stain; the second, to make satisfaction to God for the sins which he has committed, and this is an act of justice towards God. Between God and man, it is true, no relation of strict justice can exist, so great is the distance between the Creator and the creature; yet between both there is evidently a sort of justice, such as exists between a father and his children, between a master and his servants. The third end is, to reinstate himself in the favor and friendship of God whom he has offended, and whose hatred he has earned by the turpitude of sin. That penance is a virtue, these three ends which the penitent proposes to himself, sufficiently prove.

The degrees by which we attain this virtue.

I.
II.

We must also point out the steps, by which we may ascend to this divine virtue. The mercy of God first prevents us and converts our hearts to him; this was the object of the prophet's prayer: "Convert us, O Lord! and we shall be converted." (13)—Illumined by this celestial light the soul next tends to God by faith: "He that cometh to God," says the Apostle, "must believe that he is, and is a rewarder to them that seek him." (14) A salutary fear of God's judgments follows, and the soul, contemplating the punishments that await sin, is recalled from the paths of vice: "As a woman with-child," says Isaias, "when she draweth near the time of her delivery, is in pain and crieth out in her pangs; so are we become in thy presence, O Lord!" (15)—We are also animated with a hope of obtaining mercy from God, and cheered by this hope we resolve on a change of life.—Lastly, our hearts are inflamed by charity; and hence we conceive that filial fear which a dutiful and ingenuous child experiences towards a parent. Thus, dreading only to offend the majesty of God in any thing, we entirely abandon the ways of sin. These are, as it were, the steps by which we

III.

IV.

V.

(13) Jerem. xxxi. 18. (14) Heb. xi. 6. (15) Isa. xxvi. 17.

Heaven the reward of penance.

ascend to this most exalted virtue, a virtue altogether heavenly and divine, to which the Sacred Scriptures promise the inheritance of heaven: "Do penance," says the Redeemer, "for the kingdom of heaven is at hand:" (16) "If," says the prophet Ezekiel, "the wicked do penance for all his sins which he hath committed, and keep all my commandments, and do judgment and justice, living he shall live, and shall not die:" (17) "I desire not," saith the Lord, the death of the wicked, but that the "wicked turn from his way and live;" (18) words which are evidently understood of eternal life.

Penance as a sacrament
Why instituted by our Lord.

I.

With regard to external penance, the pastor will teach that it is that which constitutes the sacrament of penance: it consists of certain sensible things significant of that which passes interiorly in the soul; and the faithful are to be informed, in the first place, why the Redeemer was pleased to give it a place among the Sacraments. His object was, no doubt, to remove, in a great measure, all uncertainty as to the pardon of sin promised by our Lord when he said: "If the wicked do penance for all his sins which he hath committed, and keep all my commandments, and do judgment and justice, living he shall live and shall not die." (19) Pronouncing upon his own actions, every man has reason to question the accuracy of his own judgment, and hence, on the sincerity of interior penance the mind must be held in anxious suspense. To calm this our solicitude, the Redeemer instituted the sacrament of penance, in which we cherish a well founded hope, that our sins are forgiven us by the absolution of the priest, and the faith which we justly have in the efficacy of the Sacraments, has much influence in tranquillising the troubled conscience and giving peace to the soul. The voice of the priest, who is legitimately constituted a minister for the remission of sins, is to be heard as that of Christ himself, who said to the lame man: "Son be of good cheer, thy sins are forgiven thee." (20)

(16) Matth. iv. 17.

(17) Ezek. xviii. 21.

(18) Ezek. xxxiii. 11.

(19) Ezek. xviii. 21.

(20) Matth. ix. 2. Vid. Conc. Trid. sess. xiv. c. 1. in noc. 1. Epist. 91 inter epist. Aug.

II.

Moreover, as salvation is unattainable but through Christ and the merits of his passion, the institution of this sacrament was in itself accordant to the views of divine wisdom, and pregnant with blessings to the Christian. Penance is the channel through which the blood of Christ flows into the soul, washes away the stains contracted after baptism, and calls forth from us the grateful acknowledgment, that to the Saviour alone we are indebted for the blessing of a reconciliation with God.

That penance is a sacrament the pastor will not find it difficult to establish: baptism is a sacrament because it washes away all, particularly original sin: penance also washes away all sins of thought or deed committed after baptism; on the same principle, therefore, penance is a sacrament. Again, and the argument is conclusive, a sacrament is the sign of a sacred thing, and what is done externally, by the priest and penitent, is a sign of what takes place, internally, in the soul: the penitent unequivocally expresses, by words and actions, that he has turned away from sin: the priest, too, by words and actions, gives us easily to understand, that the mercy of God is exercised in the remission of sin: this is, also, clearly evinced by these words of the Saviour: "I will give to thee the keys of the kingdom of heaven; whatever sins you loose on earth, shall be loosed, also, in heaven." (21) The absolution of the priest, which is expressed in words, seals, therefore, the remission of sins, which it accomplishes in the soul, and thus is penance invested with all the necessary conditions of a sacrament, and is, therefore, truly a sacrament.

Penance proved to be a sacrament.

That penance is not only to be numbered amongst the sacraments, but also amongst the sacraments that may be repeated, the faithful are next to be taught. To Peter, asking if sin may be forgiven seven times, our Lord replies: "I say, not seven times, but seventy times seven." (22) Whenever, therefore, the ministry of the priest is to be exercised towards those who seem to diffide in the infi-

The sacrament of penance may be repeated.

(21) Matth. xvi. 19.

(22) Matth. xviii. 22.

nite goodness and mercy of God, the zealous pastor will seek to inspire them with confidence, and to reanimate their hopes of obtaining the grace of God. This he will find it easy to accomplish by expounding the preceding words of our Lord, by adducing other texts of the same import, which are to be found numerously scattered throughout the Sacred Volume; and by adopting those reasons and arguments which are supplied by S. Chrysostome in his book "on the fallen," and by S. Ambrose in his treatise on penance. (23)

Its matter.

As, then, amongst the sacraments there is none on which the faithful should be better informed, they are to be taught, that it differs from the other sacraments in this: the matter of the other sacraments is some production of nature or art; but the acts of the penitent, contrition, confession, and satisfaction, constitute, as has been defined by the Council of Trent, the matter as it were (quasi materia) of the sacrament of penance. (24) They are called parts of penance, because required in the penitent, by divine institution, for the integrity of the sacrament and the full and entire remission of sin. When the holy synod says, that they are "the matter as it were," it is not because they are not the real matter, but because they are not, like water in baptism and chrism in confirmation, matter that may be applied externally. With regard to the opinion of some, who hold that the sins themselves constitute the matter of this sacrament, if well weighed, it will not be found to differ from what has been already laid down: we say that wood which is consumed by fire, is the matter of fire; and sins which are destroyed by penance, may also be called, with propriety, the matter of penance.

Sins in what sense its matter.

Its form.

The form, also, because well calculated to excite the faithful, to receive with fervent devotion the grace of this sacrament, the pastor will not omit to explain. The words

(23) Chrys. 1. 5. lib. de laps. repar. et habetur de pœnit. dist. 3. c. talis. Amb. de pœnit. lib. 1. c. 1. et 2. vid. et Aug. lib. de vera et falsa pœnit. c. 5. citatur de pœnit. dist. c. 3. adhuc instant.

(24) Sess. 24. de pœnit, c. 3. et cau. 4.

that compose the form are : “ I ABSOLVE THEE;” as may be inferred not only from these words of the Redeemer : “ Whatsoever you shall bind upon earth, shall be bound also in heaven ;” (25) but also from the same doctrine of Jesus Christ, as recorded by the Apostles. That this is the perfect form of the sacrament of penance, the very nature of the form of a sacrament proves. The form of a sacrament signifies what the sacrament accomplishes : these words “ I absolve thee” signify the accomplishment of absolution from sin through the instrumentality of this sacrament ; they therefore constitute its form. Sins are, as it were, the chains by which the soul is fettered, and from the bondage of which it is “ loosed” by the sacrament of penance. This form is not less true, when pronounced by the priest over him, who, by means of perfect contrition, has already obtained the pardon of his sins. Perfect contrition, it is true, reconciles the sinner to God, but his justification is not to be ascribed to perfect contrition alone, independently of the desire which it includes of receiving the sacrament of penance. Many prayers accompany the form, not because they are deemed necessary, but in order to remove every obstacle, which the unworthiness of the penitent may oppose to the efficacy of the sacrament. Let then the sinner pour out his heart in fervent thanks to God, who has invested the ministers of his Church with such ample powers ! Unlike the authority given to the priests of the Old Law, to declare the leper cleansed from his leprosy, (26) the power with which the priests of the New Law are invested, is not simply to declare that sins are forgiven, but, as the ministers of God, really to absolve from sin ; a power which God himself, the author and source of grace and justification, exercises through their ministry.

Why accompanied with prayers.

Reflection.

The rites, used in the administration of this sacrament, also demand the serious attention of the faithful. They will enable them to form a more just estimate of the blessings which it bestows, recollecting that as servants, they

The rites to be observed in receiving this sacrament.

(25) Matth. xviii. 18.

(26) Levit. xiii. 9. et xiv. 2.

are reconciled to the best of masters, or rather, as children, to the tenderest of fathers. They will, also, serve to place in a clearer point of view, the duty of those who desire, and desire every one should, to evince their grateful recollection of so inestimable a favor. Humbled in spirit, the sincere penitent casts himself down at the feet of the priest, to testify, by this his humble demeanour, that he acknowledges the necessity of eradicating pride, the root of all those enormities which he now deplures. In the minister of God, who sits in the tribunal of penance as his legitimate judge, he venerates the power and person of our Lord Jesus Christ; for in the administration of this, as in that of the other sacraments, the priest represents the character and discharges the functions of Jesus Christ. Acknowledging himself deserving of the severest chastisements, and imploring the pardon of his guilt, the penitent next proceeds to the confession of his sins. To the antiquity of all these rites S. Denis bears the most authentic testimony. (27)

Its advantages.

- To the faithful, however, nothing will be found more advantageous, nothing better calculated to animate them to frequent the sacrament of penance with alacrity, than the frequent exposition of the inestimable advantages which it confers. They will then see, that of penance it may be truly said: that "its root is bitter, but its fruit sweet."
- I. The great efficacy of penance is, therefore, that it restores us to the favor of God, and unites us to him in the closest
  - II. bonds of friendship. (28) From this reconciliation with God, the devout soul, who approaches the sacrament with deep sentiments of piety and religion, sometimes experiences the greatest tranquillity and peace of conscience, a
  - III. tranquillity and peace accompanied with the sweetest spiritual joy.
  - IV. There is no sin however grievous, no crime however enormous or however frequently repeated, which penance does not remit: "If," says the Almighty, by the mouth of his prophet, "the wicked do penance for all his

(27) In epist. ad Demoph. Vid. et Tertul. lib. de pœnit. c. 9.

(28) Conc. Trid. sess. 14. can. 3, &c. 1. de pœnitent.

“ sins, which he hath committed, and keep all my com“ mandment, and do judgment and justice, living he shall “ live and shall not die; I will not remember all his ini-“ quities which he hath done.” (29) “ If,” says S. John,
 “ we confess our sins, he is faithful and just to forgive us
 “ our sins; (30) and a little after, he adds: “ If any man “ sin, we have an advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ, “ the just; and he is the propitiation for our sins; and “ not for ours only, but also for those of the whole world.”

(31) If, therefore, we read in the pages of inspiration, of some who earnestly implored the mercy of God, but implored it in vain, it is because they did not repent sincerely and from their hearts. (32) When we also meet in the Sacred Scriptures and in the writings of the Fathers, passages which seem to say, that some sins are irremissible, we are to understand such passages to mean, that it is very difficult to obtain the pardon of them. A disease may be said to be incurable, when the patient loathes the medicine that would accomplish his cure; and, in the same sense, some sins may be said to be irremissible, when the sinner rejects the grace of God, the proper medicine of salvation. To this effect, S. Augustine says: “ When, “ after having arrived at a knowledge of God, through the “ grace of Jesus Christ, any one opposes the fellowship “ of the faith, and maliciously resists the grace of Jesus “ Christ, so great is the enormity of his crime, that, “ although his guilty conscience obliges him to acknowledge “ and declare his guilt, he cannot submit to the humilia“ tion of imploring pardon.” (33)

Note.

To return to penance, to it belongs, in so special a manner, the efficacy of remitting actual guilt, that without its intervention we cannot obtain or even hope for pardon. It is written: “ Unless you do penance, you shall all perish.”
 (34) These words of our Lord are to be understood of Penance

 necessary to obtain the pardon of sin.

(29) Ezek. xviii. 21, 22.

(30) 1 John, i. 9.

(31) 1 John, ii. 1. 2.

(32) 2 Mach. ix. 13.

(33) Lib. 1 de sermon. Domini in monte, c. 42. et 44. et retract. lib. c. 8, 19. Aug. serm. 1. de verbis Domini, et epist. 50. ad Bonif.

(34) Luke, xiii. 3, 5.

grievous and deadly sins, although, as S. Augustine observes, venial sins also require some penance: "If," says he, "without penance, venial sin could be remitted, the daily penance, performed for them by the Church, would be nugatory." (35)

The three integral parts of penance.

But as, on matters which, in any degree, affect moral actions, it is not enough to convey instruction in general terms, the pastor will be careful to expound, severally, all those particulars which may give the faithful a knowledge of that penance, which is unto salvation. To this sacrament, then, it is peculiar that, besides matter and form, which are common to all the sacraments, it has, also, as we said before, what are called integral parts of penance, and these integral parts are contrition, confession and satisfaction. "Penance," says S. Chrysostome, "induces the sinner cheerfully to undergo every rigor; his heart is pierced with contrition; his lips utter the confession of his guilt; and his actions breathe humility, and are accepted by God as a satisfaction. (36) These component parts of penance are such as we say are necessary to constitute a whole. The human form, for instance, is composed of many members, of hands, of feet, of eyes, &c. of which, if any are wanting, man is justly deemed imperfect, and if not, perfect. Analogous to this, penance consists of the three parts which we have already enumerated; and although, as far as regards the nature of penance, contrition and confession are sufficient for justification, yet, if unaccompanied with satisfaction, something is still wanting to its integrity. So connected then are these parts one with the other, that contrition and a disposition to satisfaction precede confession, and contrition and confession precede satisfaction. Why these are integral parts of penance may be thus explained—We sin against God by thought, word, and deed: when recurring to the power of the keys, we should, therefore,

Their nature.

Their connection.

Why integral parts.

(35) Aug. lib. 50. hom. 50. item epist. 168. et Ench. cap. 71.

(36) Hom. 11. quæ est de pœnit. Vid. conc. Trid. 14. de pœnit. cap. 3. et can. 4. Item. conc. Flor. in doctrin. de Sacram.

endeavour to appease his wrath, and obtain the pardon of our sins, by the very same means, by which we offended his supreme majesty. In further explanation we may also add, that penance is, as it were, a compensation for offences, which proceed from the free will of the person offending, and is appointed by the will of God, to whom the offence has been offered. On the part of the penitent, therefore, a willingness to make this compensation is required, and in this willingness chiefly consists contrition. The penitent must also submit himself to the judgment of the priest, who is the vice-gerent of God, to enable him to award a punishment proportioned to his guilt; and, hence, are clearly understood the nature and necessity of confession and satisfaction.

But as the faithful require instruction on the nature and efficacy of these parts of penance, we shall begin with contrition, a subject which demands to be explained with more than ordinary care; for as often as we call to mind our past transgressions, or offend God anew, so often should our hearts be pierced with contrition. By the Fathers of the Council of Trent, contrition is defined: "A sorrow and detestation of past sin, with a purpose of sinning no more." (37) Speaking of the motion of the will to contrition, the Council, a little after, adds: "If joined with a confidence in the mercy of God, and an earnest desire of performing whatever is necessary to the proper reception of the Sacrament, it thus, at length, prepares us for the remission of sin." From this definition, therefore, the faithful will perceive that contrition does not simply consist in ceasing to sin, purposing to enter, or having actually entered, on a new life: it supposes, first of all, a hatred of sin, and a desire of atoning for past transgressions. This, the cries of the holy Fathers of antiquity, which are poured out in the pages of inspiration, sufficiently prove: (38) "I have laboured in my groaning;" says David, "every night I will wash my Contrition defined and explained.

(37) Ead. sess. 14.

(38) Vid. de pœnit. dist. 1. c. et venit, et ibid dist. e. totam.

“bed;” and again, “The Lord hath heard the voice of “my weeping.” (39) “I will recount to thee all my “years,” says the Prophet Isaias, “in the bitterness of “my soul.” (40) These and many other expressions of the same import, were called forth by an intense hatred and a lively detestation of past transgressions.

The sorrow which contrition requires explained.

But, although contrition is defined “a sorrow,” the faithful are not thence to conclude, that this sorrow consists in sensible feeling: contrition is an act of the will, and as S. Augustine observes, sorrow is not penance, but the accompaniment of penance. (41) By “sorrow” the Fathers of Trent understand a hatred and detestation of sin;
because, in this sense, the Sacred Scriptures frequently make use of the word: “How long,” says David, “shall “I take counsels in my soul, sorrow in my heart all the “day?” (42) and also because from contrition arises sorrow in the inferior part of the soul, which, in the language of the schools, is called the seat of concupiscence.
With propriety, therefore, is contrition defined “a sorrow,” because it produces sorrow, a sorrow so intense that in other days, penitents, to express its intensity, changed their garments, a practice to which our Lord alludes when he says: “Wo to thee Corozain, wo to thee Bethsaida:
“for if in Tyre and Sidon had been wrought the miracles “that have been wrought in thee, they had done penance, “long since, in sackcloth and ashes.” (43) To signify the intensity of this sorrow, the “detestation of sin,” of which we speak, is properly expressed by the word “contrition,” a word which, literally understood, means the breaking into small parts by means of some harder substance, and which is here used metaphorically, to signify that our hearts, hardened by pride, are subdued and reduced by penance.
Hence no other sorrow, not even that which is felt for the death of parents, or children, or for any other visitation however calamitous, is called contrition: the word is exclusively employed to express the sorrow with which we

Propriety
of the word “contri-tion.”

(39) Ps. vi. 7-9.

(40) Isa. xxxviii. 15.

(41) Homil. 50.

(42) Ps. xii. 2.

(43) Matth. xi. 21.

are overwhelmed by the forfeiture of the grace of God and of our own innocence. It is, however, often designated by other names: sometimes it is called "contrition of heart," because the word "heart" is frequently used in Scripture to express the will, for as the heart is the principle, which originates the motion of the human system; so, the will is the faculty, which governs and controuls the other powers of the soul. By the holy Fathers it is also called "compunction of heart," and hence, the works written by them on contrition they prefer inscribing, treatises on "compunction of heart;" (44) for, as imposthumes are cut with a lancet in order to open a passage to the virulent matter accumulated within; so the heart of the sinner is, as it were, pierced with contrition, to enable it to emit the deadly poison of sin which rankles within it. Hence, contrition is called by the Prophet Joel, a rending of the heart: "Be converted to me," says he, "with all your hearts in fasting, in weeping, in mourning, and rend your hearts." (45)

Sometimes called by other names.

That for past transgressions the sinner should experience the deepest sorrow, a sorrow not to be exceeded, will easily appear from the following considerations. Perfect contrition is an act of charity, emanating from what is called filial fear: the measure of contrition and charity should, therefore, it is obvious, be the same: but the charity, which we cherish towards God, (46) is the most perfect love; and, therefore, the sorrow which contrition inspires, should also be the most perfect. God is to be loved above all things; and whatever separates us from God, is, therefore, to be hated above all things. It is, also, worthy of observation, that to charity and contrition the language of Scripture assigns the same extent: of charity it is said: "Thou shall love the Lord thy God with thy whole heart;" (47) of contrition: "Be converted with thy whole heart." (48) Besides, if it is true; that of all objects

This sorrow should be supreme in degree.

I.

II.

(44) Chrysost. de compunct. cordis. Trident. de summo bono, lib. 2, c. 12.

(45) Joel, ii. 12.

(46) 1 John, iv. 7.

(47) Deut. vi. 5.

(48) Joel, ii. 12.

which solicit our love, God is the supreme good, and no less true, that of all objects which deserve our execration sin is the supreme evil; the same principle, which prompts us to confess that God is to be loved above all things, obliges us also of necessity to acknowledge, that sin is to be hated above all things. That God is to be loved above all things, so that we should be prepared to sacrifice our lives rather than offend him, these words of the Redeemer declare: "He that loveth father or mother more than me, is not worthy of me:" (49) "He that will save his life shall lose it." (50) As charity, it is the observation of S. Bernard, recognises neither measure nor limit, or to use his own words, as "the measure of loving God is to love him without measure," (51) so, the measure of hating sin should be, to hate sin without measure. Besides, our contrition should be supreme not only in degree, but also in intensity, and thus perfect, excluding all apathy and indifference, according to these words of Deuteronomy: "When thou shalt seek the Lord thy God, thou shalt find him: yet so if thou seek him with all thy heart, and all the affliction of thy soul;" (52) and of the prophet Jeremiah: "Thou shalt seek me and shalt find me, when thou shalt seek me with all thy heart; and I will be found by thee, saith the Lord." (53)

III.

And also,
in intensity.

Imperfect
contrition
may be true and efficacious.

Tears desirable, but not necessary.

If, however, our contrition be not perfect, it may, nevertheless, be true and efficacious; for as things which fall under the senses frequently touch the heart more sensibly, than things purely spiritual, it will sometimes happen, that persons feel more intense sorrow for the death of their children, than for the grievousness of their sins. Our contrition may also be true and efficacious, although unaccompanied with tears. That sorrow for his sins bathe the offender in tears, is, however, much to be desired and commended. On this subject the words of S. Augustine are admirable: "The spirit of Christian charity,"

(49) Matth. x. 37.

(50) Matth. xvi. 25—Mark, viii. 55.

(51) Lib. de diligendo Deo circa med.

(52) Deut. iv. 29.

(53) Jer. xxix. 13.

says he, "lives not within you, if you lament the body
 "from which the soul has departed, but lament not the "soul from which God has departed." (54) To the same effect are the words of the Redeemer above cited:
 "Wo to thee Corozain, wo to thee Bethsaida, for if in "Tyre and Sidon had been wrought the miracles that have "been wrought in thee, they had long since done penance,
 "in sackcloth and ashes." (55) Of this, however, we have abundant illustration in the well known examples of the Ninivites, (56) of David, (57) of the woman caught in adultery, (58) and of the Prince of the Apostles, (59)
 all of whom obtained the pardon of their sins, imploring
 the mercy of God with abundance of tears.

The faithful are most earnestly to be exhorted, to study to direct their contrition specially to each mortal sin, into which they may have had the misfortune to fall: "I will
 "recount to thee," says Isaias, "all my years in the bit"terness of my soul:" (60) as if he had said; "I will "count over all my sins severally, that my heart may be
 "pierced with sorrow for them all." In Ezekiel, also, we read: "If the wicked do penance for all his sins, he "shall live." (61) In this spirit, S. Augustine says: "Let "the sinner consider the quality of his sins, as affected
 "by time, place, variety, person." (62) In the work of conversion, however, the sinner should not despair of the infinite goodness and mercy of God: he is most desirous of our salvation; and, therefore, refuses not to pardon, but embraces, with a father's fondness, the prodigal child, the moment he returns to a sense of his duty, and is converted to the Lord, detesting his sins, which he will afterwards, if possible, recall, severally, to his recollection, and abhor from his inmost soul. The Almighty himself, by the mouth of his prophet, commands us to hope, when he says: "The wickedness of the wicked

Contrition
 should extend to all mortal sins.

Note.

(54) Ser. 41. de sanctis. (55) Matth. xi. 21. (56) Jonas, iii. 6.

(57) Ps. 6 & 50. (58) Luke, vii. 37, 48, 51. (59) Luke, xxii. 62.

(60) Is. xxxviii. 15. (61) Ezek. xviii. 21.

(62) Lib. de vera et falsa relig. cap. 14.

“shall not hurt him, in what day soever he shall turn
“from his wickedness.” (63)

The qualities of true
contrition.

To convey a knowledge of the most important qualities of true contrition, what has been said will be found sufficiently comprehensive. In these the faithful are to be accurately instructed, that each may know the means of attaining, and may have a fixed standard by which to determine, how far he may be removed from, the perfection

I. of this virtue. We must then, in the first place, detest and deplore all our sins: if our sorrow and detestation extend only to some, our repentance cannot be sincere or salutary: “Whosoever shall keep the whole law,” says S. James, “but offend in one point, is become guilty of

II. “all.” (64) In the next place, our contrition must be accompanied with a desire of confessing and satisfying for our sins; dispositions of which we shall treat in their proper place. Thirdly, the penitent must form a fixed and firm purpose of amendment of life, according to these words of the prophet: “If the wicked do penance for all

III. “his sins which he hath committed, and keep all my “commandments, and do judgment and justice, living he “shall live, and shall not die: I will not remember all “his iniquities which he hath done;” and a little after:

“Be converted, and do penance for all your iniquities,
“and iniquity shall not be your ruin. Cast away from “you all your transgressions, by which you have trans“gressed, and make yourselves a new heart.” (65) To Illustrations.

the woman caught in adultery the Redeemer himself imparts the same lesson of instruction: “Go thy way and “sin no more,” (66) and also to the lame man whom he cured at the pool of Bethsaida: “Behold, thou art made “whole, sin no more.” (67) That a sorrow for sin, and a firm purpose of avoiding sin for the future, are indispensable to contrition, is the dictate of unassisted reason. He who would be reconciled to a friend, must regret to have injured or offended him; and the tone and tenor of his conduct must be such that the charge of violating the duties of friendship cannot, in future, justly attach to his character. These are principles to which man is bound to yield obedience: the law to which man is subject, be it natural, divine, or human, he is bound to obey. If, therefore, by force or fraud, the penitent has injured his neighbour in his property, he is bound to restitution: if, by word or deed, he has injured his honour or reputation, he is under an obligation of repairing the injury, according to the well known maxim of S. Augustine: "the sin is not forgiven, unless what has been taken away, is restored." (68) In the fourth and last place, and the condition is no less important, true contrition must be accompanied with forgiveness of the injuries, which we may have sustained from others. This our Lord emphatically declares and energetically inculcates, when he says: "If you will forgive men their offences, your heavenly Father will forgive you also your offences; but if you will not forgive men, neither will your Father forgive you your offences." (69) These are the conditions which true contrition requires. There are other accompaniments, which, although not essential, contribute to render contrition more perfect in its kind, and which will reward, without fatiguing, the industry of the pastor.

(65) Ezek. xxxiii. 12. (64) James, ii. 10. (65) Ezek. xviii. 21, 22.

(66) John, viii. 11. (67) John, v. 14.

IV.

It will conduce, in an eminent degree, to the spiritual interests of the faithful, if the pastor press frequently upon their attention, the efficacy and importance of contrition. To make known the truths of salvation should not be deemed a full discharge of the duty of the pastor: his zeal should be exerted to persuade them to the adoption of these truths as their rule of conduct through life, as the governing principle of all their actions. Other pious exercises, such as alms, fasting, prayer, and the like, in themselves holy and commendable, are sometimes, through human infirmity, rejected by Almighty God; but contrition can never be rejected by him, never prove unacceptable to him: "A contrite and humbled heart, O God!" exclaims the prophet, "thou wilt not despise." (70) Nay more, the same prophet declares that, as soon as we have conceived this contrition in our hearts, our sins are forgiven: "I said, I will confess my injustice to the Lord, "and thou hast forgiven the wickedness of my sin." (71) Of this we have a figure in the ten lepers, who, when sent by our Lord to the priests, were cured of their leprosy, before they had reached them; (72) to give us to understand, that such is the efficacy of true contrition, of which we have spoken above, that through it we obtain from God the immediate pardon of our sins.

Efficacy and importance of contrition.

(68) Epist. v. 4.

(69) Matth. vi. 14.

Spiritual exercises conducive to contrition.

I.

II.

III.

IV.

V.

To excite the faithful to contrition, it will be found very salutary if the pastor point out the spiritual exercises conducive to contrition. This is to be accomplished by admonishing them, frequently to examine their consciences, in order to ascertain if they have been faithful in the observance of those things which God and his Church require; and should any one be conscious of crime, he should immediately accuse himself, humbly solicit pardon from God, and implore time to confess, and satisfy for his sins. Above all, let him supplicate the aid of divine grace, by which he may be fortified against a relapse into those crimes, the commission of which he now penitently deplors. The faithful are also to be excited to a hatred of sin, arising from the consideration of its baseness and turpitude, and of the evils and calamities of which it is the poisoned source, estranging us, as it does, from the friendship of God, to whom we are already indebted for so many invaluable blessings and from whom we might have expected to receive gifts of still higher value, and consigning us to eternal death, to be the unhappy victims of the most excruciating torments.

Confession, its importance.

I.

Having said thus much on contrition, we now come to confession which is another part of penance. The care and exactness which its exposition demands, must be at

(70) Ps. l. 19,

(71) Ps. xxxi. 5.

(72) Luke, xvii. 14.

once obvious, if we only reflect, that whatever of piety, of holiness, of religion, has been preserved to our times in the Church of God, is, in the general opinion of the truly pious; to be ascribed in a great measure, under divine Providence, to the influence of Confession. It cannot, therefore, be matter of surprise, that the enemy of the human race, in his efforts to level to its foundation the fabric of Catholicity, should, through the agency of the ministers of his wicked designs, have assailed, with all his might, this bulwark of Christian virtue. The pastor, therefore, will teach, in the first place, that the institution of confession is most useful and even necessary;

Contrition, it is true, blots out sin; but who is ignorant, that to effect this, it must be so intense, so ardent, so vehement, as to bear a proportion to the magnitude of the crimes which it effaces? This is a degree of contrition which few reach, and hence, through perfect contrition alone, very few indeed could hope to obtain the pardon of their sins. It, therefore, became necessary, that the Almighty, in his mercy, should afford a less precarious and less difficult means of reconciliation, and of salvation; and this he has done, in his admirable wisdom, by giving to his Church the keys of the kingdom of heaven. According to the doctrine of the Catholic Church, a doctrine firmly to be believed and professed by all her children, if the sinner have recourse to the tribunal of penance with a sincere sorrow for his sins, and a firm resolution of avoiding them in future, although he bring not with him that contrition which may be sufficient of itself to obtain the pardon of sin; his sins are forgiven by the minister of religion, through the power of the keys. Justly, then, do the Holy Fathers proclaim, that by the keys of the Church the gate of heaven is thrown open; (73) a truth which the decree of the Council of Florence, declaring that the effect of penance is absolution from sin, renders it imperative on all, unhesitatingly to believe. (74)

(73) Ambr. serm. 1. de quadrag. citatur de pœnit. dist. 1. c. ecce nunc. August. lib. 2. de adul. conjug. 59. Chrysost. de sacerdot. lib. 3.

III. To appreciate the advantages of confession, we should not lose sight of an argument which has the sanction of experience. To those who have led immoral lives, nothing is found so useful towards a reformation of morals, as sometimes to disclose their secret thoughts, their words, their actions, to a prudent and faithful friend, who can guide them by his advice, and assist them by his co-operation. On the same principle must it prove most salutary to those, whose minds are agitated by the consciousness of guilt, to make known the diseases and wounds of their souls to the priest, as the vice-gerent of Jesus Christ, bound to eternal secrecy by every law human and divine. In the tribunal of penance they will find immediate remedies, the healing qualities of which will not only remove the present malady, but also prove of such lasting efficacy as to be, in future, an antidote against the easy approach of the same moral disease.

IV. Another advantage, derivable from confession, is too important to be omitted: confession contributes powerfully to the preservation of social order. Abolish sacramental confession, and, that moment, you deluge society with all sorts of secret crimes—crimes too, and others of still greater enormity, which men, once that they have been depraved by vicious habits, will not dread to commit in open day. The salutary shame that attends confession, restrains licentiousness, bridles desire, and coerces the evil propensities of corrupt nature.

Nature and efficacy of confession.

Having explained the advantages of confession, the pastor will next unfold its nature and efficacy. Confession, then, is defined "A sacramental accusation of one's-self, made to obtain pardon by virtue of the keys." It is, properly called "an accusation," because sins are not to be told as if the sinner boasted of his crimes, as they do, "who are glad when they have done evil;" (75) nor are they to be related as idle stories or passing occurrences, to amuse: they are to be confessed as matters of self-accusation, with a desire, as it were to avenge them on ourselves. But we confess our sins with a view to obtain the pardon of them; and, in this respect, the tribunal of penance differs from other tribunals, which take cognizance of capital offences, and before which a confession of guilt is sometimes made, not to secure acquittal but to justify the sentence of the law. The definition of confession by the Holy Fathers, (76) although different in words, is substantially the same: "Confession," says S. Augustine, "is the disclosure of a secret disease, with the hope of obtaining a cure;" (77) and S. Gregory; "confession is a detestation of sins:" (78) both of which accord with, and are contained in the preceding definition.

(74) Flor. Conc. in decreto Eugenii IV. de penit. dist. 6. c. sacerdos.

(75) Prov. ii. 14.

The pastor will next teach, with all the decision due to a revealed truth, a truth of paramount importance, that this Sacrament owes its institution to the singular goodness and mercy of our Lord Jesus Christ, who ordered all things well, and solely with a view to our salvation. (79) After his resurrection, he breathed on the assembled Apostles, saying: "Receive ye the Holy Ghost, whose sins you shall forgive, they are forgiven; and whose sins you shall retain, they are retained." (80) By investing the sacerdotal character with power to retain as well as to remit sins, he, thus, it is manifest, constitutes them judges in the causes, on which this discretionary power is to be exercised. This he seems to have signified when, having raised Lazarus from the dead, he commanded his Apostles to loose him from the bands in which he was bound. (81) This is the interpretation of S. Augustine: "They," says

Instituted
by Christ.
I.

(76) Chrysost. 20, in Genes. (77) Aug. ser. 4, de verbis Domini.
 (78) Greg. hom. 40. in Evangel.
 (79) Vid. Trid. sess. 14. de pœnit. c. 5. et can. 6. Aug. lib. 50. hom. homil. 64, et citatur de pœnit. dist. 1. c. agite. Orig. hom. 1 in Psal. 37. Chrysost. de sacerd. lib. 3. (80) John, xx. 22, 23. (81) John, xi. 44.

- he, "the priests, can now do more: they can exercise
 "greater clemency towards those who confess, and whose "sins they forgive. The Lord by the hands of his Apos"tles delivered Lazarus, whom he had already raised from
 "the dead, to be loosed by the hands of his disciples;
 "thus giving us to understand that to priests was given II. "the power of loosing." (82) To this, also, refers the command given by our Lord to the lepers cured on the way, to show themselves to the priests, and subject themselves to their judgment. (83) Invested, then, as they are, by our Lord with power to remit and retain sins, priests are, evidently, appointed judges of the matter on which they are to pronounce; and as, according to the wise admonition of the Council of Trent, we cannot form an accurate judgment on any matter, or award to crime a just proportion of punishment, without having previously examined, and made ourselves well acquainted with the cause; hence arises a necessity, on the part of the penitent, of making known to the priest, through the medium of confession, each and every sin. (84) This doctrine, a doctrine defined by the holy synod of Trent, the uniform doctrine of the Catholic Church, the pastor III. will teach. An attentive perusal of the Holy Fathers will present innumerable passages throughout their works, proving in the clearest terms that this Sacrament was instituted by our Lord, and that the law of sacramental confession, which, from the Greek, they call "exomolo-
 "gesis," and "exagoreusis," is to be received as evangelical. That the different sorts of sacrifices, which were offered by the priests for the expiation of different sorts of sins, seem, beyond all doubt, to have reference to sacramental confession, an examination of the figures of the Old Testament will also evince.

(82) De verâ et falsâ pœnit. c. 16. et serm. 8. de verbis Domini.

(83) Luke, xvii. 14.

(84) Sess. 14. c. 5. et can. 7. de pœnit. Sacerdotes esse peccatorum iudices docent August. lib. 20. de civit. Dei, c. 9. Hieron. epist. 1. ad Heliod. Chrysost. lib. 5. de Sacerd. et hom. 5. de verbis Isaïæ. Greg. hom. 26 in Evang. Ambr. lib. 2. de Cain, cap. 4. Trid. scss. 14. de pœnit. c. 5. can. 7.

Not only are the faithful to be taught that confession was instituted by our Lord; but they are also to be reminded that, by authority of the Church, have been added certain rites and solemn ceremonies, which, although not essential to the Sacrament, serve to place its dignity more fully before the eyes of the penitent, and to prepare his soul, now kindled into devotion, the more easily to receive the grace of the Sacrament. When, with uncovered head, and bended knees, with eyes fixed on the earth, and hands raised in supplication to heaven, and with other indications of Christian humility not essential to the Sacrament, we confess our sins, our minds are thus deeply impressed with a clear conviction of the heavenly virtue of the Sacraments, and also of the necessity of humbly imploring and of earnestly importuning the mercy of God.

Rites and ceremonies used at confession.

Nor let it be supposed that confession, although instituted by our Lord, is not declared by him necessary for the remission of sin: the faithful must be impressed with the conviction, that he, who is dead in sin, is to be recalled to spiritual life by means of sacramental confession, a truth clearly conveyed by our Lord himself, when, by a most beautiful metaphor, he calls the power of administering this sacrament, "the keys of the kingdom of heaven." (85) To obtain admittance into any place, the concurrence of him to whom the keys have been committed is necessary, and therefore, as the metaphor implies, to gain admission into heaven, its gates must be opened to us by the power of the keys, confided by Almighty God to the care of his Church. This power should otherwise be nugatory: if heaven can be entered without the power of the keys, in vain shall they to whose fidelity they have been entrusted, assume the prerogative of prohibiting indiscriminate entrance within its portals. This doctrine was familiar to the mind of S. Augustine: "Let no man," says he, "say within himself; 'I repent in secret with God; God, who has power to pardon me, knows the Confession necessary.

“ ‘inmost sentiments of my heart:’ was there no reason “ for saying: ‘whatsoever you loose on earth, shall be “ ‘loosed in heaven,’ (86) no reason why the keys were “ given to the Church of God?” (87) The same doctrine is recorded by the pen of S. Ambrose, in his treatise on penance, when refuting the heresy of the Novatians, who asserted, that the power of forgiving sins belonged solely to God: “ Who,” says he, “ yields greater reverence to “ God, he who obeys or he who resists his commands?
 “ God commands us to obey his ministers; and by obey-“ ing them, we honor God alone.” (88)

Confession
 obligatory, at what age.

As the law of confession was, no doubt, enacted and established by our Lord himself, it is our duty to ascertain, on whom, at what age, and at what period of the year, it becomes obligatory. According to the canon of the Council of Lateran, which begins: “ Omnis utriusque sexus,” no person is bound by the law of confession until he has arrived at the use of reason, a time determinable by no fixed number of years. (89) It may, however, be laid down as a general principle, that children are bound to go to confession, as soon as they are able to discern good from evil, and are capable of malice; for, when arrived at an age to attend to the work of salvation, every one is bound to have recourse to the tribunal of penance, without which the sinner cannot hope for salvation. In the same canon the Church has defined the period, within which we are bound to discharge the duty of confession:
 it commands all the faithful to confess their sins at least once a year. (90) If, however, we consult for our eternal interests, we will certainly not neglect to have recourse to confession as often, at least, as we are in danger of death, or undertake to perform any act incompatible with the state of sin, such as to administer or receive the sacraments. The same rule should be strictly followed when we are apprehensive of forgetting some sin, into which we may have had the misfortune to fall: to confess time.

At what

(86) Lib. 50. hom. 49. (87) Math. xviii. 18. (88) Lib. 1. de pœn. 2.

(89) Lat. conc. cap. 22. (90) Lat. conc. cap. 21.

our sins, we must recollect them; and the remission of them we can only obtain through the sacrament of penance, of which confession is a part.

But as, in confession, many things are to be observed, some of which are essential, some not essential to the sacrament, the faithful are to be carefully instructed on all these matters; and the pastor can have access to works, from which such instructions may easily be drawn. Amongst these matters, he will, on no account, omit to inform the faithful, that to a good confession integrity is essential. All mortal sins must be revealed to the minister of religion: venial sins, which do not separate us from the grace of God, and into which we frequently fall, although as the experience of the pious proves, proper and profitable to be confessed, may be omitted without sin, and expiated by a variety of other means. (91) Mortal sins, as we have already said, although buried in the darkest secrecy, and also sins of desire only, such as are forbidden by the ninth and tenth commandments, are all and each of them to be made matter of confession. Such secret sins often inflict deeper wounds on the soul, than those which are committed openly and publicly. It is, however, a point of doctrine defined by the Council of Trent; (92) and as the Holy Fathers testify, the uniform and universal doctrine of the Catholic Church: "Without the confession of his sin," says S. Ambrose, "no man can be justified from his sin." (93) In confirmation of the same doctrine, S. Jerome, on Ecclesiastes, says: "If the serpent, the devil, has secretly and without the knowledge of a third person, bitten any one, and has infused into him the poison of sin; if unwilling to disclose his wound to his brother or master, he is silent and will not do penance, his master who has power to cure him, can render him no service." The same doc-

Integrity essential to a good confession, in what it consists.

(91) Quomodo venialia dimittantur vide Aug. in Ench. cap. 71. citatur de pœnit. dist. 5. c. de quotidianis, et in Conc. Tolet. 4. cap. 9.

(92) Sess. 14. de pœnit. c. 5. et can. 7.

(93) Lib. de Paradiso, c. 4. c. 1. super illud: si mordeat serpens.

trine we find in S. Cyprian, in his sermon on the lapsed : “ Although guiltless,” says he, “ of the heinous crime of “ sacrificing to idols, or of having purchased certificates “ to that effect ; yet, as they entertained the thought of “ doing so, they should confess it with grief, to the priest “ of God.” (94) In fine, such is the unanimous voice, such the unvarying accord of all the Doctors of the Church. (95)

Aggravating circumstances
when necessary to be mentioned in confession :

In confession we should employ all that care and exactness, which we usually bestow upon worldly concerns of the greatest moment, and all our efforts should be directed to effect the cure of our spiritual maladies and to eradicate sin from the soul. With the bare enumeration of our mortal sins, we should not be satisfied ; that enumeration we should accompany with the relation of such circumstances as considerably aggravate or extenuate their malice. Some circumstances are such, as of themselves, to constitute mortal guilt ; on no account or occasion whatever, therefore, are such circumstances to be omitted. Has any one imbrued his hands in the blood of his fellow man ? He must state whether his victim was a layman or an ecclesiastic. Has he had criminal intercourse with any one ? He must state whether the female was married or unmarried, a relative or a person consecrated to God by vow. These are circumstances which alter the species of the sins : the first is called simple fornication ; the second, adultery ; the third, incest ; and the fourth, sacrilege. Again, theft is numbered in the catalogue of sins ; but if a person has stolen a guinea, his sin is less grievous than if he had stolen one or two hundred guineas, or a considerable sum ; and if the stolen money were sacred, the sin would be still aggravated. To time and place the same observation equally applies ; but the instances, in which these circumstances alter the complexion of an act, are so familiar and are enumerated by so many writers, as to supersede the necessity of a lengthened detail. Circumstances, such as these, are, therefore, to be mentioned; but those, which do not considerably aggravate, may be lawfully omitted.

(94) Circa finem.

(95) Singula peccata mortalia confiteri oportere docent August. lib. de vera et falsa pœnit. cap. 10. Gregor. homil. 10. super Ezekiel. Ambr. lib. de parad. cap. 14. Hieron. in Ecclesiast. c. 10. Cypr. de lapsis circa finem. Vid. et de pœnit. dist. 3. cap. sunt plures, &c. pluit. et ibid. dist. 1. c. quem pœnit. et ibid. pass.

When unnecessary.

So important, as we have already said, is integrity to confession, that if the penitent wilfully neglect to accuse himself of some sins which should be confessed, and suppress others, he not only does not obtain the pardon of his sins, but involves himself in deeper guilt. Such an enumeration cannot be called sacramental confession: on the contrary, the penitent must repeat his confession, not omitting to accuse himself of having, under the semblance of confession, prophaned the sanctity of the sacrament. But should the confession seem defective, either because the penitent forgot some grievous sins, or because, although intent on confessing all his sins, he did not explore the recesses of his conscience with extraordinary minuteness, he is not bound to repeat his confession: it will be sufficient, when he recollects the sins which he had forgotten, to confess them to a priest on a future occasion. We are not, however, to examine our consciences with careless indifference, or evince such negligence in recalling our sins to our recollection, as if we were unwilling to remember them; and should this have been the case, the confession must be reiterated.

Concealment of a sin in confession a grievous crime: the confession to be repeated.

Omission of a sin thro' forgetfulness does not render it necessary to repeat the confession.

Our confession should also be plain, simple and undisguised, not clothed in that artificial language with which some invest it, who seem more disposed to give an outline of their general manner of living, than to confess their sins. Our confession should be such as to reflect a true image of our lives, such as we ourselves know them to be, exhibiting as doubtful that which is doubtful, and as certain that which is certain. If then we neglect to enumerate our sins, or introduce extraneous matter, our confession, it is clear, wants this quality.

Confession should be plain, simple, undisguised,

Prudence and modesty in explaining matters of con-

Prudent, and modest.

profession are also much to be commended, and a superfluity of words is to be carefully avoided: whatever is necessary to make known the nature of every sin, is to be explained briefly and modestly.

Secrecy to be observed by priest and penitent.

Secrecy should be strictly observed as well by penitent as priest, and, hence, because in such circumstances secrecy must be insecure, no one can, on any account, confess by messenger or letter.

Frequent confession.

But, above all, the faithful should be most careful to cleanse their consciences from sin by frequent confession: when oppressed by mortal guilt, nothing can be more salutary, so precarious is human life, than to have immediate recourse to the tribunal of penance; but could we even promise ourselves length of days, yet should not we, who are so particular in whatever relates to cleanliness of dress or person, blush to evince less concern in preserving the lustre of the soul pure and unsullied from the foul stains of sin.

The minister of the sacrament of penance.

We now come to treat of the minister of this sacrament— That the minister of the sacrament of penance must be a priest possessing ordinary or delegated jurisdiction, the laws of the Church sufficiently declare: whoever discharges this sacred function must be invested, not only with the power of orders, but also with that of jurisdiction. Of this ministry we have an illustrious proof in these words of the Redeemer, recorded by St. John: “ Whose sins you shall forgive, they are forgiven, and whose sins you shall retain they are retained;” (96) words addressed not to all but to the Apostles only, to whom, in this function of the ministry, priests succeed. This admirably accords with the economy of religion, for, as the grace imparted by this sacrament emanates from Christ the head, and is diffused through his members, they who alone have power to consecrate his true body, should alone have power to administer this sacrament to his mystical body, the faithful; particularly as they are qualified and disposed by means of the sacrament of penance, to receive the Holy Eucharist. The scrupulous care which, in the primitive ages of the Church, guarded the right of the ordinary priest, is very intelligible from the ancient decrees of the Fathers, which provided, "that no bishop or priest, except in case of necessity, presume to exercise any function in the parish of another without the authority of the ordinary;" a law which derives its sanction from the Apostle, when he commanded Titus to ordain priests in every city, (97) to administer to the faithful the heavenly food of doctrine and of the sacraments. But in case of imminent danger of death, when recourse cannot be had to the proper priest, that none may perish, the Council of Trent teaches that, according to the ancient practice of the church of God, it is then lawful for any priest, not only to remit all sorts of sins, whatever faculties they might otherwise require, but also to absolve from excommunication. (98)

(96) John xx. 23.

Any priest, the minister in an extreme case.

Besides the power of orders and of jurisdiction, which are of absolute necessity, the minister of this sacrament, holding as he does, the place at once of judge and physician, should also be gifted with knowlege and prudence. As judge, his knowledge, it is evident, should be more than ordinary, for by it he is to examine into the nature of sins, and, amongst the various sorts of sins, to judge which are grievous and which are not, keeping in view the rank and condition of the person. As physician, he has also occasion for consummate prudence, for to him it belongs to administer to the distempered soul those sanative medicines, which will not only effect the cure of her present malady, but prove preservatives against its future contagion. (99) The faithful, therefore, will perceive the great importance to be attached to the choice of a confessor, and will use their best endeavours to choose one who is recommended by integrity of life, by learning and prudence, who is deeply impressed with the awful weight and responsibility of the station which he holds, who understands well the Qualifications of the minister.

Knowledge,

Prudence,

Integrity of life.

(97) Tit. i. 5.

(98) Sess. 14. c. 6. de poenit.

(99) Ex Basil. in reg. brevibus, q. ii. 29.

punishment due to every sin, and can also discern who are to be loosed and who to be bound.

The seal of confession.

But as all are anxious that their sins should be buried in eternal secrecy, the faithful are to be admonished that there is no reason whatever to apprehend, that what is made known in confession will ever be revealed by any priest, or that by it the penitent can, at any time, be brought into danger or difficulty of any sort. All laws human and divine guard the inviolability of the seal of confession, and against its sacrilegious infraction the Church denounces her heaviest chastisements. (100) "Let the priest," says the great Council of Lateran, "take especial care, neither by word nor sign, nor by any other means whatever, to betray, in the least degree, the sacred trust confided to him by the sinner." (101)

Negligence of sinners.

Having treated of the minister of this sacrament, the order of our matter requires, that we next proceed to explain some general heads, which are of considerable practical importance with regard to confession. Many, to whom, in general, no time seems to pass so slowly as that which is appointed by the laws of the Church for the duty of confession, so far from giving due attention to those other matters, which are obviously most efficacious in conciliating the favor and friendship of God, are placed at such a distance from Christian perfection, as scarcely to recollect the sins, which are to be the matter of their confession. As, therefore, nothing is to be omitted, which can assist the faithful in the important work of salvation, the priest will be careful to observe, if the penitent be truly contrite for his sins, and deliberately and firmly resolved to avoid sin for the future. If the sinner is found to be thus disposed, he is to be admonished and earnestly exhorted, to pour out his heart in gratitude to God for this invaluable blessing, and supplicate unceasingly the aid of divine grace, shielded by which he may securely combat the evil propensities of corrupt nature. He should also be taught, not to suffer a day to pass, without devoting a portion of it to meditation on some mystery of the passion, in order to excite himself to an imitation of his great model, and inflame his heart with ardent love for his Redeemer. The fruit of such meditation will be, to fortify him more and more, every day, against all the assaults of the devil ; for, what other reason is there, why our courage sinks, and our strength fails, the moment the enemy makes even the slightest attack on us, but that we neglect, by pious meditation, to kindle within us the fire of divine love, which animates and invigorates the soul? But, should the priest perceive, that the penitent gives equivocal indications of true contrition, he will endeavour to inspire him with an anxious desire for it, inflamed by which he may resolve to ask and implore this heavenly gift from the mercy of God.

The confessor will observe if the penitent be truly contrite.

How to be treated if contrite:

If not contrite :

The pride of some, who seek by vain excuses to justify or extenuate their offences, is carefully to be repressed. If, for instance, a penitent confesses that he was wrought up to anger, and immediately transfers the blame of the excitement to another, who, he complains, was the aggressor ; he is to be reminded, that such apologies are indications of a proud spirit, and of a man who either thinks lightly of, or is unacquainted with the enormity of his sin, whilst they serve rather to aggravate than extenuate his guilt. He, who thus labours to justify his conduct, seems to say, that then only will he exercise patience, when no one injures or offends him, a disposition than which nothing can be more unworthy of a Christian. A Christian should lament the state of him who inflicted the injury, and, yet, regardless of the grievousness of the sin, he is angry with his brother : having had an opportunity of honouring God by his exemplary patience, and of correcting a brother by his Christian meekness, he converts the very means of salvation into the means of injuring his own soul.

If fond of justifying or extenuating his guilt :

Still more pernicious is the conduct of those, who, yielding to a foolish bashfulness, cannot induce themselves to confess their sins. Such persons are to be encouraged

If under the influence of a false shame :

by exhortation, and to be reminded, that there is no reason whatever why they should yield to such false delicacy ; that to no one can it appear surprising, if persons fall into sin, the common malady of the human race, and the natural appendage of human infirmity.

If indolent or negligent.

There are others who, either because they seldom approach the tribunal of penance, or because they have bestowed no care or attention on the examination of their consciences, know not well how to begin or end their confession. Such persons deserve to be severely rebuked, and are to be taught that, before any one approaches the tribunal of penance, he should employ every diligence to excite himself to contrition for his sins, and that this he cannot do without endeavouring to know and recollect them severally. Should then the confessor meet persons of this class, entirely unprepared for confession, he should dismiss them without harshness, exhorting them in the kindest terms, to take some time to reflect on their sins, and then return ; but, should they declare that they have already done every thing in their power to prepare, as there is reason to apprehend, that, if sent away, they may not return, their confession is to be heard, particularly if they manifest some disposition to amend their lives, and can be induced to accuse their own negligence, and promise to atone for it at another time, by a diligent and accurate scrutiny of conscience. In such cases, however, the confessor will proceed with caution. If, after having heard the confession, he is of opinion that the penitent did not want diligence in examining his conscience, or sorrow in detesting his sins, he may absolve him ; but if he has found him deficient in both, he will, as we have already said, admonish him to use greater care in his examination of conscience, and will dismiss him in the kindest manner.

A remedy for false modesty on the part of the penitent.

But as it sometimes happens, that females, who may have forgotten some sin in a former confession, cannot bring themselves to return to the confessor, dreading to expose themselves to the suspicion of having been guilty of something grievous, or of looking for the praise of extraordinary piety, the pastor will frequently remind the faithful, both publicly and privately, that no one is gifted with so tenacious a memory, as to be able to recollect all his thoughts, words and actions, that the faithful, therefore, should they call to mind any thing grievous, which they had previously forgotten, should not be deterred from returning to the priest. These and many other matters of the same nature, demand the particular attention of the confessor in the tribunal of penance.

We now come to the third part of penance, which is called satisfaction. We shall begin by explaining its nature and efficacy, because the enemies of the Catholic Church have hence taken ample occasion, to sow discord and division amongst Christians, to the no small injury of the Christian Commonwealth. Satisfaction, then, is the full payment of a debt, for when satisfaction is made, nothing remains to be supplied. Hence, when we speak of reconciliation by grace, to satisfy is the same as to do that which may be sufficient to atone to the angered mind for an injury offered; and thus, satisfaction is nothing more than "compensation for an injury done to another." Hence theologians make use of the word "satisfaction," to signify the compensation made by man to God, by doing something in atonement for the sins which he has committed.

This sort of satisfaction, embracing, as it does, many degrees, admits of many acceptations. The first degree of satisfaction, and that which stands preeminently above all the rest, is that by which whatever is due by us to God, on account of our sins, is paid abundantly, although he should deal with us according to the strictest rigour of his justice. This, we say, has appeased God and rendered him propitious to us, and for it we are indebted to Christ alone, who, having paid the price of our sins on the cross, offered to his Eternal Father a superabundant satisfaction. No created being could have paid so heavy a debt for us: "He is the propitiation for our sins," says S. John, "and

Satisfaction

II

III

Its different degrees.
I.

“not for ours only, but also for those of the whole world.” (102) This satisfaction, therefore, is full and superabundant, commensurate to all sorts of sins perpetrated by the human race: it gives to man's actions merit before God; without it they could avail him nothing to eternal life. This, David seems to have had in view, when, having asked himself, “what shall I render to the Lord, for all the things that he hath rendered to me?” (103) and finding nothing worthy of such blessings but this satisfaction, which he expressed by the word “chalice,” he replies: “I will take the chalice of salvation, and I will call upon the name of the Lord.” (104)

II. There is another sort of satisfaction, which is called canonical, and is performed within a certain fixed period of time. Hence, according to the most ancient practice of the Church, when penitents are absolved from their sins, some penance is imposed, the performance of which is commonly called “satisfaction.”

III. Any sort of punishment endured for sin, although not imposed by the priest, but spontaneously undertaken by the sinner, is also called by the same name: it belongs not, however, to penance as a sacrament: the satisfaction which constitutes part of the sacrament is, as we have already said, that which is imposed by the priest, and which must be accompanied with a deliberate and firm purpose carefully to avoid sin for the future. To satisfy, as some define it, is to pay due honor to God, and this, it is evident, no person can do, who is not resolved to avoid sin. To satisfy is also to cut off all occasions of sin, and to close every avenue of the heart against its suggestions. In accordance with this idea of satisfaction, some have considered it a cleansing, which effaces whatever defilement may remain in the soul from the stains of sin, and which exempts us from the temporal chastisements due to sin.

Necessity of satisfaction

Such being the nature of satisfaction, it will not be found difficult to convince the faithful of the necessity imposed on the penitent, of satisfying for his sins: they are to be taught that sin carries in its train two evils, the stain which it affixes, and the punishment which it entails. The punishment of eternal death is, it is true, forgiven with the sin to which it was due, yet, as the Council of Trent declares, the stain is not always entirely effaced, nor is the temporal punishment always remitted. (105) Of this the Scriptures afford many evident examples, as we find in the third chapter of Genesis, (106) in the twelfth and twenty-second of Numbers, (107) and in many other places. That of David, however, is the most conspicuous and illustrious.—Already had Nathan announced to him: “The Lord also hath taken away thy sin, thou shalt not die;” (108) yet the royal penitent voluntarily subjected himself to the most severe penance, imploring, night and day, the mercy of God, in these words: “Wash me yet more from my iniquity, and cleanse me from my sin, for I know my iniquity and my sin is always before me.” (109) Thus did he beseech God to pardon not only the crime, but also the punishment due to it, and to restore him, cleansed from the stains of sin, to his former state of purity and integrity. This is the object of his most earnest supplications to the throne of God, and yet the Almighty punishes his transgression with the death of his adulterous offspring, the rebellion and death of his beloved son Absalom, and with the other heavy chastisements, with which his vengeance had already threatened him. In Exodus too the Almighty, although yielding to the importunity of Moses, he had spared the idolatrous Israelites, threatens the enormity of their crime with heavy chastisement; (110) and Moses himself declares, that the Lord will take vengeance on it, even to the third and fourth generation. That such was, at all times, the doctrine of the Fathers, a reference to their writings will place beyond the possibility of doubt. (111)

(102) 1 John, ii. 2.

(103) Ps. cxv. 12.

(104) cxv. 13.

(105) Sess. 14. c. 8. can. 12, et 14.

(106) Gen. iii. 17.

(107) Num. xii. 14, 22, 33, 34.

(108) 2 Kings, xii. 13.

(109) Ps. 1. 4, 5.

(110) Exod. xxxii. 8, 9.

(111) Vide Aug. lib. 2. de peccat. merit. et remiss. cap. 34. et contra

The punishment due to sin, why not remitted by panance as by baptism.

Advantages of canonical penance

- I.
- II.
- III.

Why in the sacrament of penance, as in that of baptism, the punishment due to sin is not entirely remitted, is admirably explained in these words of the Council of Trent :
 “ Divine justice seems to require, that they who, through ignorance sinned before baptism, should recover the friendship of God, in a different manner from those, who, freed from the thralldom of sin and the slavery of the devil, and having received the gifts of the Holy Ghost, dread not knowingly to violate the temple of God and grieve the Holy Spirit. It also consists with the divine mercy not to remit our sins without satisfaction, lest, taking occasion hence, and imagining our sins less grievous than they are, injurious, as it were, and contumelious to the Holy Ghost, we fall into greater enormities, treasuring up to ourselves wrath against the day of wrath. These satisfactory penances, have, no doubt, great influence in restraining from sin, in bridling, as it were, the passions, and rendering the sinner more vigilant and cautious for the future.”(112) Another advantage resulting from them is, that they serve as public testimonies of our sorrow for sin, and atone to the Church who is grievously insulted by the crimes of her children : “ God,” says S. Augustine, “ despises not a contrite and humble heart, but, as heart-felt grief is generally concealed from others, and is not communicated by words or other signs, wisely, therefore, are penitential times appointed by those who preside over the Church, in order to atone to the Church, in which sins are forgiven.”
 Besides, the example presented by our penitential practices, serves as a lesson to others, how to regulate their lives, and practise piety : seeing the punishments inflicted on sin, they must feel the necessity of using the greatest circumspection through life, and of correcting their former evil habits. The Church, therefore, with great wisdom ordained, that those who by their scandalous disorders may have given public disedification, should atone for them by public penance, that others may be thus deterred from their commission. This has sometimes been observed even with regard to secret sins, when marked by peculiar malignity. (113) But with regard to public sinners, they, as we have already said, were never absolved until they had performed public penance. Meanwhile, the pastor poured out his prayers to God for their salvation, and ceased not to exhort them to do the same. This salutary practice gave active employment to the zeal and solicitude of S. Ambrose; many, who came to the tribunal of penance hardened in sin, were by his tears softened into true contrition. (114) But in process of time the severity of ancient discipline was so relaxed, and charity waxed so cold, that in our days many seem to think inward sorrow of soul and grief of heart unnecessary, and deem the semblance of sorrow sufficient.

Faust. lib. 22. cap. 66. et præsertim in Joan. tractat. 124. paulo ante med. Greg. lib. 9. moral. cap. 24. Chrysost. hom. 8. ad pop. Antioch. Iterum Aug. Ench. cap. 50. Ambr. de pœn. lib. 2. cap. 5. vide item canones pœnitentiales apud Anton. Aug. vel in actis Eccl. Mediolan.

(112) Sess. 14. de pœnit. cap. 8.

Wisely instituted by the Church.

Again, by undergoing these penances we are made like unto the image of Jesus Christ our head, inasmuch as he himself suffered and was tempted, (115) and, as S. Bernard observes, "nothing can appear so unseemly as a delicate member under a head crowned with thorns." (116) To use the words of the Apostle, "we are joint-heirs with Christ, yet so if we suffer with him;" (117) and again: "If we be dead with him, we shall live also with him; if we suffer, we shall also reign with him." (118)

By penance we are made like unto Christ.

S. Bernard, also, observes, that sin produces two effects in the soul, the one, the stain which it imparts, the other, the wound which it inflicts; that the turpitude of sin is

Two effects produced in the soul by sin, removed by penance.

(113) Vide Aug. lib. 5, de civit. Dei cap. 26. et ep. 54. et l. 50. hom. 49. & de verâ et falsâ pœn. passim. Ambr. lib. 2. de pœnit. c. 10. et citatur de pœn. dist. 3. cap. reperiuntur. Cypr. de lapsis multis in locis. Conc. Agath. cap. 35. et citatur dist. 50. cap. pœnitentes.

(114) Paulinus in ejus vitâ.

(115) Heb. ii. 17.

(116) Serm. 5. de omn. sanct.

(117) Rom. viii. 17.

(118) 2 Tim. ii. 11, 12.

removed through the mercy of God, whilst to heal the wound inflicted, the medicinal care applied by penance is most necessary; for as after a wound has been healed, some scars remain which demand attention, so with regard to the soul, after the guilt of sin is forgiven, some of its effects remain, from which the soul requires to be cleansed. S. Chrysostome also fully confirms the same doctrine, when he says: "Not enough that the arrow has been extracted from the body, the wound which it inflicted must also be healed: so with regard to the soul, not enough that sin has been pardoned, the wound which it has left, must also be healed by penance." (119) S. Augustine, also, frequently teaches that penance exhibits at once the mercy and the justice of God, his mercy by which he pardons sin, and the eternal punishment due to sin, his justice by which he exacts temporary punishment from the sinner. (120)

Penance disarms the Divine vengeance.

Finally, the punishment which the sinner endures, disarms the vengeance of God, and prevents the punishments decreed against us, according to these words of the Apostle: "If we would judge ourselves, we should not be judged; but whilst we are judged, we are chastised by the Lord, that we be not condemned with this world." (121) These matters, if explained to the faithful, must have considerable influence in exciting them to penance.

The efficacy of penance arises entirely from the passion of Christ.

Of the great efficacy of penance we may form some idea, if we reflect that it arises entirely from the merits of the passion of our Lord Jesus Christ: it is his passion that imparts to our good actions the two-fold quality of meriting the rewards of eternal life, so that a cup of cold water given in his name shall not be without its reward, (122) and, also, of satisfying for our sins. (123) Nor does this derogate from the most perfect and super-

(119) Serm. 1. in cœna Domini. Hom. 80. ad Pop. Antioch.

(120) In Ps. l. ad hæc verba, ECCE ENIM VENIT.

(121) 1 Cor. xi. 31, 32.

(122) Math. x. 42.

(123) Vid. de pœnit. sess. 14. cap. 8. & can. 13, 14. & sess. 6. de justific. c. 18.

abundant satisfaction of Christ, but, on the contrary, renders it still more conspicuous and illustrious; the grace of Jesus Christ appears to abound more, inasmuch as it communicates to us not only what he alone merited, but also what, as head, he merited and paid in his members, that is, in holy and just men. This it is that imparts such weight and dignity to the good actions of the pious Christian, for our Lord Jesus Christ continually infuses his grace into the devout soul united to him by charity, as the head to the members, or as the vine through the branches, and this grace always precedes, accompanies, and follows our good works: without it we can have no merit, nor can we at all satisfy God. Hence it is that nothing seems wanting to the just: by their works done by the power of God, they fulfil the divine law, as far as is compatible with our present condition, and can merit eternal life, to the fruition of which they shall be admitted, if they depart this life adorned with divine grace: "He," says the Redeemer, "that shall drink of the water that I will give him, shall not thirst for ever; but the water that I will give him shall become in him a fountain of water, springing up into life everlasting." (124)

In satisfaction two things are particularly required; the one, that he who satisfies be in a state of grace, the friend of God: works done without faith and charity cannot be acceptable to God: the other, that the works performed be such as are of their own nature painful or laborious. They are a compensation for past sins, and, to use the words of S. Cyprian, "the redeemers, as it were, of sins," (125) and must, therefore, be such as we have described. It does not, however, always follow that they are painful or laborious to those who undergo them: the influence of habit or the intensity of divine love frequently renders the soul insensible to things the most difficult to be endured. Such works, however, do not, therefore, cease to be satisfactory: it is the privilege of the children

Two things particularly necessary in satisfaction.

Note.

(124) John, iv. 14.

(125) Lib. 1. Epist. 3, post med.

of God to be so inflamed with his love, that, whilst undergoing the most cruel tortures for his sake, they are either entirely insensible to them, or at least bear them not only with fortitude but with the greatest joy.

Every sort of satisfaction included under three heads.

The pastor will teach that every species of satisfaction is included under these three heads, prayer, fasting and alms-deeds, which correspond with these three sorts of goods, those of the soul, of the body, and what are called external goods, all of which are the gifts of God. Than these three sorts of satisfaction, nothing can be more effectual in eradicating sin from the soul. Whatever is in the world is the lust of the flesh, the "lust of the eyes, "or the pride of life," (126) and fasting, alms-deeds, and prayer are, it is obvious, most judiciously employed as antidotes to neutralize the operation of these three causes of spiritual disease; to the first is opposed fasting; to the second, alms-deeds; to the third, prayer. If, moreover, we consider those whom our sins injure, we shall easily perceive why all satisfaction is referred principally to God, to our neighbour, and to ourselves: God we appease by prayer, our neighbour we satisfy by alms, and ourselves we chastise by fasting.

Use and advantage of afflictions.

But, as this life is chequered by many and various afflictions, the faithful are to be particularly reminded, that afflictions coming from the hand of God, if borne with patience, are an abundant source of satisfaction and of merit; but, if borne with reluctant impatience, far from being the means of atoning for past sins, they are rather the instruments of the divine wrath, taking just vengeance on the sinner.

One can satisfy for another.

Note.

But in this the mercy and goodness of God shine conspicuous, and demand our grateful acknowledgements, that he has granted to our frailty the privilege, that one may satisfy for another. This, however, is a privilege, which is confined to the satisfactory part of penance alone, and extends not to contrition and confession: no man can be contrite or confess for another ; whilst those who are gifted with divine grace may pay through others what is due to the divine justice, and thus we may be said in some measure to bear each other's burdens. (127) This is a doctrine on which the faithful cannot for a moment entertain a doubt, professing, as we do, in the Apostle's Creed, our belief in "the Communion of Saints." Regenerated, as we all are, to Christ in the same cleansing waters of baptism, partakers of the same sacraments, and, above all, of the same heavenly food, the Body and blood of our Lord Jesus Christ, we are all, it is manifest, members of the same mystical body. As then the foot does not perform its functions solely for itself, but also for sake of the other members, and as the other members perform their respective functions, not only for their own but also for the common good ; so, works of satisfaction are common to all the members of the Church. This, however, is not universally true in reference to all the advantages to be derived from works of satisfaction : of these works some are also medicinal, and are so many specific remedies prescribed to the penitent, to heal the depraved affections of the heart ; a fruit which, it is evident, they alone can derive from them, who satisfy for themselves. Of these particulars touching the three parts of penance, contrition, confession and satisfaction, it is the duty of the pastor to give an ample and clear exposition.

Illustration

Note.

The confessor, however, will be scrupulously careful, before he absolves the penitent whose confession he has heard, to insist that if he has been really guilty of having injured his neighbour in property or character, he make reparation for the injury : no person is to be absolved until he has first faithfully promised to repair fully the injury done ; and, as there are many who, although free to make large promises to comply with their duty in this respect, are yet deliberately determined not to fulfil them, they should be obliged to make restitution, and the words

No person to be absolved, until he has promised faithfully to repair the injury done.

of the Apostle are to be strongly and frequently pressed upon their minds : “ He that stole, let him now steal no more : but rather let him labour working with his hands the thing which is good, that he may have some thing to give to him that suffereth need.” (128)

Penance
how to be imposed.

But, in imposing penance, the confessor will do nothing arbitrarily ; he will be guided solely by justice, prudence, and piety ; and in order to follow this rule, and also to impress more deeply on the mind of the penitent the enormity of sin, he will find it expedient to remind him of the severe punishments inflicted by the ancient penitential canons, as they are called, for certain sins. The nature of the sin, therefore, will regulate the extent of the satisfaction ; but no satisfaction can be more salutary than to require of the penitent to devote, for a certain number of days, a certain portion of time to prayer, not omitting to supplicate the divine mercy in behalf of all mankind, and particularly for those who have departed this life in the Lord. Penitents should, also, be exhorted to undertake of their own accord, the frequent performance of the penances usually imposed by the confessor, and so to order the tenor of their future lives, that having faithfully complied with every thing which the sacrament of Penance demands, they may never cease studiously to practise the virtue of penance. But, should it be deemed proper sometimes to visit public crimes with public penance, and should the penitent express great reluctance to submit to its performance, his importunity is not to be readily yielded to : he should be persuaded to embrace with cheerfulness that which is so salutary to himself and to others. These things, which regard the sacrament of Penance and its several parts, the pastor will teach in such a manner as to enable the faithful not only to understand them perfectly, but, also, with the Divine assistance, piously and religiously to reduce them to practice.

Public crimes to be visited with public penance.

THE SACRAMENT OF EXTREME UNCTION.

---

“IN all thy works,” says Ecclesiasticus, “remember thy last end, and thou shalt never sin:” (1) words which convey to the pastor a silent admonition, to omit no opportunity of exhorting the faithful to constant meditation on their last end. The sacrament of Extreme Unction, because inseparably associated with this awful recollection, should, it is obvious, form a subject of frequent instruction, not only, inasmuch as it is eminently useful to develop the mysteries of salvation, but also because death, the inevitable doom of all men, when frequently recalled to the minds of the faithful, represses the licentiousness of depraved passion. Thus shall they be less appalled by the terrors of approaching dissolution, and will pour forth their gratitude in endless praises to God, whose goodness has not only opened to us the way to true life in the sacrament of Baptism, but has also instituted that of Extreme Unction, to afford us, when departing this mortal life, an easier access to heaven.

This Sacrament should be the subject of frequent instruction.

In order, therefore, to follow, in a great measure, the same order observed in the exposition of the other sacraments, we will first show that this sacrament is called “Extreme Unction,” because amongst the other unctions prescribed by our Lord to His Church, this is the last to be administered. It was hence called by our predecessors in the faith, “the sacrament of the anointing of the sick,” and also, “the sacrament of dying persons,” names which naturally lead the minds of the faithful to the remembrance of that last awful hour. (2)

This sacrament why called Extreme Unction.

(1) Eccles. vii. 40.

(2) Vid. Hugon. de Sac. part. 15. c. 2. Pet. Dam. serm. 1. de dedicat. Eccles.

Proved to be a sacrament.

I.

That Extreme Unction is, strictly speaking, a sacrament, is first to be explained; and this the words of S. James, promulgating the law of this sacrament, clearly establish: "Is any man," says he, "sick amongst you? Let him bring in the priests of the Church, and let them pray over him, anointing him with oil in the name of the Lord: and the prayer of faith shall save the sick man; and the Lord shall raise him up; and if he be in sins, they shall be forgiven him." (3) When the Apostle says: "if he be in sins, they shall be forgiven him," he ascribes to Extreme Unction, at once the nature and efficacy of a sacrament. That such has been at all times the doctrine of the Catholic Church, many Councils testify, and the Council of Trent denounces anathema against all who presume to teach or think otherwise. (4) Innocent III. also, recommends this sacrament with great earnestness to the attention of the faithful. (5) The pastor, therefore, will teach that Extreme Unction is a true sacrament, and that, although administered with many unctions, performed each with a peculiar prayer, and under a peculiar form, it constitutes but one sacrament—

II.

one, not by the inseparable continuity of its parts, but, like every thing composed of parts, by the perfection of the whole. As an edifice, which consists of a great variety of parts, derives its perfection from one form, so is this sacrament, although composed of many and different things, but one sign, and its efficacy is that of one thing of which it is the sign.

Note.

Its matter.

The pastor will also teach what are the component parts of this Sacrament, its matter and form: these S. James does not omit, and each is replete with its own peculiar mysteries. (6) Its element, then, or matter, as defined by many Councils, particularly by the Council of Trent, consists of oil of olives, consecrated by episcopal hands.

(3) James, v. 14. (4) Sess. 43. de Extrem. Unc. c. 1. & can. 5.

(5) Innoc. ep. 1. ad Decent. c. 8. & citatur dist. 95. c. illud superfluum: item Conc. Cabilon. c. 48. Wormaciencie c. 72. Constan. et Floren.

(6) James, v. 14.

No other sort of oil can be the matter of this Sacrament ; and this its matter is most significant of its efficacy. Oil is very efficacious in soothing bodily pain, and this Sacrament soothes and alleviates the pain and anguish of the soul. Oil also contributes to restore health and spirits, serves to give light, and refreshes fatigue ; and these effects correspond with and are expressive of those produced, through the divine power, on the sick, by the administration of this Sacrament. These few words will suffice in explanation of the matter.

With regard to the form, it consists of the following words, which contain a solemn prayer, and are used at each anointing, according to the sense to which the unction is applied : “ BY THIS HOLY UNCTION, AND THROUGH HIS GREAT MERCY, MAY GOD INDULGE THEE WHATEVER SINS THOU HAST COMMITTED BY SIGHT, SMELL, TOUCH, &c. &c.” That this is the true form of this Sacrament, we learn from these words of S. James : “ Let them pray over him, and the prayer of faith shall save the sick man ;” (7) words which intimate that the form is to be applied by way of prayer, although the Apostle does not say of what particular words that prayer is to consist. But this form has been handed down to us by apostolic tradition, and is universally retained, as observed by the Church of Rome, the mother and mistress of all churches. Some, it is true, alter a few words, as when for “ God indulge thee,” they say, “ God remit ” or “ spare,” and sometimes, “ heal, whatever thou hast committed ;” but the sense is evidently the same, and, of course, the form observed by all is strictly the same. Nor should it excite our surprise that, whilst the form of each of the other Sacraments either absolutely signifies what it expresses, such as, “ I baptise thee,” or “ I sign thee with the sign of the cross,” or is pronounced, as it were, by way of a command, as in administering Holy Orders, “ Receive power,” the form of Extreme Unction alone is expressed by way of prayer. The propriety of this difference will at once appear, if we reflect, that this Sacrament is administered not only for the health of the soul, but also for that of the body; and as it does not please Divine Providence, at all times, to restore health to the sick, the form consists of a prayer, by which we beg of the divine bounty that which is not a constant and uniform effect of the Sacrament.

Its form.

Expressed by way of prayer and why.

(7) James, v. 14, 15.

Administration of this Sacrament, why accompanied with many prayers.

In the administration of this Sacrament, peculiar rites are also used; but they consist principally of prayers, conferred by the priest for the recovery of the sick person. There is no Sacrament the administration of which is accompanied with more numerous prayers; and with good reason, for then, in a special manner, the faithful require the assistance of pious prayers. Not only the pastor, in the first place, but, also, all who may be present, should pour out their fervent aspirations to the throne of grace in behalf of the sick person, earnestly recommending his soul and body to the divine mercy.

This Sacrament instituted by Christ.

Having thus shown that Extreme Unction is to be numbered amongst the Sacraments, we infer, and the inference is just, that it owes its institution to our Lord Jesus Christ, and was subsequently made known and promulgated to the faithful, by the Apostle S. James. Our Lord himself would, however, seem to have given some indication of it when he sent his disciples, two and two, before him; for the Evangelist informs us that "going forth, they preached that all should do penance; and they cast out many devils, and anointed with oil many who were sick, and healed them." (8) This anointing cannot be supposed to have been invented by the Apostles; it was commanded by our Lord. Nor did its efficacy arise from any natural virtue peculiar to oil; its efficacy is mystical, having been instituted to heal the maladies of the soul, rather than to cure the diseases of the body. This is the doctrine taught by the Fathers of the Church, by the Denises, the An-

Note.

(8) Mark, vi. 12, 13.

broses, the Chrysostoms, by Gregory the Great; and Extreme Unction is to be recognised and venerated as one of the Sacraments of the Catholic Church.

But although instituted for the use of all, Extreme Unction is not to be administered indiscriminately to all.

In the first place, it is not to be administered to persons in sound health, according to these words of S. James:

“Is any one sick amongst you?” (9) and, as reason also proves, it was instituted as a remedy not only for the diseases of the soul, but also for those of the body: this can apply to the sick only, and, therefore, this Sacrament is to be administered to those only, whose malady is such as to excite apprehensions of approaching dissolution.

It is, however, a very grievous sin to defer the Holy Unction until, all hope of recovery now lost, life begins to ebb, and the sick person is fast verging into a state of insensibility. It is obvious that, if administered whilst the mental faculties are yet unimpaired, whilst reason still exercises her dominion, and the mind is capable of eliciting acts of faith, and of directing the will to sentiments of piety, the Sacrament must contribute to a more abundant participation of the graces which it imparts. This heavenly medicine, therefore, in itself at all times salutary, the pastor will be careful to apply, when its efficacy can be aided by the piety and devotion of the sick person.

Extreme Unction, then, can be administered only to the sick, and not to persons in health, although engaged in any thing however dangerous, such as a perilous voyage, or the fatal dangers of battle. It cannot be administered even to persons condemned to death, and already ordered for execution. Its participation is also denied to insane persons, and to children incapable of committing sin, who, therefore, do not require to be purified from its stains, and also to those who labour under the awful visitation of madness, unless they give indications, in their lucid intervals, of a disposition to piety, and express a desire to Extreme Unction, to whom and when to be administered.

Extremum Unctio, tunc potest administrari solummodo moribundis, non sanis, licet in aliquo periculo, vel in bello, vel in morte, vel in executione, vel in aliis similibus casibus. Non potest administrari insensibilibus, vel in insanis, vel in infans, vel in aliis qui non possunt committere peccatum, vel in aliis qui non habent necessitatem purgationis, vel in aliis qui laborant sub visitatione furoris, nisi indicent in lucidis intervallis, se esse dispositos ad pietatem, et exprimant desiderium ad

Extremum Unctio, tunc potest administrari solummodo moribundis, non sanis, licet in aliquo periculo, vel in bello, vel in morte, vel in executione, vel in aliis similibus casibus. Non potest administrari insensibilibus, vel in insanis, vel in infans, vel in aliis qui non possunt committere peccatum, vel in aliis qui non habent necessitatem purgationis, vel in aliis qui laborant sub visitatione furoris, nisi indicent in lucidis intervallis, se esse dispositos ad pietatem, et exprimant desiderium ad

Extremum Unctio, tunc potest administrari solummodo moribundis, non sanis, licet in aliquo periculo, vel in bello, vel in morte, vel in executione, vel in aliis similibus casibus. Non potest administrari insensibilibus, vel in insanis, vel in infans, vel in aliis qui non possunt committere peccatum, vel in aliis qui non habent necessitatem purgationis, vel in aliis qui laborant sub visitatione furoris, nisi indicent in lucidis intervallis, se esse dispositos ad pietatem, et exprimant desiderium ad

(9) James, v. 14.

be anointed. To persons insane from their birth, this Sacrament is not to be administered; but if a sick person, whilst in the possession of his faculties, expressed a wish to receive Extreme Unction, and afterwards becomes delirious, he is to be anointed.

How to be administered.

The Sacred Unction is to be applied not to the entire body, but to the organs of sense only—to the eyes the organs of sight, to the ears of hearing, to the nostrils of smelling, to the mouth of taste and speech, to the hands of touch. The sense of touch, it is true, is diffused throughout the entire body, yet the hands are its peculiar seat. This manner of administering Extreme Unction is observed throughout the universal Church, and accords with the medicinal nature of this Sacrament. As in corporal disease, although it affects the entire body, yet the cure is applied to that part only which is the seat of the disease, so in spiritual malady, this Sacrament is applied not to the entire body, but to those members which are properly the organs of sense, and also to the loins, which are, as it were, the seat of concupiscence, and to the feet, by which we move from one place to another.

It may be repeated, and when.

Here it is to be observed, that, during the same illness, and whilst the danger of dying continues the same, the sick person is to be anointed but once; should he, however, recover after he has been anointed, he may receive the aid of this Sacrament, as often as he shall have relapsed into the same danger. This Sacrament, therefore, is evidently to be numbered amongst those which may be repeated.

Preparation for receiving it worthily.

But as every obstacle which may impede its efficacy should be removed with the greatest care, and as nothing is more opposed to it than a state of mortal guilt, the pastor will follow the uniform practice of the Catholic Church, and not administer Extreme Unction, until the penitent has confessed and received. He will then earnestly exhort the sick person, to receive this Sacrament with the same sentiments of faith which animated the primitive Christians, who presented themselves to the Apostles to be healed by them. The health of the soul is to be the first object of the sick man's prayers, the second, that of the body, should it tend to his eternal interests. The faithful should be convinced, that the solemn and holy prayers, which are offered by the priest, not in his own name, but in that of the Church and of its divine Founder, are heard by Almighty God; and they cannot be too earnestly exhorted, to be careful to accompany the administration of the Sacrament, with all the sanctity and religious fervour that become that awful hour, when the dying Christian is about to engage in the last conflict, and the energies of the mind as well as of the body seem to be enfeebled.

With regard to the minister of Extreme Unction, this too we learn from S. James, when he says: "Let him bring in the priests:" (10) by the word "priests," as the Council of Trent has defined, (11) he does not mean elders or persons advanced in years, or of elevated rank, but priests duly ordained by bishops with the imposition of hands. The administration of this Sacrament, therefore, is committed to priests, not however to every priest, in accordance with the decree of the Church; but to the proper priest who has jurisdiction, or to another authorised by him. In this, as in the other Sacraments, it is also to be distinctly recollected, that the priest is the representative of Jesus Christ and of his Church.

The minister of this Sacrament.

Note.

The advantages, which flow from this Sacrament, are also to be explained more minutely, that if the sick are influenced by no other consideration, they may, at least, yield to this, for we are disposed to measure every thing by its utility. The pastor, therefore, will teach, that the grace of this Sacrament remits sins, especially lighter offences, or, as they are commonly called, venial sins. Its primary object is not to remit mortal sins. For this the Sacrament of penance was instituted, as was that of baptism for the remission of original sin. Another advantage

Its advantages.

I.

II.

(10) James, v. 14.

(11) Sess. 14, c. 3.

arising from Extreme Unction is, that it removes the languor and infirmity entailed by sin, with all its other inconveniences. The time most seasonable for the application of this cure is, when we are visited by some severe malady, which threatens to prove fatal; for nature dreads no earthly visitation so much as death, and this dread is considerably augmented by the recollection of our past sins, particularly if the mind is harrowed up by the poignant reproaches of conscience; as it is written: "They shall

III.

"come with fear at the thought of their sins, and their iniquities shall stand against them to convict them."<sup>(12)</sup> A source of alarm still more distressing is the awful reflection, that, in a few moments, we shall stand before the judgment-seat of God, whose justice will award that sentence, which our lives may have deserved. The terror inspired by these considerations frequently agitates the soul with the most awful apprehensions; and to calm this terror nothing can be so efficacious as the Sacrament of Extreme Unction. It quiets our fear, illumines the gloom in which the soul is enveloped, fills it with pious and holy joy, and enables us to wait with cheerfulness the coming of the Lord, prepared to yield up all that we have received from his bounty, whenever he is pleased to summon

IV.

us from this world of wo. Another, and the most important advantage derived from Extreme Unction, is, that it fortifies us against the violent assaults of Satan. The enemy of mankind never ceases to seek our ruin; but to complete our destruction, and, if possible, deprive us of all hope of mercy, he more than ever increases his efforts, when he sees us approach our last end. This Sacrament, therefore, arms and strengthens the faithful against the violence of his assaults, and enables them to fight resolutely and successfully against him. Tranquillized and encouraged by the hope of the divine mercy, the soul bears up with fortitude against every difficulty, experiences an alleviation of the burden of sickness, and eludes with (12) Wisdom, iv. 20.

V.

Note.

III

III

VI

greater ease, the artifice and cunning of the enemy, who lies in wait for her. Finally, the recovery of health, if advantageous to the sick person, is another effect of this Sacrament. However, should this effect not follow, it arises not from any defect in the Sacrament, but from weakness of faith on the part of him by whom it is received, or of him by whom it is administered; for the Evangelist informs us, that our Lord wrought not many miracles amongst his countrymen, because of their incredulity. (13) It may, however, be proper to observe, that Christianity, now that it has taken deep root in the minds of men, stands less in need of the aid of such miracles in our days, than in the early ages of the Church. Nevertheless, our faith is here to be strongly excited, and whatever it may please God in his wisdom to do with regard to the health of the body, the faithful should be animated with an assured hope of receiving from it spiritual health and strength, and of experiencing, at the hour of their dissolution, the truth of these consoling words: "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord." (14)

We have thus briefly explained the sacrament of Extreme Unction. If the heads of the matter be developed by the pastor more at large, with the diligence which their importance demands, the faithful, no doubt, will derive from their exposition abundant fruit of piety.

(13) Math. xiii. 58.

(14) Apoc. xiv. 13.

---

ON THE SACRAMENT OF ORDERS.

---

FROM an attentive consideration of the nature of the other Sacraments we shall find little difficulty in perceiving, that, so dependant are they all on that of orders, that without its intervention some could not exist, or be admitted.

The Sacrament of Orders, why to be explained to the people.

- nistered, whilst others should be stripped of the religious rites and solemn ceremonies, and of that exterior respect, which should accompany their administration. . The pastor, therefore, following up his exposition of the sacraments, will deem it a duty to bestow, also, on the Sacrament of Orders, an attention proportioned to its importance. This exposition cannot fail to prove salutary, in the first place, to the pastor himself, in the next place, to those who may have embraced the ecclesiastical state, and finally to the faithful at large—to the pastor himself, because, whilst explaining this Sacrament to others, he himself is excited to stir up within him the grace which he received at his ordination—to others whom the Lord has called to his sanctuary, by inspiring them with the same love of piety, and imparting to them a knowledge of those things which will qualify them the more easily to advance to higher orders—to the faithful at large, by making known to them the respect due to the ministers of religion. It, also, not unfrequently occurs, that, amongst the faithful, there are many who intend their children for the ministry whilst yet young, and some who are themselves candidates for that holy state; and it is proper that such persons should not be entirely unacquainted with its nature and obligations. (1)

Dignity of
this Sacra-
ment.

- I. The faithful then are to be made acquainted with the exalted dignity and excellence of this Sacrament in its highest degree, which is the priesthood. Priests and bishops are, as it were, the interpreters and heralds of God, commissioned in his name to teach mankind the law of God, and the precepts of a Christian life—they are the representatives of God upon earth. Impossible, therefore, to conceive a more exalted dignity, or functions more sacred. Justly, therefore, are they called not only “angels, (2) but gods, (3) holding, as they do, the place and power and authority of God on earth. But the priesthood; at all times an elevated office, transcends in the New Law all others in dignity. The power of consecrating and offering the body and blood of our Lord and of remitting sins, with which the priesthood of the New Law is invested, is such as cannot be comprehended by the human mind, still less is it equalled by, or assimilated to, any thing on earth. Again; as Christ was sent by the Father, (4) the Apostles and Disciples by Christ, (5) even so are priests invested with the same power, and sent "for the perfecting of the saints, for the work of the ministry, and the edification of the body of Christ." (6)

(1) Qui spectat ad mores eorum qui in aliquo ordine ecclesiastico sunt, videndum est, immo sciendum Conc. Trid. in posteriore parte cujusque sessionis, quæ est de reformatione; quod vero attinet a ordinem ut est sacramentum. vide idem Conc. sess. 13. et de singulis ordinationibus vide Conc. Carthag. IV. sub Anastasio Pontifice. anno 398.

This office, therefore, is not to be rashly imposed on any one: to those only is it to be entrusted, who, by the sanctity of their lives, by their knowledge, their faith, and their prudence, are capable of sustaining its weight: "Nor let any one take this honor to himself," says the Apostle, "but he that is called by God as Aaron was." (7) This call from God we recognise, in that of the lawful ministers of his Church. Of those, who would arrogantly obtrude themselves into the sanctuary, the Lord has said: "I sent not the prophets, and yet they ran:" (8) such sacrilegious intruders bring the greatest misery on themselves, and the heaviest calamities on the Church of God. (9) But as, in every undertaking, the end proposed is of the highest importance, (when the end is good, every thing proceeds well) the candidate for the ministry should, first of all, be admonished to propose to himself no motive unworthy of so exalted a station; an admonition which demands particular attention in these our days, when the

Those who are to receive Orders must be called: their views and dispositions.

(2) Mal. ii. 7. (3) Ps. lxxxii. 6. (4) John, viii. 56. (5) Mat. xxviii, 19.

(6) Eph. iv. 12.—De sacerdotii dignitate vide Iguat. epist. ad Smyrn. Amb. lib. 5. epist. 32. et lib. 10. ep. 82. Chrysost. hom. 60. ad pop. Antioch, et in Matt. hom. 83. Nazian. orat. 17. ad suos cives.

(7) Heb. v. 4.

(8) Jerem, xxiii. 21.

(9) Vid. dist. 23. multis in capitibus.

faithful are but too unmindful of its spirit: there are those who aspire to the priesthood with a view to secure to themselves a livelihood, who, like wordlings in matters of trade or commerce, look to nothing but sordid pelf. True, the natural and divine law command, that, to use the words of the Apostle, "he that serves the altar, should "live by the altar;"(10) but to approach the altar for gain, this indeed were a sacrilege of the blackest die. Others there are whom a love of honors, and a spirit of ambitious conduct to the altar, others whom the gold of the sanctuary attracts; and of this we require no other proof than that they have no idea of embracing the ecclesiastical state unless preferred to some rich ecclesiastical benefice. These are they whom the Lord denounces as "hirelings,"(11) who, to use the words of Ezekiel, "feed themselves and "not the sheep."(12) Their turpitude and profligacy have not only tarnished the lustre and degraded the dignity of the sacerdotal character, in the eyes of the faithful; but the priesthood brings to them, in its train, the same rewards which the Apostleship brought to Judas—eternal perdition.

But they who, in obedience to the legitimate call of God, undertake the priestly office, solely with a view to promote his glory, are truly said "to enter by the door." The obligation of promoting his glory is not confined to them alone; for this were all men created,—this the faithful in particular, consecrated, as they have been, by baptism to God, should promote with their whole hearts, their whole souls, and with all their strength. Not enough, therefore, that the candidate for holy orders propose to himself to seek in all things the glory of God, a duty common alike to all men, and particularly incumbent on the faithful: he must also be resolved to serve God in holiness and righteousness, in the particular sphere in which his ministry is to be exercised. As in an army, all obey the command of the General, whilst amongst them some hold the place of colonel, some of captain,

(10) 1 Cor. ix. 13.

(11) John, x. 12.

(12) Ezek. xxxiv. 1.

and others, stations of subordinate rank; so in the Church, whilst all without distinction should be earnest in the pursuit of piety and innocence, the principal means of rendering homage to God; to those, however, who are initiated in the Sacrament of Orders, special offices belong, on them special functions devolve—to offer sacrifice for themselves, and for all the people—to instruct others in the law of God—to exhort and form them to a faithful and ready compliance with its injunctions—and to administer the Sacraments, the sources of grace. In a word, set apart from the rest of the people, they are engaged in a ministry the most sacred and the most exalted.

Having explained these matters to the faithful, the pastor will next proceed to expound those things which are peculiar to this Sacrament, that thus the candidate for orders may be enabled to form a just estimate of the nature of the office to which he aspires, and to know the extent of the power conferred by Almighty God on his Church and her ministers. This power is two-fold, of jurisdiction, and of orders: the power of orders has reference to the body of our Lord Jesus Christ in the Holy Eucharist, that of jurisdiction to his mystical body, the Church; for to this latter belong the government of his spiritual kingdom on earth, and the direction of the faithful in the way of salvation. In the power of Orders is included not only that of consecrating the Holy Eucharist, but also of preparing the soul for its worthy reception, and whatever else has reference to the sacred mysteries. Of this the Scriptures afford numerous attestations, amongst which the most striking and weighty are contained in the words recorded by S. John and S. Matthew on this subject: “As the Father hath sent me,” says the Redeemer, “I send you: Receive ye the Holy Ghost, whose sins you shall forgive, they are forgiven them, and whose sins you shall retain, they are retained;” (13) and again, “Amen, I say unto you, whatever you shall bind on earth,

The power conferred by the Sacrament of Orders, two-fold, of jurisdiction, and of orders.

(13) John, xx. 21, 22, 23.

“ shall be bound also in heaven ; and whatever you shall “ loose on earth, shall be loosed also in heaven. (14) These passages, if expounded by the pastor from the doctrine, and on the authority of the Fathers, will shed considerable light on this important subject.

Greatness of this
 power.

This power far transcends that which was given to those, who, under the law of nature, exercised a special superintendance over sacred things. (15) The age anterior to the written law must have had its priesthood, a priesthood invested with spiritual power: that it had a law cannot be questioned; and so intimately interwoven are these two things with one another, that, take away one, you of necessity remove the other. (16) As then, prompted by the dictate of the instinctive feelings of his nature, man recognises the worship of God as a duty, it follows as a necessary consequence, that, under every form of government, some persons must have been constituted the official guardians of sacred things, the legitimate ministers of the divine worship; and of such persons the power might, in a certain sense, be called spiritual.

With this power the priesthood of the Old Law was also invested; but, although superior in dignity to that exercised under the law of nature, it was far inferior to the spiritual power enjoyed under the Gospel-dispensation. The power, with which the Christian Priesthood is clothed, is a heavenly power, raised above that of angels: it has its source not in the Levitical priesthood, but in Christ the Lord, who was a priest not according to Aaron, but according to the order of Melchisedech. (17) He it is who, endowed with supreme authority to grant pardon and grace, has bequeathed this power to his Church, a power limited, however, in its extent, and attached to the sacraments.

Name of this Sacrament.

To exercise this power, therefore, ministers are appointed and solemnly consecrated, and this solemn con-

(14) Matt. xviii. 18.

(15) Vid. de consecr. dist. 2. cap. nihil in sacrificiis, Conc. Trid. sess. 22. cap. 1. Iren. lib. 4. c. 34. Aug. l. 19. de civit. Dei, cap. 25.

(16) Heb. vii. 12.

(17) Heb. vii. 11.

secration is demominated "ordination" or, "the Sacrament of Orders." To designate this Sacrament, the word "Orders" has been made use of by the Holy Fathers, because its signification is very comprehensive, and, therefore, well adapted to convey an idea of the dignity and excellence of the ministers of God. Understood in its strict and proper acceptation, order is the disposition of superior and subordinate parts, which, when united, present a combination so harmonious as to stand in mutual and accordant relations. Comprising then, as the ministry does, many gradations and various functions, and disposed, as all these gradations and functions are, with the greatest regularity, this Sacrament is very appropriately called "the Sacrament of Orders."

That Holy Orders are to be numbered amongst the Sacraments of the Church, the Council of Trent establishes on the same principle to which we have so often referred in proving the other Sacraments. A Sacrament is a sensible sign of an invisible grace, and with these characters Holy Orders are invested: their external forms are a sensible sign of the grace and power which they confer on the receiver; Holy Orders, therefore, are really and truly a Sacrament. (18) Hence the bishop, handing to the candidate for priest's orders, a chalice which contains wine and water, and a patena with bread, says: "Receive the power of offering Sacrifice," &c., words, which, according to the uniform interpretation of the Church, impart power, when the proper matter is supplied, of consecrating the Holy Eucharist, and impress a character on the soul. To this power is annexed grace duly and lawfully to discharge the priestly office, according to these words of the Apostle: "I admonish thee, that thou stir up the grace of God which is in thee, by the imposition of my hands ;

Orders, a Sacrament.

(18) Sess. 23. de ordine. ordinem esse sacramentum vid. Trid. sess. 23. de ordine c. 1. & 3. & can. 3. 4. 5. Conc. Florent. in decret. de sacr. Aug. lib. 2. contr. epist. Parmen. cap. 15. de bono conjug. cap. 24. & lib. 1. de bapt. contra Donat. c. 1. Leo. epist. 18. Greg. in c. 10. libr. 1. Reg.

“ for God hath not given us the spirit of fear, but of power,
 “ and of love, and of sobriety.” (19)

Number of Orders.

With regard to the number of orders, to use the words of the Council of Trent, “ As the ministry of so exalted a “ priesthood is a divine thing, it was meet, in order to “ surround it with the greater dignity and veneration, “ that in the admirable economy of the Church there “ should be several distinct orders of ministers, intended “ by their office to serve the priesthood, and so disposed, as
 “ that, beginning with the clerical tonsure, they may ascend gradually through the lesser to the greater orders.” Their number, according to the uniform and universal doctrine of the Catholic Church, is seven, Porter, Reader, Exorcist, Acolyte, Sub-deacon, Deacon and Priest. (20) That these compose the number of ministers in the Church may be proved from the functions necessary to the solemn celebration of Mass, and to the consecration and administration of the Holy Eucharist, for which they were principally instituted. Of these some are greater, which are also called “ Holy,” some lesser, which are called “ Minor Orders.” The greater or Holy Orders are Sub-deaconship, Deaconship and Priesthood; the lesser or Minor Orders are Porter, Reader, Exorcist, and Acolyte. To facilitate the duty of the pastor, particularly when conveying instruction to those who are about to be initiated in any of the orders, it is necessary to say a few words on each.

Tonsure,
its form,
origin, and import.

We shall begin with the tonsure, which is a sort of preparation for receiving orders: As persons are prepared for baptism by exorcisms, and for marriage by espousals, so those, who are consecrated to God by tonsure, are prepared for admission to the Sacrament of Orders. Tonsure declares what manner of person he should be, who desires to receive Orders: the name of “ Clerk,” (clericus) which

(19) Tim. i. 6.

(20) Horum ordinum meminerunt Dionys. lib. Eccl. Hier. cap. 5. Cornel. Papa in epist. ad Fab. episcop. Antioch. extat apud Euseb. Hist. Eccles. lib. 6. cap. 35. Conc. Carth. 4. can. 4. & seq. Ignat. epist. ad Antioch.

he receives then for the first time, implies (21) that thenceforward he has taken the Lord for his inheritance, like those who, in the Old Law, were consecrated to the service of God, and to whom the Lord forbade that any portion of the ground should be distributed in the land of promise, saying: "I am thy portion and thy inheritance." (22) This, although true of all Christians, applies in a special manner to those who have been consecrated to the ministry. (23) In Tonsure the hair of the head is cut in form of a crown, and should be worn in that form, enlarging the crown according as the ecclesiastic advances in Orders. This form of the Tonsure the Church teaches to be of Apostolic origin: it is mentioned by the most ancient and venerable Fathers, by S. Denis the Areopagite, (24) by S. Augustine (25) and by S. Jerome. (26) According to these venerable personages the Tonsure was first introduced by the prince of the Apostles, in honor of the crown of thorns which was pressed upon the head of the Redeemer; that the instrument devised by the impiety of the Jews for the ignominy and torture of Christ may be worn by his Apostles as their ornament and glory. It was also intended to signify that the ministers of religion are, in all things, so to comport themselves, as to carry about them the figure and the likeness of Christ. Some however assert that tonsure is an emblem of the royal dignity, which belongs peculiarly to those who are specially called to the inheritance of God: for to the ministers of the Church belongs, in a peculiar manner, what the Apostle Peter says of all Christians: "You are a chosen generation, a royal priesthood, a holy nation." (27) Others are of opinion that tonsure, which is cut in form of a (21) κλήρος, sors. a lot. T.

(22) Num. xviii. 20.

(23) Vid. Hieron. epist. 2. ad Nepot. et citatur 12. q. 1. c. clericus.

(24) Dionys. de Eccles. Hier. c. 6. part. 2.

(25) Aug. serm. 17. ad Fratres in Eremo.

(26) Hier. in cap. 44. Ezek. vid. Rhaban. Maur. lib. de institut. cleric. Bed. lib. hist. 5. Angl. c. 22.

(27) 1 Pet. ii. 9.

circle, the most perfect of all figures, is emblematic of the superior perfection of the ecclesiastical state; or that, as it consists in cutting off hair, which is a sort of superfluity, it implies a contempt of worldly things, and a detachment from all earthly cares and concerns.

Porter.

The order of Porter follows Tonsure: its duty consists in taking care of the keys and door of the Church, and in suffering none to enter to whom entrance is prohibited. The Porter also assisted at the Holy Sacrifice, and took care that no one should approach too near the altar or interrupt the celebrant. To the order of Porter also belonged other functions, as is clear from the forms used at his consecration: taking the keys from the altar and handing them to him, the bishop says: "CONDUCT YOUR-"SELF AS HAVING TO RENDER AN ACCOUNT TO GOD FOR
"THOSE THINGS WHICH ARE KEPT UNDER THESE KEYS." That in the ancient Church this office was one of considerable dignity may be inferred from still existing ecclesiastical observances; for to the Porter belonged the office of treasurer of the Church, to which was also attached that of guardian of the sacristy; stations the duties of which are still numbered amongst the most honorable functions of the ecclesiastic. (28)

Reader.

The second amongst the Minor Orders is that of Reader: to him it belongs to read to the people, in a clear and distinct voice, the sacred Scriptures, particularly the Nocturnal Psalmody; and on him also devolves the task of instructing the faithful in the rudiments of the faith. Hence the bishop, in presence of the people, handing him a book which contains what belongs to the exercise of this function, says: "RECEIVE (THIS BOOK,) AND BE YOU A REHEARSER
"OF THE WORD OF GOD, DESTINED, IF YOU APPROVE YOUR-"SELF FAITHFUL AND USEFUL IN THE DISCHARGE OF YOUR "OFFICE, TO HAVE A PART WITH THOSE WHO, FROM THE BE-

(28) De Ostiario vid. Trid. sess. 23. de reform. c. 17. Conc. Tolet. c. 6. & citatur. dist. 25. Ostiar. Isid. l. de Eccl. c. 14. & dist. 25. c. perlectis, & apud Baron. Annal. Eccl. an. 54. num. 287. & an. 44. num. 78. & num. 80.

“GINNING, HAVE ACQUITTED THEMSELVES WELL IN THE “MINISTRY OF THE DIVINE WORD.” (29)

The third order is that of Exorcist: to him is given Exorcist.
power to invoke the name of the Lord over persons possessed by unclean spirits. Hence the bishop, when initiating the Exorcist, hands him a book containing the ex-orcisms, and says: “TAKE THIS AND COMMIT IT TO ME-“MORY, AND HAVE POWER TO IMPOSE HANDS ON PERSONS “POSSESSED, BE THEY BAPTISED OR CATECHUMENS.” (30)

The fourth and last amongst the Minor Orders is that Acolyte. of Acolyte: the duty of the Acolyte is to attend and serve those in holy orders, Deacons and Sub-deacons, in the ministry of the altar. The Acolyte also attends to the lights used at the celebration of the Holy Sacrifice, particularly whilst the Gospel is read. At his ordination, therefore, the bishop, having carefully admonished him of the nature of the office which he is about to assume, places in his hand a light, with these words: “RECEIVE THIS “WAX-LIGHT, AND KNOW THAT HENCEFORWARD YOU ARE “DEVOTED TO LIGHT THE CHURCH, IN THE NAME OF THE “LORD.” He then hands him empty cruets, intended to supply wine and water for the sacrifice, saying: “RE-“CEIVE THESE CRUETS, WHICH ARE TO SUPPLY WINE AND “WATER FOR THE EUCHARIST OF THE BLOOD OF CHRIST, “IN THE NAME OF THE LORD.” (31)

Minor Orders, which do not come under the denomina- Subdeacon.
tion of Holy, and which have hitherto formed the subject-matter of our exposition, are, as it were, the vestibule through which we ascend to holy orders. Amongst the latter the first is that of Sub-deacon: his office, as the name implies, is to serve the Deacon in the ministry of the altar: to him it belongs to prepare the altar-linen, the sacred

(29) Vid. Cypr. epist. 33. & Tertull. de prescript. c. 61. & apud Baron. Annal. Eccl. anno. 34. num. 287. & an. 54. 78. 79. an. 153. num. 93. an. 456. num. 20.

(30) De Exorcist. vid. supra cit. auctores & apud Baron. Annal. Eccl. an. 34. num. 287. an. 44. num. 78. & num. 80. an. 237. num. 89. an. 56. num. 5. & num. 8. 9. 10. 11. 12.

(31) De Acolytis vid. etiam Cypr. epist. 55. & apud Baron. Annal. Eccl. an. 44. num. 39. & num. 80.

vessels, the bread and wine necessary for the Holy Sacrifice, to minister water to the Priest or Bishop at the washing of the hands at Mass, to read the Epistle, a function which was formerly discharged by the Deacon, to assist at Mass in the capacity of a witness, and see that the Priest be not disturbed by any one during its celebration. These functions, which appertain to the ministry of the Sub-deacon may be learned from the solemn ceremonies used at his consecration. In the first place, the bishop admonishes him that by his ordination he assumes the solemn obligation of perpetual continence, and proclaims aloud that he alone is eligible to this office, who is prepared freely to embrace this law. In the next place, when the solemn prayer of the Litanies has been recited, the Bishop enumerates and explains the duties and functions of the Sub-deacon. This done, each of the candidates for ordination receives from the Bishop a chalice and consecrated patena, and from the Archdeacon, cruets filled with wine and water, and a basin and towel for washing and drying the hands, to remind him that he is to serve the Deacon. These ceremonies the bishop accompanies with this solemn admonition: "SEE WHAT SORT OF MINISTRY IS CONFIDED TO YOU: I ADMONISH YOU THEREFORE SO TO COMPORT YOURSELVES AS TO BE PLEASING IN THE SIGHT OF GOD." Additional prayers are then recited, and when, finally, the bishop has clothed the Sub-deacon with the sacred vestments, on putting on each of which he makes use of appropriate words and ceremonies, he then hands him the book of the Epistles, saying: "RECEIVE THE BOOK OF THE EPISTLES, AND HAVE POWER TO READ THEM IN THE CHURCH OF GOD, BOTH FOR THE LIVING AND THE DEAD." (32)

Deacon.

The second amongst the Holy Orders is that of Deacon :

(32) De Subdiaconis præter auctores suprà citatos vide Cypr. epist. 24. & epist. 42. dist. 17. c. presbyteris, Can. Apost. can. 25. Conc. Carthag. 4. can. 5. Arelat. 2. can. 2. Aurel. 5. cap. 2. Eliber. can. 33. Leo I. Epist. 82. item apud Baron. Annal. Eccl. an. 44. num. 79. & 80. an. 255. num. 72. num. 97. an. 259. num. 21. an. 324. num. 128. an. 588. num. 48. an. 589. num. 6. an. 1057. num. 32.

his ministry is more comprehensive, and has been always deemed more holy: to him it belongs constantly to accompany the bishop, to attend him when preaching, to assist him and the priest also during the celebration of the Holy Mysteries, and at the administration of the Sacraments, and to read the Gospel at the Sacrifice of the Mass. In the primitive ages of the Church, he not unfrequently exhorted the faithful to attend to the divine worship, and administered the chalice in those Churches, in which the faithful received the Holy Eucharist under both kinds. In order to administer to the wants of the necessitous, to him was also committed the distribution of the goods of the Church. To the Deacon also, as the eye of the bishop, it belongs to enquire and ascertain who within his diocese lead lives of piety and edification, and who do not; who attend the Holy Sacrifice of the Mass and the instructions of their pastors, and who do not; that thus the bishop, made acquainted by him with these matters, may be enabled to admonish each offender privately, or, should he deem it more conducive to their reformation, to rebuke and correct them publicly. He also calls over the names of catechumens, and presents to the bishop those who are to be promoted to orders. In the absence of the bishop and priest, he is also authorised to expound the Gospel to the people, not however from an elevated place, to make it understood that this is not one of his ordinary functions. That the greatest care should be taken, that no unworthy person be advanced to the office of Deacon, is evinced by the emphasis with which the Apostle, writing to Timothy, dwells on the morals, the virtue, the integrity which should mark the lives of those who are invested with this sacred character. (33) The rites and ceremonies used at his ordination also sufficiently convey the same lesson of instruction. The prayers used at the ordination of a Deacon are more numerous and solemn than at that of a Sub-deacon: his person is also invested with the sacred stole: of his ordination as of that of the first

(33) 1 Tim. iii. 8.

Deacons who were ordained by the Apostles, (34) the imposition of hands also forms a part; and, finally, the book of the Gospels is handed to him by the bishop with these words: "RECEIVE POWER TO READ THE GOSPEL IN THE CHURCH OF GOD, AS WELL FOR THE LIVING AS FOR THE DEAD, IN THE NAME OF THE LORD." (35)

Priest.

The third and highest degree of all Holy Orders is the Priesthood. Persons raised to the Priesthood the Holy Fathers distinguish by two names: they are called "Presbyters," which in Greek signifies elders, and which was given them, not only to express the mature years required by the Priesthood, but still more, the gravity of their manners, their knowledge and prudence: "Venerable old age is not that of long time, nor counted by the number of years; but the understanding of a man is grey hairs:" (36) they are also called "Priests," (Sacerdotes) because they are consecrated to God, and to them it belongs to administer the sacraments and to handle sacred things.

The Priesthood, two-fold;

But as the Priesthood is described in the Sacred Scriptures as two-fold, internal and external, a line of distinction must be drawn between them, that the pastor may have it in his power to explain to the faithful the Priesthood which is here meant.

Internal,

The internal Priesthood extends to all the faithful, who have been baptised, particularly to the just, who are anointed by the spirit of God, and by the divine grace are made living members of the High-Priest Christ Jesus. Through faith inflamed by charity, they offer spiritual sacrifices to God on the altar of their hearts, and in the number of these sacrifices are to be reckoned good and virtuous actions, referred to the glory of God. Hence we read in the Apocalypse: "Christ hath washed us from our sins in his own blood, and hath made us a kingdom and priests to God and his Father." (37) The doctrine of S. Peter to the same effect we find recorded in these words: "Be you also as living stones, built up, a spiritual house, a holy priesthood, to offer up spiritual sacrifices acceptable to God by Jesus Christ." (38) The Apostle also exhorts us, "to present our bodies a living sacrifice, holy, pleasing unto God, our reasonable service;" (39) and David had said long before: "A sacrifice to God is an afflicted spirit; a contrite and humble heart, O God! thou wilt not despise." (40) That all these authorities regard the internal Priesthood, it requires little discernment to discover.

(34) Acts vi. 6.

(35) De Diaconis preter citatos suprà vid. Clem. Rom. Constit. Apostol. l. 2. c. 6. Cypr. de lapsis. Amb. l. 1. offic. c. 41. Leo 1. serm. de S. Laurent. Clem. Rom. epist. 1. ad Jacob. Fratrem Domini, Hiér. epist. 48. & apud Baron. Annal. Eccl. an. 33. num. 41. an. 34. num. 283. an. 285 & 287. an. 34. num. 316. an. 44. num. 78 & 80. an. 57. num. 51 & num. 195. an. 58. num. 102, an. 112. num. 7. 8. 9. an. 316. num. 48. an. 324. num. 325. an. 325. num. 152. an. 401. num. 44 & 47. an. 508. num. 15. an. 741. num. 12.

(36) Wisd. 4. 8.

The external Priesthood does not extend indiscriminately to the great body of the faithful; it is appropriated to a certain class of persons, who, being invested with this august character, and consecrated to God by the lawful imposition of hands and the solemn ceremonies of the Church, are devoted to some particular office in the sacred ministry.

This distinction of Priesthood is observable even in the Old Law. We have already seen that David spoke of the internal Priesthood; and with regard to the external, the numerous commands, delivered by God to Moses and Aaron in reference to it, are too well known to require special mention. Moreover, the Almighty appointed the tribe of Levi to the ministry of the temple, and forbade by an express law that any member of a different tribe should assume that function; and Osias, stricken by God with leprosy for having usurped the sacerdotal office, was visited with the heaviest chastisement for his arrogant and sacrilegious intrusion. (41) As, then, we find this same and external.

This distinction observable in the Old Law.

(37) Apoc. i. 5, 6.

(38) 1 Pet. 2. 5.

(39) Rom. 12. 1.

(40) Ps. 50. 19.

(41) Amb. l. 4. de sacram. cap. 1. August. l. 10. de civ. Dei, c. 6 &

10. Leo. serm. 5. de Annivers. Pontific. 2 Par. 26. 18. 19.

We here speak of the external priesthood.

distinction of internal and external Priesthood in the New Law, the faithful are to be informed that we here speak of the external only, for that alone belongs to the Sacrament of Holy Orders.

Its office proved from the rites by which it is conferred.

I.
II.

The office of the Priest is then, as the rites used at his consecration declare, to offer sacrifice to God, and to administer the Sacraments of the Church: the bishop, and after him, the priests who may be present impose hands on the candidate for priesthood; then placing a stole on his shoulders he adjusts it in form of a cross, to signify that the priest receives strength from above, to enable him to carry the cross of Jesus Christ, to bear the sweet yoke of his divine law, and to enforce this law, not by word only, but also by the eloquent example of a holy life. He next anoints his hands with sacred oil, reaches him a chalice containing wine and a patena with bread, saying: "RECEIVE POWER TO OFFER SA-

III.

"CRIFICE TO GOD, AND TO CELEBRATE MASS AS WELL

"FOR THE LIVING AS FOR THE DEAD." By these words and ceremonies he is constituted an interpreter and mediator between God and man, the principal function of the Priesthood. Finally, placing his hands on the head of the person to be ordained, the bishop says:

IV.

"RECEIVE YE THE HOLY GHOST; WHOSE SINS YOU SHALL

"FORGIVE, THEY ARE FORGIVEN THEM: AND WHOSE SINS

"YOU SHALL RETAIN, THEY ARE RETAINED;" (42) thus investing him with that divine power of forgiving and retaining sins, which was conferred by our Lord on his disciples—

These are the principal and peculiar functions of the Priesthood.

The priesthood although one has different degrees of dignity and power.

I.
II.

The Order of Priesthood, although essentially one, has different degrees of dignity and power. The first is confined to those who are simply called Priests, and whose functions we have now explained. The second is that of Bishops, who are placed over their respective Sees, to govern not only the other ministers of the Church, but also the faithful, and, with sleepless vigilance and unwearied

(42) John iii. xx. 22, 23.

care, to watch over and promote their salvation. Hence the Sacred Scriptures frequently call them "the pastors of the sheep;" and their office, and the duties which it imposes, are developed by Paul in his sermon to the Thesalonians recorded in the Acts of the Apostles. (43) Peter also has left for the guidance of Bishops a divine rule; and if their lives harmonize with its spirit, they will no doubt be esteemed, and will really be, good pastors. (44) But Bishops are also called "Pontiffs," a name borrowed from the ancient Romans, and used to designate their Chief-priests. The third degree is that of Archbishop: he presides over several Bishops, and is also called "Metropolitan," because he is placed over the Metropolis of the Province. Archbishops, therefore, (although their ordination is the same,) enjoy more ample power, and a more exalted station than bishops. Patriarchs hold the fourth place, and are, as the name implies, the first and supreme Fathers in the Episcopal order. Formerly, besides the Sovereign Pontiff, there were but four Patriarchs in the Church: their dignity was not the same; the Patriarch of Constantinople, although last in the order of time, was first in rank—an honor conceded to him as Bishop of Constantinople, the capital of the imperial world. Next to the Patriarchate of Constantinople, is that of Alexandria, a see founded by the Evangelist S. Mark by command of the prince of the Apostles. The third is the Patriarchate of Antioch, founded by S. Peter, and the first seat of the Apostolic See; the fourth and last, the Patriarchate of Jerusalem, founded by S. James, the brother of our Lord.

Superior to all these is the Sovereign Pontiff, whom Cyril, Archbishop of Alexandria, denominated in the Council of Ephesus, "the Father and Patriarch of the whole world." Sitting in that chair in which Peter the prince of the Apostles sat to the close of life, the Catholic Church recognises in his person the most exalted degree of dignity, and the full amplitude of jurisdiction; a dignity and

III.

IV.

V.

(43) Acts, xx. 28.

(44) 1 Pet. v. 2.

a jurisdiction not based on synodal, or other human constitutions, but emanating from no less an authority than God himself. As the successor of S. Peter, and the true and legitimate vicar of Jesus Christ, he, therefore, presides over the Universal Church, the Father and Governor of all the faithful, of Bishops, also, and of all other prelates, be their station, rank, or power what they may. (45)

Instruction to the faithful on this Sacrament.

From what has been said, the pastor will take occasion to inform the faithful what are the principal offices and functions of Ecclesiastical Orders, and their degrees, and also, who is the minister of this Sacrament.

The minister of the Sacrament
of Orders,
a Bishop.

That to the Bishop belongs exclusively the administration of this Sacrament is matter of certainty, and is easily proved by the authority of Scripture, by traditional evidence the most unequivocal, by the unanimous attestation of all the Holy Fathers, by the decrees of Councils, and by the practice of the Universal Church. Some Abbots, it is true, were occasionally permitted to confer Minor Orders: all, however, admit that even this is the proper office of the Bishop, to whom, and to whom alone, it is lawful to confer the other Orders: Subdeacons, Deacons, and Priests are ordained by one Bishop only, but, according to Apostolic tradition, a tradition which has always been preserved in the Church, he himself is consecrated by three Bishops.

Necessity
of extreme caution in promoting to Orders.

We now come to explain the qualifications necessary in the candidate for Orders, particularly for Priesthood. From what we shall have said on this subject, it will not be difficult to decide what should also be the qualifications of those who are to be initiated in other Orders, according to their respective offices and comparative dignities. That too much precaution cannot be used in promoting to Orders is obvious from this consideration alone: the other Sacraments impart grace for the sanctification and salvation of those who receive them—Holy Orders for the good of the Church, and therefore for the salvation of all her children. Hence it is that Orders are conferred on certain appointed days only, days on which, according to the most ancient practice of the Church, a solemn fast is observed, to obtain from God, by holy and devout prayer, ministers not unworthy of their high calling, qualified to exercise the transcendent power with which they are to be invested, with propriety and to the edification of his Church.

(45) De primatu Summi Pontificis vid. Anacl. epist. 3. c. 3. et citatur dist. 22. c. Sacrosancta. Greg. I. 7. epist. 64. et 65. Nicol. Pap. epist. ad Mediolanens. et citat. dist. 22. c. omnes, vid. item eadem dist. c. Constantin. Conc. Chalced. in ep. ad Leonem.

In the candidate for priesthood, therefore, integrity of life is a first and essential qualification, not only because to procure, or even to permit his ordination, whilst his conscience is burdened with the weight of mortal sin, is to aggravate his former guilt, by an additional crime of the deepest enormity; but also, because it is his to enlighten the darkness of others by the lustre of his virtue, and the bright example of innocence of life. The lessons addressed by the Apostle to Titus and to Timothy (46) should, therefore, supply the pastor with matter for instruction; nor should he omit to observe, that whilst by the command of God bodily defects disqualify for the ministry of the altar in the Old Law, in the Christian dispensation such exclusion rests principally on the deformities of the mind. The candidate for Orders, therefore, in accordance with the holy practice of the Catholic Church, will first study diligently to purify his conscience from sin in the Sacrament of Penance.

In the Priest we also look not merely for that portion of knowledge which is necessary to the proper administration of the Sacraments: more is expected—an intimate acquaintance with the science of the Sacred Volume should fit him to instruct the faithful in the mysteries of religion, and in the precepts of the Gospel, to reclaim from sin, and excite to piety and virtue. The due consecration and administration of the Sacraments, and Qualifications for the priesthood.

I.

made in O
the whole O and of the Sacraments

II.

to be
to be to be
to be

(46) Tit. i. and 1 Tim. iii.

the instruction of those who are committed to his care in the way of salvation, constitute two important duties of the pastor. "The lips of the priest," says Malachy, "shall keep knowledge, and they shall seek the law at his mouth; because he is the angel of the Lord of Hosts." (47) To a due consecration and administration of the Sacraments, a moderate share of knowledge suffices; but to instruct the faithful in all the truths and duties of religion, demands considerable ability, and extensive knowledge.

Note.

In all priests, however, recondite learning is not demanded: it is sufficient that each possess competent knowledge to discharge the duties of his own particular office in the ministry.

On whom Orders are not to be conferred.

The Sacrament of Orders is not to be conferred on very young, or on insane persons, because they do not enjoy the use of reason: if administered, however, it, no doubt, impresses a character. The age required for the reception of the different Orders may be easily known by consulting the decrees of the Council of Trent. Persons obligated to render certain stipulated services to others, and therefore not at their own disposal, are inadmissible to Orders: persons accustomed to shed blood, and homicides, are also excluded from the ecclesiastical state by an ecclesiastical law, and are irregular. The same law excludes those whose admission into the ministry may and must bring contempt on religion; and hence illegitimate children, and all who are born out of lawful wedlock, are disqualified for the sacred ministry. Finally, persons who are maimed, or who labour under any remarkable personal deformity, are also excluded: such defects offend the eye, and frequently incapacitate for the discharge of the duties of the ministry.

Effects of the Sacrament of Orders.

I.

Having explained these matters, it remains that the pastor unfold the effects of this Sacrament. It is clear, as we have already said, that the Sacrament of Orders, although primarily instituted for the advantage and edification of the Church, imparts grace to him who receives it with the proper dispositions, which qualifies and enables him to discharge with fidelity the duties which it imposes, and amongst which is to be numbered the administration of the Sacraments. As baptism qualifies for their reception, so Orders qualify for their administration. Orders also confer another grace, which is a special power in reference to the Holy Eucharist; a power full and perfect in the priest, who alone can consecrate the body and blood of our Lord, but in the subordinate ministers, greater or less in proportion to their approximation to the sacred mysteries of the altar. This power is also denominated a spiritual character, which, by a certain interior mark impressed on the soul, distinguishes the ecclesiastic from the rest of the faithful, and devotes them specially to the divine service. This the Apostle seems to have had in view, when he thus addressed Timothy: "Neglect not the grace that is in thee, which was given thee by prophecy, with the imposition of the hands of the priesthood;" (48) and again, "I admonish thee, that thou stir up the grace of God, which is in thee by the imposition of my hands." (49)

II.

III.

On the Sacrament of Orders let thus much suffice.—Our purpose has been to lay before the pastor the most important particulars upon the subject, in order to supply him with matter upon which he may draw for the instruction of the faithful, and their advancement in Christian piety.

(48) 1 Tim. iv. 14.

(49) 2 Tim. i. 6.

---

ON THE SACRAMENT OF MATRIMONY.

---

As it is the duty of the pastor to propose to himself the holiness and perfection of the faithful, his earnest desires must be in full accordance with those of the Apostle, when, writing to the Corinthians, he says: "I would that all men were

A life of continence to be desired by all

The sanctity of marriage,

“even as myself;” (1) that is, that all embraced the virtue of continence. If there be any one blessing superior to every other, it surely falls to the lot of him who, unfettered by the distracting cares of the world, the turbulence of passion tranquillized, the unruly desires of the flesh extinguished, reposes in the practice of piety and the contemplation of heavenly things. But as, according to the same Apostle, “every one hath his proper gift from God, one after this manner, and another after that,” (2) and marriage is gifted with many divine blessings, holding, as it does, a place amongst the Sacraments of the Church, and honored, as it was, by the presence of our Lord himself, (3) it becomes the obvious duty of the pastor to expound its doctrine; particularly when we find that S. Paul, and the prince of the Apostles, have, in many places, minutely described to us not only the dignity but also the duties of the married state. Filled with the Spirit of God they well understood the numerous and important advantages, which must flow to Christian society from a knowledge of the sanctity and an inviolable observance of the obligations of marriage; whilst they saw that from an ignorance of the former, and a disregard of the latter, marriage must prove the fertile source of the greatest evils, and the heaviest calamities to the Church of God.

Nature and import of marriage to be first explained.

The nature and import of marriage are, therefore, to be first explained; for as vice not unfrequently assumes the semblance of virtue, care must be taken that the faithful be not deceived by a false appearance of marriage, and thus stain their souls with the turpitude and defilement of wicked lusts. To give them competent and correct information on this important subject, we shall begin with the meaning of the word “Matrimony.” It is called “Matrimony” because the principal object which a female should propose to herself in marriage is to become a mother; (matrem) or because to a mother it belongs to conceive, bring forth, and

Meaning of the word “matrimony.”

(1) 1 Cor. vii. 7.

(2) 1 Cor. vii. 7.

(3) John, ii. 2.

train up her offspring. It is also called "wedlock" (conjugium) from the conjugal union of man and wife; (a conjugendo) because a lawful wife is united to her husband, as it were, by a common yoke. It is called "marriage," (nuptiæ) because, as S. Ambrose observes, the bride veiled her face (se obnubere) through modesty, a reverential observance which would also seem to imply that she was to be subject to her husband. (4)

"Wedlock."

"Marriage."

Matrimony, in the general opinion of divines, is defined "The conjugal and legitimate union of man and woman, which is to last during life." In order that the different parts of this definition may be better understood, the pastor will teach that, although a perfect marriage has all these conditions, viz. internal consent, external assent expressed by words, the obligation and tie which arise from the contract, and the marriage debt by which it is consummated; yet the obligation and tie, expressed by the word "union," alone have the force and nature of marriage. The peculiar character of this union is marked by the word "conjugal," distinguishing it from other contracts, by which persons unite to promote their common interests; engage to render some service for a stipulated time, or enter into an agreement for some other purpose, contracts all of which differ essentially from this "conjugal union." Next follows the word "legitimate;" for persons excluded by law cannot contract marriage, and if they do their marriage is invalid. Persons, for instance, within the fourth degree of kindred, a boy before his fourteenth year, and a female before her twelfth, the ages established by the laws, (5) cannot contract marriage. The words "which is to last during life," express the indissolubility of the tie, which binds husband and wife.

Definition of matrimony, explanation of.

Hence, it is evident, that in that tie consists marriage. Some eminent divines, it is true, say that it consists in the

In what marriage consists.

(4) De his nomin. vid. Aug. l. 19. contr. Faust. c. 26. Ambr. l. 1. de Abraham c. 9. in fine. item vid. 30. q. 5. c. fœmina, & 35. q. 5. c. Mulier. Isidor. l. de Eccl. officiis c. 19.

(5) Such laws, the reader will perceive, are of a local nature, and vary in different countries.—T.

consent, as when they define it: "The consent of the man and woman;" but we are to understand them to mean that the consent is the efficient cause of marriage, which is the doctrine of the Fathers of the Council of Florence because, without the consent and contract, the obligation and tie cannot possibly exist. But it is of absolute necessity that the consent be expressed in words which designate the present time. Marriage is not a simple donation but a mutual contract; and therefore the consent of one of the parties is insufficient, that of both necessary to its validity; and to declare this consent, words are obviously the medium to be employed. If the internal consent alone, without any external indication, were sufficient, it would then seem to follow as a necessary consequence, that, were two persons, living in the most separate and distant countries, to consent to marry, they should contract a true and indissoluble marriage, even before they had mutually signified to each other their consent by letter or messenger; a consequence as repugnant to reason, as it is opposed to the decrees and established usage of the Church.

The consent of the parties to be expressed in words which have reference to the present time.

It has been wisely provided that the consent of the parties to the marriage contract be expressed in words which have reference to the present time. Words which signify a future time promise, but do not actually unite in marriage: it is evident that what is to be done has no present existence: what does not exist can have little or no firmness or stability: a promise of marriage, therefore, does not give a title to the rights of marriage. Such promises are, it is true, obligatory; and their violation involves the offending party in a breach of faith; but although entered into they have not been actually fulfilled, and cannot therefore constitute marriage. But he who has once entered into the matrimonial alliance, regret it as he afterwards may, cannot possibly change, or invalidate, or undo the compact. As then the marriage contract is not a mere promise, but a transfer of right, by which the man yields the dominion of his person to the woman, the woman the dominion of her person to the man, it must therefore be made in words which designate the present time, the force of which words abides with undiminished efficacy from the moment of their utterance, and binds the husband and wife by a tie which can never be dissolved.

Instead of words, however, it may be sufficient for the validity of the marriage contract to substitute a nod or other unequivocal sign of tacit consent: even silence, when the result of female modesty, may be sufficient, provided the parents answer for their daughter. Hence the pastor will teach the faithful that the nature and force of marriage consist in the tie and obligation; and that, without consummation, the consent of the parties, expressed in the manner already explained, is sufficient to constitute a true marriage. It is certain that our first parents, before their fall, when, according to the Holy Fathers, no consummation took place, were really united in marriage. (6) The Holy Fathers, therefore, say that marriage consists not in its consummation, but in the consent of the contracting parties; a doctrine repeated by S. Ambrose in his book on virginity. (7)

A nod or other unequivocal sign may be sufficient.

Consummation not necessary.

Having explained these matters, the pastor will proceed to teach, that matrimony is to be considered in two points of view, either as a natural union, (marriage was invented not by man but by nature) or as a sacrament, the efficacy of which transcends the order of nature; and as grace perfects nature, ("That was not first which is spiritual, but that which is natural; afterwards that which is spiritual,") (8) the order of our matter requires that we first treat of matrimony as a natural contract, and next as a sacrament.

Marriage two-fold, natural and sacramental.

The faithful, therefore, are to be taught, in the first place, that marriage was instituted by God. We read in Genesis, that "God created them male and female, and blessed them saying: 'Increase and multiply:;' and also; "It is not good for man to be alone: let us make him a help like unto himself. Then the Lord God cast a deep Natural marriage instituted by God.

(6) Gen. ii. 22.

(7) De instit. virgin. cap. 6.

(8) 1 Cor. xv. 46.

“sleep upon Adam; and when he was fast asleep, he took “one of his ribs, and filled up flesh for it. And the “Lord God built the rib which he took from Adam into a “woman, and brought her to Adam; and Adam said:
 “this is now bone of my bones, and flesh of my flesh:
 “she shall be called woman, because she was taken out of “man: wherefore a man shall leave father and mother, “and shall cleave to his wife; and they shall be two in “one flesh.” (9) These words, according to the authority of our Lord himself as we read in S. Matthew, establish the divine institution of Matrimony. (10)

Indissoluble.

Not only did God institute marriage; he also, as the Council of Trent declares, rendered it perpetual and indissoluble: (11) “what God hath joined together,” says our Lord, “let not man separate.” (12) As a natural contract, it accords with the duties of marriage that it be indissoluble; yet its indissolubility arises principally from its nature as a sacrament; and this it is that, in all its natural relations, elevates it to the highest perfection. Its dissolubility, however, is at once opposed to the proper education of children, and to the other important ends of marriage.

Marriage not obligatory on all.

But the words, “increase and multiply,” which were uttered by Almighty God, do not impose on every individual an obligation to marry: they declare the object of the institution of marriage; and now that the human race is widely diffused, not only is there no law rendering marriage obligatory, but, on the contrary, virginity is highly exalted and strongly recommended in scripture as superior to marriage, as a state of greater perfection and holiness. On this subject the doctrine taught by our Lord himself is contained in these words: “He that can take it, let him “take it;” (13) and the Apostle says: “Concerning “virgins I have no commandment from the Lord; but I

(9) Gen. i. 27, 28. Gen. ii. 18, 21, 22, 23, 24.

(10) Matt. xix. 6.

(11) Sess. 24. init.

(12) Matt. xix. 6.

(13) Matt. xix. 12.

“ give counsel as having obtained mercy from the Lord to “ be faithful.” (14)

But why marriage was instituted is a subject which demands exposition—The first reason of its institution is because nature instinctively tends to such an union; and under the vicissitudes of life and the infirmities of old age, this union is a source of mutual assistance and support.
 Another is the desire of family, not so much, however, with a view to leave after us heirs to inherit our property and fortune, as to bring up children in the true faith and in the service of God. That such was the principal object of the Holy Patriarchs when they engaged in the married state, we learn from the Sacred Volumes; and hence the angel, when informing Tobias of the means of repelling the violent assaults of the evil demon, says: “ I will show “ thee who they are over whom the devil can prevail; for “ they who in such manner receive matrimony, as to shut “ out God from themselves and from their mind, and to “ give themselves to their lust, as the horse and mules “ which have not understanding, over them the devil hath “ power.” He then adds: “ thou shalt take the virgin with “ the fear of the Lord, moved rather for love of children “ than for lust, that in the seed of Abraham thou mayest ob“ tain a blessing in children.” (15) This was also amongst the reasons why God instituted marriage from the beginning; and therefore married persons who, to prevent conception or procure abortion, have recourse to medicine, are guilty of a most heinous crime—nothing less than premeditated murder. The third reason is one which is to be numbered amongst the consequences of primeval transgression:
 stript of original innocence human appetite began to rise in rebellion against right reason; and man, conscious of of his own frailty, and unwilling to fight the battles of the flesh, is supplied by marriage with an antidote against the licentiousness of corrupt desire. “ For fear of fornication,” says the Apostle, “ let every man have his own wife, and let

Marriage
 why instituted.

I.

II.

Note.

III.

(14) 1 Cor. vii. 25.

(15) Tob. vi. 16. 17. 18. 22.

“every woman have her own husband;” and a little after, having recommended to married persons a temporary abstinence from the marriage debt, “to give themselves to prayer,” he adds: “Return together again, lest Satan tempt you for your incontinency.” (16)

Note. These are ends, some one of which, those who desire to contract marriage piously and religiously, as becomes the children of the Saints, should propose to themselves. If to these we add other concurring causes which induce to contract marriage, such as the desire of leaving an heir, wealth, beauty, illustrious descent, congeniality of disposition, such motives, because not inconsistent with the holiness of marriage, are not to be condemned: We do not find that the Sacred Scriptures condemn the patriarch Jacob for having chosen Rachel for her beauty, in preference to Lia. (17)

Matrimony as a Sacrament, superior to the natural contract.

These are the instructions which the pastor will communicate to the faithful on the subject of marriage, as a natural contract: as a sacrament he will show that marriage is raised to a superior order, and referred to a more exalted end. The original institution of marriage, as a natural contract, had for object the propagation of the human race: its subsequent elevation to the dignity of a sacrament is intended for the procreation and education of a people in the religion and worship of the true God, and of our Lord Jesus Christ. When the Redeemer would exemplify the close union that subsists between him and his Church, and his boundless love towards us, he declares this divine mystery principally by alluding to the holy union of man and wife; and the aptitude of the illustration is evinced by this, that of all human relations no one is so binding as that of marriage, and those who stand in that relation are united in the closest bonds of affection and love. Hence the Sacred Scriptures, by assimilating it to marriage, frequently place before us this divine union of Christ with his Church.

Exemplifies the union of Christ and his Church.

(16) 1 Cor. vii. 2.

(17) Gen. xxix.

That marriage is a sacrament has been at all times held by the Church as a certain and well ascertained truth; and in this she is supported by the authority of the Apostle in his Epistle to the Ephesians: "Husbands," says he, "should love their wives, as their own bodies: he who loveth his wife, loveth himself, for no one ever hated his own flesh, but nourisheth and cherisheth it, even as Christ doth the Church, for we are members of his body, of his flesh, and of his bones. For this cause shall a man leave his father and mother, and shall cleave to his wife, and they shall be two in one flesh. This is a great sacrament, but I speak in Christ, and in the Church." (18) When the Apostle says: "This is a great sacrament," he means, no doubt, to designate marriage; (19) as if he had said: The conjugal union between man and wife, of which God is the author, is a sacrament, that is, a sacred sign of the holy union that subsists between Christ and his Church. That this is the true meaning of his words is shown by the Holy Fathers who have interpreted the passage; and the Council of Trent has given to it the same interpretation. (20) The husband, therefore, is evidently compared by the Apostle to Christ, the wife to the Church; (21) "the man is head of the woman, as Christ is of the Church;" (22) and hence the husband should love his wife, and again, the wife should love and respect her husband, for "Christ loved his Church, and gave himself for her;" and the Church, as the same Apostle teaches, is subject to Christ.

Marriage a Sacrament.

significat et confert
gratiam

That this sacrament signifies and confers grace, and in this the nature of a sacrament principally consists, we learn from these words of the Council of Trent: "The grace which perfects that natural love, and confirms that indissoluble union, Christ himself, the author and

It signifies and confers grace.

(18) Eph. v. 28.

(19) Tertull. lib. de Monog. Aug. de fide et oper. c. 7. lib. de nupt. & concup. c. 10. et 12.

(20) Sess. 24.

(21) Ambr. in epist. ad Ephes. (22) Ephes. v. 25.

“finisher of the sacraments, has merited for us by his passion.” (23) The faithful are, therefore, to be taught, that, united in the bonds of mutual love, the husband and wife are enabled by the grace of this sacrament, to repose in each others affections; to reject every criminal attachment; to repel every inclination to unlawful intercourse; and, in every thing to preserve “marriage honorable, and the bed undefiled.” (24)

Its superiority to Gentile and Jewish marriage.

The great superiority of the sacrament of matrimony to those marriages which took place before or after the Law, we may learn from the following considerations—The Gentiles, it is true, looked upon marriage as something sacred, and therefore considered promiscuous intercourse to be inconsistent with the law of nature: they also held that fornication, adultery, and other licentious excesses should be repressed by legal sanctions; but their marriages had nothing whatever of the nature of a sacrament. Amongst the Jews the laws of marriage were observed with more religious fidelity, and their marriages, no doubt, were more holy. Having received the promise that in the seed of Abraham all nations should be blessed, (25) it was justly deemed a matter of great piety amongst them to beget children, the offspring of a chosen people, from whom, as to his human nature, Christ our Lord and Saviour was to descend; but their marriage also wanted the true nature of a Sacrament. Of this it is a further confirmation that, whether we consider the law of nature after the fall of Adam, or the law given to Moses, we at once perceive that marriage had fallen from its primitive excellence and sanctity. Under the Law of Moses we find that many of the Patriarchs had several wives at the same time, and, should a cause exist, it was subsequently permitted to dismiss one's wife, having given her a bill of divorce; (26) both of which abuses have been removed by the Gospel dispensation, and marriage restored to its primitive state.

(23) Sess. 24. de matrim. (24) Heb. xiii. 4. (25) Gen. xxii. 18, 18.
 (26) Deut. xxiv. 1.—Math. xix. 7.

That polygamy is opposed to the nature of marriage is shown by our Lord in these words: "For this cause a man shall leave father and mother, and cleave to his wife, and they two shall be in one flesh. Therefore," continues the Redeemer, "now they are not two but one flesh." (27) The Patriarchs, who, by the permission of God, had a plurality of wives, are not on that account to be condemned: the words of the Redeemer, however, clearly show that marriage was instituted by God as the union of two only; and this he again expressly declares when he says: "Whoever shall dismiss his wife, and shall marry another, doth commit adultery, and he that shall marry her that is dismissed, commiteth adultery." (28) If a plurality of wives be lawful, we can discover no more reason why he who marries a second wife, whilst he retains the first, should be said to be guilty of adultery, than he who, having dismissed the first, takes to himself a second. Hence, if an infidel, in accordance with the laws and customs of his country, has married several wives, the Church commands him, when converted to the faith, to look upon the first alone as his lawful wife, and to separate from the others.

Polygamy opposed to the nature of marriage

That marriage cannot be dissolved by divorce is easily proved from the same testimony of our Lord: if by a bill of divorce the matrimonial link were dissolved, the wife might lawfully, and without the guilt of adultery, take another husband; yet our Lord expressly declares, that "whoever shall dismiss his wife, and marry another, committeth adultery." (29) The bond of marriage, therefore, can be dissolved by death alone, and this the Apostle confirms when he says: "A woman is bound by the law, as long as her husband liveth; but if her husband die, she is at liberty: let her marry whom she will only in the Lord;" and again: "To them that are married, not I, but the Lord commandeth, that the wife depart not

Marriage
indissoluble.

(27) Math. xix. 9.

(28) Math. xix. 9.

(29) Math. xix. 8.—Luke, xvi. 18.

“from her husband, and if she depart, that she remain “unmarried or be reconciled to her husband.”(30) Thus, to her who has separated from her husband, even for a just cause, the only alternative left by the Apostle is to remain unmarried or be reconciled to her husband: the Church, unless influenced by very weighty causes, does not sanction the separation of husband and wife.

Beneficial
 consequences of its indissolubi-lity.

- I. That this the law of marriage may not appear too rigorous, its beneficial consequences are to be presented to the consideration of the faithful. In the first place, they should know that the choice of a companion for life should be influenced by virtue and congeniality of disposition, rather than by wealth or beauty; a consideration which confessedly is of the highest practical importance to the interests of society. Besides, if marriage were disso-luble by divorce, married persons could scarcely ever want causes of dissention, which the inveterate enemy of peace and virtue would never fail to supply; whereas, when the faithful reflect that, although separated as to bed and board, they are still bound by the tie of marriage, and that all hope of a second marriage is cut off, they are more slow to anger and more averse to dissention; and if sometimes separated, feeling the many inconveniences that attend their separation, their reconciliation is easily accomplished through the intervention of friends. Here, the salutary admonition of S. Augustine is also not to be omitted by the pastor: to convince the faithful that they should not deem it a hardship to be reconciled to their penitent wives, whom they may have put away for adultery. “Why” says he, “should not the Christian husband “receive his wife, whom the Church receives? Why “should not the wife pardon her adulterous but penitent “husband, whom Christ has pardoned? When the Scrip“tures call him who keeps an adulteress ‘a fool,’ (31)
 “it means an adulteress who after her delinquency refuses “to repent, and perseveres in the career of turpitude

(30) 1 Cor. vii. 39.

(31) Prov. xviii. 21.

“which he had commenced.” (32) In perfection and dignity, it is clear therefore, from what has been said, that marriage amongst the Jews and Gentiles is far inferior to christian marriage.

The faithful are also to be informed that there are three advantages which arise from marriage, offspring, faith and the sacrament; advantages which alleviate those evils which the Apostle points out when he says: “Such shall have tribulation of the flesh;” (33) and which render that intercourse, which without marriage should be deservedly reprobated, an honorable union. (34) The first advantage, then, is that of legitimate offspring; an advantage so highly appreciated by the Apostle, that he says: “The woman shall be saved through “child-bearing.”(35) These words of the Apostle are not, however, to be understood to refer solely to the procreation of children: they also refer to the discipline and education by which children are reared to piety; for the Apostle immediately adds: “If she continue in faith.” “Hast thou children,” says Ecclesiasticus, “instruct “them and bow down their neck from their childhood:” (36) the same important lesson is inculcated by the Apostle; and of such an education the Scripture affords the most beautiful illustrations in the persons of Tobias, Job, and of other characters eminent for sanctity.—But the further developement of the duties of parents and children we reserve for the exposition of the Fourth Commandment.

Three advantages arising from marriage.

I.

Note.

II.

The next advantage is faith, not the habitual faith infused in baptism, but the fidelity which the husband plights to the wife and the wife to the husband, to deliver to each other the mutual dominion of their persons, and to preserve inviolate the sacred engagements of marriage. This is an obvious inference from the words of Adam on receiving his consort Eve, which, as the Gospel informs us, the Redeemer has sanctioned by his approbation: “Wherefore,” says our protoparent, “a man shall leave father and

(32) Lib. de adult. conjug. c. 6. & 9.

(33) 1 Cor. vii. 28.

(34) Vid. Aug. lib. 5. contr. Tul. cap. 5.

(35) 1 Tim. ii. 15.

(36) Eccl. vii. 25.

“mother, and shall cleave to his wife; and they shall be “two in one flesh.” (37) Nor are the words of the Apostle less explicit: “The wife,” says he, “hath not power “of her own body; but the husband.” (38) Hence against adultery, because it violates this conjugal faith, the Almighty justly decreed in the Old Law the heaviest chastisements. (39) This matrimonial faith also demands, on the part of husband and wife, a singular holy and pure love, a love not such as that of adulterers, but such as that which Christ cherishes towards his Church. This is the model of conjugal love proposed by the Apostle when he says: “Men love your wives, as Christ also loved the Church.” (40) The love of Christ for his Church was great, not an interested love, but a love which proposed to itself the sole happiness of his spouse.

III. The third advantage is called the sacrament, that is the indissoluble tie of marriage: “the Lord,” says the Apostle, “hath commanded that the wife depart not from her “husband, and if she depart, that she remain unmarried, “or be reconciled to her husband; and that the husband “dismiss not his wife.” (40) If, as a sacrament, marriage is significant of the union of Christ with his Church, it follows that as Christ never separates himself from his Church, so a wife, as far as regards the tie of marriage, can never be separated from her husband.

Duties of a husband.
I.

The more easily to preserve the happiness of this holy union undisturbed by domestic broils, the pastor will instruct the faithful in the duties of husband and wife, as inculcated by S. Paul and by the prince of the Apostles. (42) It is then the duty of the husband to treat his wife liberally and honorably: it should not be forgotten that Eve was called by Adam “his companion:” “The woman,” says he, “whom thou gavest me as a companion.” Hence it was, according to the opinion of some of the Holy

(37) Gen. ii. 24. Matt. xix. 5. (38) 1 Cor. vii. 4. (39) Num. v. 12.

(40) Ephes. v. 25. (41) Cor. vii. 10.

(42) Vid. Aug. l. 1. de adult. conjug. c. 21 & 22. & de bono conjug. car. 7. & concupis. lib. 1. c. 10.

Fathers, that she was formed not from the feet but from the side of man; as, on the other hand, she was not formed from his head, in order to give her to understand that it was not hers to command but to obey her husband.

The husband should also be constantly occupied in some honest pursuit, with a view as well to provide necessaries for his family, as to avoid the languor of idleness, the root of almost every vice. He is also to keep all his family in order, to correct their morals, fix their respective employments, and see that they discharge them with fidelity. On the other hand, the duties of a wife are thus summed up by the prince of the Apostles: "Let wives be subject to their husbands; that if any believe not the word, they may be won without the word, by the conversation of the wives; considering your chaste conversation with fear: whose adorning let it not be the outward plaiting of the hair, or the wearing of gold, or the putting on of apparel, but the hidden man of the heart in the incorruptibility of a quiet and meek spirit, which is rich in the sight of God. For after this manner, heretofore, the holy women also, who trusted in God, adorned themselves, being in subjection to their own husbands, as Sarah obeyed Abraham, calling him Lord." (43) To train up their children in the practice of virtue, and to pay particular attention to their domestic concerns, should also be especial objects of their attention and study. Unless compelled by necessity to go abroad, they should also cheerfully remain at home; and should never leave home without the permission of their husbands. Again, and in this the conjugal union chiefly consists, let them never forget that, next to God, they are to love their husbands, to esteem them above all others, yielding to them, in all things not inconsistent with Christian piety, a willing and obsequious obedience.

II.

III.

Duties of a wife.

I.

II.

III.

IV.

Having explained these matters, the pastor will next proceed to instruct his people in the rites to be observed in the administration of marriage. Here, however, it is not Rites observed in the administration of marriage.

(43) 1 Pet. iii. 1. 2.

to be supposed that we give in detail the laws that regulate marriage: these have been accurately fixed, and are detailed at large in the decree of the Council of Trent on marriage, a decree with which the pastor cannot be unacquainted. Here, therefore, it will suffice to admonish him to study to make himself acquainted, from the doctrine of the Council, with what regards this subject, and to make it a matter of assiduous exposition to the faithful. (44.)

Youth to be admonished on the subject of marriage.

But above all, lest young persons, and youth is a period of life marked by extreme weakness and indiscretion, deceived by the specious but misapplied name of marriage, may rush into hasty engagements, the result of criminal passion; the pastor cannot too frequently remind them that, without the presence of the parish-priest, or of some other priest commissioned by him or by the ordinary, and that of two or three witnesses, there can be no marriage.

The impediments of marriage.

The impediments of marriage are also to be explained, a subject so minutely and accurately treated by many writers on morality, of grave authority and profound erudition, as to render it an easy task to the pastor to draw upon their labors, particularly as he has occasion to have such works continually in his hands. The instructions, therefore, which they contain, and also the decrees of the Council with regard to the impediments arising from "spiritual affinity," from "the justice of public honesty," and from "fornication," the pastor will peruse with attention and expound with care and accuracy.

The dispositions with which the sacrament of marriage is to be approached.

The faithful may hence learn the dispositions with which they should approach the sacrament of marriage: they should consider themselves as about to engage, not in a human work, but in a divine ordinance; and the example of the Fathers of the Old Law, by whom marriage, although not raised to the dignity of a sacrament, was deemed a most holy and religious rite, evinces the singular purity of soul and sentiments of piety, with which Christians should approach so holy a sacrament.

But, amongst many other matters there is one which demands the zealous exhortation of the pastor, it is, that children pay it as a tribute of respect due to their parents, or to those under whose guardianship and authority they are placed, not to engage in marriage without their knowledge, still less in defiance of their express wishes. In the Old Law children were uniformly given in marriage by their parents; and that the will of the parent is always to have very great influence on the choice of the child, is clear from these words of the Apostle: "He that giveth his virgin in marriage doth well; and he that giveth her not, doth better." (45)

Clandestine marriage.

Finally, with regard to the use of marriage, this is a subject which the pastor will approach with becoming delicacy, avoiding the use of any expression that may be unfit to meet the ears of the faithful, that may be calculated to offend the piety of some, or excite the laughter of others. "The words of the Lord are chaste words;" (46) and the teachers of a christian people should make use of no language that is not characterised by gravity, and that does not breathe purity of soul. Two lessons of instruction are, then, to be specially pressed upon the attention of the faithful: the first, that marriage is not to be sought from motives of sensuality, but that its use is to be restrained within those limits, which, as we have already shown, are fixed by God. They should be mindful of the exhortation of the Apostle: "They," says he, "that have wives, let them be as though they had them not." (47) The words of S. Jerome are also worthy of attention: "The love," says he, "which a wise man cherishes towards his wife, is the result of judgment, not the impulse of passion: he governs the impetuosity of desire, and is not hurried into indulgence. What greater turpitude than that a husband should love his wife, as the seducer loves the adulteress." (48) But as every blessing is to be ob-

Two lessons of instruction which regard the use of marriage.

I.

II.

(45) 1 Cor. vii. 38.

(46) Ps. xi. 7.

(47) 1 Cor. vii. 29.

(48) S. Hier. lib. 1. contra. Iovian. in fine.

tained from God by holy prayer, the faithful are also to be taught sometimes to abstain from the marriage debt, in order to devote themselves to prayer. This religious continence, according to the proper and pious injunction of our predecessors in the faith, is particularly to be observed for at least three days previous to communion, and for a longer time during the solemn and penitential season of Lent. Thus will the faithful experience the blessings of the holy state of marriage by a constantly increasing accumulation of divine grace; and living in the pursuit and practice of piety, they will not only spend this mortal life in peace and tranquillity, but will also repose in the true and firm hope, "which confoundeth not," (49) of arriving one day, through the divine goodness, at the fruition of that life which is eternal. (50)

(49) Rom. v. 5.

(50) Vid. 33. q. 4. per totam & de consecr. dist. 2. cap. omnis homo. Hier. in apol. pro libris contra Iovian. post medium inter epist. num. 50. & in c. 12. Zach. super. illud: "In die plauctus magnus erit fructus thori immaculati."

THE CATECHISM
OF
THE COUNCIL OF TRENT.

---

PART III.
ON THE DECALOGUE.

---

THAT the Decalogue is an epitome of the entire law of God is the recorded opinion of S. Augustine. (1) The Lord, it is true, had uttered many things for the instruction and guidance of his people; yet two tables only were given to Moses. They were made of stone, and were called "the tables of the testimony," and were to be deposited in the ark; and on them, if minutely examined and well understood, will be found to hinge whatever else is commanded by God. Again, these ten commandments are reducible to two, the love of God and of our neighbour, on which "depend the whole Law and the Prophets." (2).

The Decalogue an epitome of the entire law of God.

Embodying then, as the Decalogue does, the whole Law, it is the imperative duty of the pastor to give his days and nights to its consideration; and to this he should be prompted by a desire not only to regulate his own life by its precepts, but also to instruct in the law of God the people committed to his care. "The lips of the priest," says Malachy, "shall keep knowledge, and they shall

To be carefully studied and explained by the pastor.

(1) Quæstio 140. super Exod.

(2) Matt. xxii. 40.

“seek the law at his mouth, because he is the angel of “the Lord of Hosts.” (3) To the priests of the New Law this injunction applies in a special manner; they are nearer to God, and should be “transformed from glory to glory “as by the Spirit of the Lord.” (4) Christ our Lord has said that they are “the light of the world:” (5) they should, therefore, be “a light to them that are in darkness, the “instructors of the foolish, the teachers of infants;” (6) and “if a man be overtaken in any fault, those who are “spiritual should instruct such a one.” (7) In the tribunal of penance the priest holds the place of a judge, and pronounces sentence according to the nature of the offence. Unless, therefore, he is desirous that his ignorance should prove an injury to himself, and an injustice to others, he must bring with him to the discharge of this duty, the greatest vigilance, and the most intimate and practised acquaintance with the interpretation of the Law, in order to be able to pronounce according to this divine rule on every omission and commission; and that, as the Apostle says, he teach sound doctrine, (8) doctrine free from error, and heal the diseases of the soul, which are the sins of the people, that they may be “acceptable to God, pursuers “of good works.” (9)

Motives for its observance.

In the discharge of this duty of instruction, the pastor will propose to himself and to others such considerations, as may be best calculated to impress upon the mind the conviction, that obedience to the law of God is the duty of every man; and if in the Law there are many motives to stimulate to its observance, there is one which of all others is powerfully impressive—it is, that God is its author. True, it is said to have been delivered by angels, (10) but its author, we repeat, is God. Thus, not only the words of the Legislator himself, which we shall subsequently explain, but also, innumerable other passages of

(3) Mal. ii. 7.

(4) 2 Cor. iii. 18.

(5) Matt. v. 14.

(6) Rom. li. 19, 20.

(7) Gal. vi. 1.

(8) 2 Tim. iv. 3.

(9) Tit. ii. 14.

(10) Gal. iii. 19.

Scripture, which the memory of the pastor will readily supply, bear ample testimony. Who is not conscious that a law is inscribed on his heart by the finger of God, teaching him to distinguish good from evil, vice from virtue, justice from injustice? The force and import of this unwritten law do not conflict with that which is written. How unreasonable then to deny that God is the author of the written, as he is of the unwritten law.

But, lest the people, aware of the abrogation of the Mosaic Law, may imagine that the precepts of the Decalogue are no longer obligatory, the pastor will inform them, that these precepts were not delivered as new laws, but rather as a renewal and developement of the law of nature: its divine light, which was obscured and almost extinguished by the crimes and the perversity of man, shines forth in this celestial code with increased and renovated splendor. The Ten Commandments, however, we are not bound to obey because delivered by Moses, but because they are so many precepts of the natural law, and have been explained and confirmed by our Lord Jesus Christ.

The written law, w. given.

Note.

But it must prove a most powerful and persuasive argument for enforcing its observance, to reflect that the founder of the Law is no less a person than God himself—that God whose wisdom and justice we mortals cannot question—whose power and might we cannot elude. Hence, we find that when by his prophet, he commands the Law to be observed, he proclaims that he is “the Lord God.” The Decalogue, also, opens with the same solemn admonition: “I am the Lord thy God;” (11) and in Malachy we read the indignant interrogatory: “If I am a master, “where is my fear?” (12) That God has vouchsafed to give us a transcript of his holy will, on which depends our eternal salvation, is a consideration which, besides animating the faithful to the observance of his commandments, must call forth the expression of their grateful homage in return for his beneficent condescension. Hence Considerations calculated to enforce its observance.

I.

II.

(11) Exod. xx. 2.

(12) Malach. i. 6.

the Sacred Scriptures, in more passages than one, setting forth this invaluable blessing, admonish us to know our own dignity, and to appreciate the divine bounty: "This," says Moses, "is your wisdom and understanding in the sight of nations, that hearing all these precepts they may say: 'behold a wise and understanding people, a great nation;'" (13) "He hath not done in like manner to every nation;" says the royal psalmist, "and his judgments he hath not made manifest to them." (14)

The circumstances which attended its promulgation.

The circumstances which accompanied the promulgation of the Law, as recorded in the Sacred Volumes, also demand the attention of the pastor; they are well calculated to convey to the minds of the faithful an idea of the piety and humility with which they should receive and reverence a Law delivered by God himself—Three days previous to its promulgation, was announced to the people the divine command, to wash their garments, to abstain from conjugal intercourse, in order that they may be more holy and better prepared to receive the Law, and on the third day to be in readiness to hear its awful announcement. When they had reached the mountain from which the Lord was to deliver the Law by Moses, Moses alone was commanded to ascend; and the Lord descending from on high with great majesty, filling the mount with thunder and lightning, with fire and dense clouds; spoke to Moses, and delivered to him the Law. (15) In this the divine wisdom had solely for object to admonish us to receive his Law with pure and humble minds, and to impress the salutary truth, that over the neglect of his commands impend the heaviest chastisements of the divine justice.

Note.

Its observance, easy.

The pastor will also teach that the commandments of God are not difficult of observance, as these words of S. Augustine are alone sufficient to show: "How, I ask, is it said to be impossible for man to love—to love, I say, beneficent Creator, a most loving Father, and also, in

(15) Deut. iv. 6.

(14) Ps. cxlvii. 20.

(15) Exod. xix. 10. et seq.

“the persons of his brethren, to love his own flesh?
 “Yet, ‘he who loveth hath fulfilled the Law.’” (16) (17)
 Hence, the Apostle S. John expressly says, that “the com“mandments of God are not heavy;” (18) for, as S. Bernard observes, “no duty more just could be exacted from “man, none that could confer on him a more exalted dig“nity, none that could contribute more largely to his own “interests.” (19) Hence in this pious effusion addressed to the Deity himself, S. Augustine expresses his admiration of his infinite bounty: “What,” says he, “is man “that thou wouldst be loved by him? And if he loves thee “not, thou threatenest him with heavy punishment—Is “it not punishment enough that I love thee not?”

But should any one plead human infirmity to exculpate himself from not loving God, it is not to be forgotten that he who demands our love “pours into our hearts by the “Holy Ghost” the fervour of his love, (20) “and this “good Spirit our Heavenly Father gives to those that ask “him.” (21) “Give what thou commandest,” says S. Augustine, “and command what thou pleasest.” (22) As then, God is ever ready by his divine assistance to sus-tain our weakness, especially since the death of Christ the Lord, by which the prince of this world was cast out;
 there is no reason why we should be disheartened by the difficulty of the undertaking; to him who loves, nothing is difficult. (23)

Human infirmity no plea for its non-observ-
 vance.

To show that we are all laid under the necessity of obey-ing the Law is a consideration, which must possess additional weight in the enforcement of its observance; and it becomes the more necessary to dwell on this particular in these our days, when there are not wanting those who,
 to the serious injury of their own souls, have the impious

All bound to obey its injunctions

(16) Aug. serm. 47. de temp. (17) Rom. xiii. 8. (18) 1 John, v. 3.

(19) Lib. de diligendo Deo, .l. 1. Confess. c. 5. (20) Rom. v. 5.

(21) Luke, ii. 13.

(22) Lib. 10. confess. c. 29, 31 et 37. Item de bono persever. c. 20.

(23) Aug. in Ps. iii. Bern. Serm. de Dom. in ramis palm. item in serm. de Magdal.

hardihood to assert that the observance of the Law, whether easy or difficult, is by no means necessary to salvation. This wicked and impious error the pastor will refute from Scripture, by the authority of which they endeavour to defend their impious doctrine. What then are the words of the Apostle? "Circumcision is nothing, and uncircumcision is nothing, but the keeping of the commandments of God." (24) Again, inculcating the same doctrine, he says: "A new creature, in Christ, alone avails;" (25) by "a new creature," evidently meaning him who observes the commandments of God; for, as our Lord himself testifies in S. John, he who observes the commandments of God loves God: "If any one love me," says the Redeemer, "he will keep my word." (26)

Note. A man, it is true, may be justified, and from wicked may become righteous, before he has fulfilled by external acts each of the divine commandments; but no one who has arrived at the use of reason, unless sincerely disposed to observe them all, can be justified.

Fruits of its observance.

Finally, to leave nothing unsaid that may be calculated to induce to an observance of the Law, the pastor will point out how abundant and sweet are its fruits. This he will easily accomplish by referring to the eighteenth psalm, which celebrates the praises of the divine Law, amongst which its highest eulogy is, that it proclaims more eloquently the glory and the majesty of God than even the celestial orbs, which by their beauty and order, excite the admiration of the most barbarous nations, and compel them to acknowledge and proclaim the glory, the wisdom, and the power of the Creator and Architect of the Universe. "The Law of the Lord" also "converts souls:" knowing the ways of God and his holy will through the medium of his Law, we learn to walk in the way of the Lord. It also, "gives wisdom to little ones:" (27) they alone who fear God are truly wise. Hence, the observers of the Law of God are

(24) 1 Cor. vii. 19.

(25) Gal. vi. 15.

(26) John. xiv. 21, 23.

(27) Ps. xviii. 8.

filled with a profusion of pure delights, are enlightened by the knowledge of the divine mysteries, and are blessed with an accumulation of pleasures and rewards as well in this life, as in the life to come.

In our observance of the Law, however, we should not be actuated so much by a sense of our own advantage as by a regard for the holy will of God, unfolded to man by the promulgation of his Law: if the irrational part of creation is obedient to this his sovereign will, how much more reasonable that man should live in subjection to its dictate?

To be observed for sake of God.

A further consideration which cannot fail to arrest our attention is, that God has preeminently displayed his clemency and the riches of his bounty in this, that whilst he might have commanded our service without a reward, he has, notwithstanding, deigned to identify his own glory with our advantage, thus rendering what tends to his honor, conducive to our interests. This is a consideration of the highest importance, and one which proclaims aloud the goodness of God. The pastor then will not fail to impress on the minds of the faithful this salutary truth, telling them in the language of the prophet whom we have last quoted, that "in keeping the commandments of God there is a great reward." (28) Not only are we promised those blessings which seem to have reference to earthly happiness, to be "blessed in the city, and blessed in the field;" (29) but we are also promised "a very great reward in heaven," (30) "good measure, pressed down, shaken together, and running over," (31) which, aided by the divine mercy, we merit by our actions when recommended by piety and justice.

A great reward awaits its observance.

(28) Ps. xviii. 12.

(29) Deut. xxviii. 3.

(30) Matt. v. 12.

(31) Luke, vi. 38.

THE FIRST COMMANDMENT.

---

“ I AM THE LORD THY GOD, WHO BROUGHT THEE OUT “ OF THE LAND OF EGYPT, OUT OF THE HOUSE OF “ BONDAGE: THOU SHALT NOT HAVE STRANGE GODS “ BEFORE ME: THOU SHALT NOT MAKE TO THYSELF A “ GRAVEN THING, &c.” (1)

---

The words of the law and the history of the people of Israel to be explained.

THE law announced in the Decalogue, although delivered to the Jews by the Lord from the summit of Sinai, was originally written by the finger of nature on the heart of man, (2) and was therefore, rendered obligatory on mankind at all times by the Author of nature. It will, however, be found very salutary to explain with minute attention the words in which it was proclaimed to the people of Israel by Moses, its minister and interpreter, and to present to the faithful an epitome of the mysterious economy of Providence towards that people.

An epitome of their history.

The pastor will first show, that from amongst the nations of the earth, God chose one which descended from Abraham; that it was the divine will that Abraham should be a stranger in the land of Canaan, the possession of which he had promised him; and that, although for more than forty years he and his posterity were wanderers, before they obtained possession of the land, God withdrew not from them his protecting care. “ They passed from nation to nation and from one kingdom to another people; he suffered no man to hurt them, and he reprov’d kings for their sakes.” (3) Before they went down into Egypt, he sent before them one by whose prudence they and the people of Egypt were rescued from famine. In

(1) Exod. xx. 2.

(2) Rom. i. 19, 20.

(3) Ps. civ. 11.

Egypt such was his paternal kindness towards them, that although opposed by the power of Pharaoh who sought their destruction, they increased to an extraordinary degree; and when severely harassed and cruelly treated as slaves, he raised up Moses as a leader to conduct them from bondage with a strong hand—This their deliverance is particularly referred to in these opening words of the Law; “I am the Lord thy God who brought thee out of the land of Egypt, out of the house of bondage.”

Having premised this brief sketch of the history of the people of Israel, the pastor will not omit to observe, that from amongst the nations of the earth one was chosen by Almighty God whom he called “his people,” and by whom he would be known and worshipped; (4) not that they were superior to other nations in justice or in numbers, and of this God himself reminds them, but because, by the multiplication and aggrandisement of an inconsiderable and impoverished nation, he would display to mankind the extent of his power and the riches of his goodness. Such having been the circumstances of the Jewish nation, “He was closely joined to them, and loved them,” (5) and Lord of heaven and earth as he was, he disdained not to be called “their God.” The other nations were thus to be excited to a holy emulation, that seeing the superior happiness of the Israelites, mankind might embrace the worship of the true God; as S. Paul says that by placing before them the happiness of the Gentiles and the knowledge of the true God, “he provoked to emulation those who were his own flesh.” (6)

The people of Israel, why chosen by God.

The pastor will next inform the faithful that God suffered the Hebrew Fathers to wander for so long a time, and their posterity to be oppressed and harassed by a galling servitude, in order to teach us, that to be friends of God we must be enemies of the world, and pilgrims in this vale of tears; that an entire detachment from the world gives us an easier access to the friendship of God; and

The Israelites why consigned to such trials.

(4) Deut. vii. 6, 7.

(5) Deut. x. 15.

(6) Rom. xi. 14.

that admitted to his friendship we may experience the superior happiness enjoyed by those who serve God rather than the world. This is the solemn admonition of God himself: "yet they shall serve him, that they may know " the difference between my service and the service of " a kingdom of the earth." (7)

The fulfilment of the divine promises why so long deferred.

The pastor will also remind the faithful that God delayed the fulfilment of his promise until after the lapse of more than four hundred years, in order that the Israelites might be sustained by faith and hope; for, as we shall show more particularly when we come to explain the First Commandment, God will have his children center all their hopes and repose all their confidence in his goodness.

The time and place in which the law was delivered why chosen.

Finally, the time and place, when and where the people of Israel received this law, deserve particular attention. They received it when, having been delivered from the bondage of Egypt, they had come into the wilderness; in order, that impressed with a lively sense of gratitude for a blessing still fresh in their recollection, and awed by the dreariness of the wild waste in which they journeyed, they might be the better disposed to receive the law. To those whose bounty we have experienced we are bound by ties of reciprocity; and when man has lost all hope of assistance from his fellow man, he then seeks refuge in the protection of God. We are hence given to understand, that the more detached the faithful are from the allurements of the world, and the pleasures of sense, the more disposed are they to lend a willing ear to the doctrines of salvation: "whom shall he teach knowledge," says Isaias, "and whom shall he make to understand the hearing?" "Them that are weaned from the milk, that are drawn away from the breasts." (8)

Note.

Opening words of the Decalogue.

The pastor, then, will use his best endeavours to induce the faithful to keep continually in view these words, "I am the Lord thy God." From them they will learn

(7) 2 Par. xii. 8.

(8) Isa. xxviii. 9.

that he who is their Creator and conservator, by whom they were made, and are preserved, is also their legislator, and that they may truly say with the Psalmist: "He is the Lord our God, and we are the people of his pasture and the sheep of his hand." (9) The frequent and earnest inculcation of these words will also serve to induce the faithful to a more willing observance of the law, and a more cautious abstinence from sin.

The words, "who brought thee out of the land of Egypt and the house of bondage," come next in order; and, whilst they seem to relate solely to the Jews liberated from the bondage of Egypt, are, if considered in their implicit reference to universal salvation, still more applicable to Christians, who are liberated not from the bondage of Egypt but from the slavery of sin, and "the power of darkness, and are translated into the kingdom of his beloved Son." (10) Contemplating in the vision of prophecy the magnitude of this favour, the prophet Jeremiah exclaims: "behold the days come, saith the Lord, when it shall be said no more: the Lord liveth that brought forth the children of Israel out of the land of Egypt; but the Lord liveth that brought the Children of Israel out of the land of the North and out of all the lands to which I cast them out; and I will bring them again into their land which I gave to their Fathers. Behold, I will send many fishes, saith the Lord, and they shall fish them, &c." (11) Our most indulgent Father has "gathered together" through his beloved Son, his "children that were dispersed," (12) that, "being made free from sin and made the servants of justice," (13) "we may serve before him in holiness and justice all our days." (14) Against every temptation, therefore, the faithful should arm themselves with these words of the Apostle as with a shield: "shall we who are dead to sin live any longer therein?" (15) We are no longer our own: we are his who died and rose

A strong incentive to the love of God.

(9) Ps. xciv. 7. (10) Col. i. 15. (11) Jerem. xvi. 14 & seq.

(12) John xi. 52. (13) Rom. vi. 18. (14) Luke i. 74. 75.

(15) Rom. vi. 2.

again for us: he is the Lord our God who has purchased us for himself at the price of his blood. Shall we then be any longer capable of sinning against the Lord our God, and crucifying him again? Being made truly free, and with that liberty wherewith Christ has made us free, let us, as we heretofore yielded our members to serve injustice, henceforward yield them to serve justice to sanctification.

Division of the Decalogue.

“THOU SHALT NOT HAVE STRANGE GODS BEFORE ME.”]
(16) The Decalogue naturally divides itself into two parts, the first embracing what regards God, the second what regards our neighbour; the duties which we discharge towards our neighbour are referred to God; then only do we fulfil the divine precept which commands us to love our neighbour, when we love him in God. This division of the Decalogue the pastor will make known to the faithful; and he will add that the commandments which regard God, are those which were inscribed on the first table of the law.

This precept commands and prohibits:
what it commands.

He will next show that the words which form the subject matter of the present exposition contain a two-fold precept; the one mandatory, the other prohibitory. When it is said; “Thou shalt not have strange gods before me,” it is equivalent to saying; “thou shalt worship me “the true God: thou shalt not worship strange gods.” The former contains a precept of faith, hope, and charity—of faith, for, acknowledging God to be immoveable, immutable, always the same, faithful, we acknowledge an eternal truth in the recognition of these his attributes: assenting therefore to his oracles, we necessarily yield to him all faith and authority—of hope, for who can contemplate his omnipotence, his clemency, his beneficence, and not repose in him all his hopes?—of charity, for who can behold the riches of his goodness and love, which he lavishes on us with so bounteous a hand, and not love him? with this exalted claim upon our obedience therefore commence, with this conclude all his commandments: “I “am the Lord.”

(16) Exod. xx. 3.

The negative part of the precept is comprised in these words: "thou shalt not have strange gods before me." What it prohibits. This our divine legislator subjoins, not because it is not implied in the positive part of the precept, which says equivalently: "thou shalt worship me the only God," for if he is God, he is the only God; but on account of the blindness of many, who of old professed to worship the true God, and yet adored a multitude of gods. Of these there were many even amongst the Israelites, whom Elias reproached with having "halted between two sides," (17) and also amongst the Samaritans, who worshipped the God of Israel and the gods of the nations. (18)

Having thus explained the precept in its two-fold import, the pastor will observe that this is the first and principal commandment, not only in order, but also in its nature, dignity and excellence. God is entitled to infinitely greater love and to higher authority with regard to his creatures than the masters or monarchs of the earth. He created us, He governs us, He nurtured us even in the womb, brought us into existence, and still supplies us by his provident care with all the necessaries of life. This first commandment of superior importance to the rest. Against this commandment therefore transgress all who have not faith, hope, and charity; a numerous class, amongst whom are those who fall into heresy, who reject what the church of God teaches; those who give credit to dreams, divination, fortunetelling, and such superstitious illusions; those who despairing of salvation trust not in the goodness of God; and also those who place their happiness solely in the wealth of this world, in health and strength, in personal attractions, or mental endowments.—But these are matters which the pastor will find developed more at large in treatises on morality. (19) How violated.

(17) 3 Kings xviii. 21.

(18) 4 Kings xvii. 33.

(19) De variis istis peccatis vide dist. 24. q. 2. multis in capitibus. Aug. in lib. de divinat. dæmon. cap. 5. & citatur 26. q. 4. a. secundum. Origen. hom. 5. in Joshue et habet 26. q. 2. c. sed et illud Aug. lib. 2. de doct. Christian. cap. 19. and 20. & citatur eodem cap. illud quod est, Conc. Carth. 4. cap. 19. vid. plura 26. q. 2. 5 & 5.

ON THE HONOR AND INVOCATION OF THE SAINTS

The honor and invocation of the saints not prohibited by this commandment.

IN the exposition of this precept, the faithful are also to be accurately taught that the veneration and invocation of angels and saints, who enjoy the glory of heaven and the honor which the Catholic Church has always paid even to the bodies and ashes of the saints, are not forbidden by this commandment. (20) Were a king to prohibit by proclamation any individual to assume the regal character or accept the honors due to the royal person, how unreasonable to infer from such an edict a prohibition that suitable honor and respect should be paid to his magistrates? Of this nature is the relative honor paid by the Catholic Church to angels and saints. When walking in the footsteps of those exalted characters, whose names are recorded in the Old Testament, she is said "to adore the angels of God," she venerates them as the special friends and servants of God, but gives not to them the supreme honor which is due to God alone.

Angels refused to be worshipped by men, on what occasions. To be honored,

True, we sometimes read that angels refused to be worshipped by men; (21) but the worship which they refused to accept was the supreme honor due to God alone: the Holy Spirit who says: "Honor and glory to God alone," (22) commands us also to honor our parents and elders (23) and the holy men, who adored one God only, are also said in Scripture to have "adored," that is supplicated and venerated, kings. If then kings, by whose agency

(20) Vid. Trid. sess. 17. de Sacrif. Missæ. c. 3. et sess. 25. sub principio. cap. de invocat. Sanctorum. Item vid Synod. 7. act. 6. in fine. item Aug. lib. 8. de civit. Dei. c. 27. & l. 10. c. 1. & lib. 21. contra Faust. c. 21. Basil. Hom. 20. in 40. Mar. & 26. de Mar. Mamman: item Nazian. orat. in laud. S. Cyprian.

(21) Apoc. xix. 10. Apoc. xxii. 9.

(22) 1 Tim. i. 17. Exod. xx. 2. Levit. xix. 11.

(23) Deut. v. 16.

God governs the world, are so highly honored, (24) shall it be deemed unlawful to honor those angelic spirits, whom God has been pleased to constitute his ministers, whose services he makes use of not only in the government of his Church, but also of the Universe, by whose invisible aid we are every day delivered from the greatest dangers of soul and body? Are they not, rather, to be honored with a veneration greater, in proportion as the dignity of these blessed spirits exceeds that of kings? Another claim on our veneration is their love of us, which, as the Scripture informs us, (25) prompts them to pour out their prayers for those countries over which they are placed by Providence, and for us whose guardians they are, and whose prayers and tears they present before the throne of God. (26) Hence our Lord admonishes us in the Gospel not to offend the little ones, "because their angels in heaven always see the face of their Father who is in heaven." (27) Their intercession, therefore, we invoke, because they always see the face of God, and are constituted by him the willing advocates of our salvation. To this their invocation the Scriptures bear testimony—Jacob invoked, nay compelled, the angel with whom he wrestled, to bless him, (28) declaring that he would not let him go until he had blessed him; and not only did he invoke the blessing of the angel whom he saw, but also of him whom he saw not: "The angel," says he, "who delivered me out of all evil, bless these children." (29) and invoked.

From these attestations we are justified in concluding, that to honor the saints "who sleep in the Lord," to invoke their intercession, and to venerate their sacred relics and ashes, far from diminishing, tends considerably to increase the glory of God, in proportion as the Christian's hope is thus animated and fortified, and he himself excited to the imitation of their virtues. This is a doctrine which

To honor the saints does not detract from, but adds to the honor due to God.

(24) Gen. xxiii. 7. 2. Kings xxiv. 20. 1. Par. 29. 20.

(25) Dan. x. 13. (26) Tob. xii. 12. Apoc. viii. 5.

(27) Matt. xviii. 10. (28) Gen. xxxii. 26. Osee, xii. 4.

(29) Gen. xlviii. 16.

The Councils. is also supported by the authority of the second Council of Nice, (30) the Council of Gangre, (31) and of Trent, (32)

The fathers. and by the testimony of the Holy Fathers. (33) In order however that the pastor may be the better prepared to meet the objections of those who impugn this doctrine, he will consult particularly S. Jerome against Vigilantius, and the fourth book, sixteenth chapter of Damascene on the orthodox faith; (34) and what, if possible, is still more conclusive, he will appeal to the uniform practice of Christians, as handed down by the Apostles and faithfully preserved in the Church of God. (35) But what argument more convincing, than that which is supplied by the admirable praises given in scripture to the saints of God! If the inspired Volume celebrates the praises of particular saints, why question for a moment the propriety of paying them the same tribute of praise and veneration? (36)

Apostolic tradition. Another claim which the saints have to be honored and invoked is, that they earnestly importune God for our salvation, and obtain for us by their intercession many favours and blessings. If there is joy in heaven for the conversion of one sinner, (37) can the citizens of heaven be indifferent to his conversion, or neglect to assist him by their prayers? When their interposition is solicited by the penitent, will they not rather implore the pardon of Scripture. his sins, and the grace of his conversion? Should it be said that their patronage is unnecessary, because God hears our prayers without the intervention of a mediator, the objection is at once met by the observation

The saints assist us by their prayers.

Objection.

(30) Nicæn. Conc. 2. act. 6.

(31) Gangr. Can. xx. &amp; citatur dist. 30. cap. si quis per superbiam.

(32) Trid. sess. 25. item Conc. Chalced. sub finem &amp; in 6. Synod. General. c. 7. &amp; Conc. Geron. c. 3. Aurel. 1. c. 29.

(33) Damasc. de orth. fid. l. 4. c. 6.

(34) Lib. 4. de orth. fid. c. 16.

(35) Dionys. c. 7. Hier. Eccles. Iren l. 5. contra hæres. c. 19. Athan. serm. in Evangel. de sancta Deip. Euseb. l. 13. præpar. Evang. c. 7. Cornel. pap. epist. 1. Hilar. in Ps. 126. Ambr. in lib. de viduis.

(36) Eccl. xliv. xlv. xlvii. xlviii. xlix. l. Hebr. xi.

(37) Luke xv. 7. 10

of S. Augustine: "There are many things," says he, Answer.
 "which God does not grant without a mediator and "intercessor:" (38) an observation the justness of which is confirmed by two illustrious examples—Abimelech and the friends of Job were pardoned but through the prayers of Abraham and of Job. (39) Should it be alleged, that to recur to the patronage and intercession of the saints argues want or weakness of faith, the answer of the Cen-turion refutes the allegation: his faith was highly eulogised by our Lord himself; and yet he sent to the Redeemer "the Ancients of the Jews," to intercede with him to heal his servant. (40)

True, there is but one Mediator, Christ the Lord, who Objection.
 alone has reconciled us through his blood, (41) and who, having accomplished our redemption, and having once entered into the Holy of Holies, ceases not to intercede for us; (42) but it by no means follows, that it is therefore Answer.
 unlawful to have recourse to the intercession of the saints.

If, because we have one mediator Christ Jesus, it were unlawful to ask the intercession of the saints, the Apostle would not have recommended himself with so much earnestness to the prayers of his brethren on earth. (43)
 In his capacity as Mediator, the prayers of the living should derogate from the glory and dignity of Christ not less than the intercession of the saints in heaven.

But what incredulity so obstinate but must yield to the The invoevidence in support of the honor and invocation of the cation of saints, which the wonders wrought at their tombs flash saints pro-upon the mind? The blind see, the lame walk, the paral- ved by the ysed are invigorated, the dead raised to life, and evil de- miracles mons are expelled from the bodies of men! These are wrought at authentic facts, attested not, as frequently happens, by their tombs, very grave persons who have heard them from others;
 they are facts which rest on the ocular attestation of wit-

(38) Aug. quæst. 149. super Exod. serm. 2. & 4. de S. Steph.

(39) Gen. xx. (40) Matt. viii. 5. Luke vii. 3. (41) 1 Tim. ii. 5.

(42) Heb. ix. 12 & 7. 25. (43) Rom. xv. 30. Heb. xiii. 18.

and confirmed by the efficacy of relics.

nesses, whose veracity is beyond all question, of an Ambrrose, (44) and an Augustine. (45) But why multiply proofs on this head? If the clothes, the kerchiefs, (46) and even the very shadows of the saints, whilst yet on earth, banished disease and restored health and vigor, who will have the hardihood to deny that God can still work the same wonders by the holy ashes, the bones, and other relics of his saints who are in glory? Of this we have a proof in the resuscitation of the dead body which was let down into the grave of Eliseus, and which, on touching the body of the prophet, was instantly restored to life. (47)

“THOU SHALT NOT MAKE TO THYSELF A GRAVEN THING, “NOR THE LIKENESS OF ANY THING THAT IS IN HEAVEN “ABOVE, OR IN THE EARTH BENEATH, NOR OF THOSE “THINGS THAT ARE IN THE WATERS UNDER THE EARTH:
“THOU SHALT NOT ADORE THEM NOR SERVE THEM.” (48)

These words do not contain a distinct precept.

Some, supposing these words to constitute a distinct precept, reduce the ninth and tenth commandments into one. S. Augustine holds a different opinion: considering the two last to be distinct, he refers these words to the first commandment; (49) and this division, because well known and much approved in the Catholic church, we willingly adopt. As a very strong argument in its favour, we may, however, add the propriety of annexing to the first commandment its sanction, the rewards or punishments attached to its observance or violation; a propriety which can be preserved in the arrangement alone which we have chosen.

Do not prohibit the use of images.

This commandment does not prohibit the arts of painting or sculpture: the Scriptures inform us that God himself commanded images of Cherubim, (50) and also the

(44) Ambr. epist. 85. & serm. 95.

(45) Aug de civit. Dei, lib. 22. c. 8. & epist. 137.

(46) Acts v. xix. 12 & 5. 15. (47) 4 Kings xiii. 21. (48) Exod. xx. 4.

(49) Vid. Aug. super Exod. quæst. 71. and in Ps. 32. serm. 2. Sententia D. Aug. de præceptorum distinctione magis placet Ecclesiæ Vid. D. Thom. i. 2. quæst. 100. art. 4. (50) Exod. xxv. 18. 3 Kings. vi. 27.

brazen serpent (51) to be made; and the conclusion, therefore, at which we must arrive, is that images are prohibited only in as much as they may be the means of transferring the worship of God to inanimate objects, as though the adoration offered them were given to so many Gods.

By the violation of this commandment the majesty of God is grievously offended in a two-fold manner: <sup>Prohibit two things.</sup> the one, by worshipping idols and images as gods, or believing that they possess any divinity or virtue entitling them to our worship, by praying to or reposing confidence in them, as the Gentiles did, who placed their hopes in idols, and whose idolatry the Scriptures universally reprobate: the other, by attempting to form a representation of the Deity, as if he were visible to mortal eyes, or could be represented by the pencil of the painter or the chisel of the statuary. "Who," says Damascene, "can represent God, invisible, as he is, incorporeal, uncircumscribed by limits, and incapable of being described under any figure or form?" (52) This subject, however, the pastor will find treated more at large in the second Council of Nice. (53) Speaking of the Gentiles the Apostle has these admirable words: "They changed the glory of the incorruptible God into a likeness of the image of a corruptible man, and of birds, and of four-footed beasts, and of creeping things." (54) Hence the Israelites, when they exclaimed before the molten calf: "These are thy Gods, O Israel, that have brought thee out of the land of Egypt," (55) are denounced as idolators; because "they changed their glory into the likeness of a calf that eateth grass." (56)

When, therefore, the Almighty forbids the worship of <sup>Their meaning.</sup> strange gods, with a view to the utter extinction of all idolatry he also prohibits the formation of an image of the Deity from brass or other materials, as Isaias declares

(51) Num. xxi. 8, 9.

(52) Damas. l. 4. de ortrod. fid. c. 17.

(53) Conc. Nicæn. 2. act. 3.

(54) Rom. i. 23. (55) Exod. xxxii. 4.

(56) Ps. cv. 20.

when he asks: "To whom then have you likened God, "or what image will you make for him?" (57) That this is the meaning of the prohibitory part of the precept is proved, not only from the writings of the Holy Fathers who, as may be seen in the seventh General Council, give to it this interpretation; but also from these words of Deuteronomy, by which Moses sought to withdraw the Israelites from the worship of idols: "You saw not," says he, "any similitude in the day that the Lord God spoke "to you in Horeb, from the midst of the fire." (58) These words this wisest of legislators addressed to the people of Israel, lest, through error of any sort, they should make an image of the Deity, and transfer to any thing created, the honor due to God alone.

To represent any of the Persons of the Trinity under certain forms, not prohibited.

To represent the Persons of the Holy Trinity by certain forms, under which, as we read in the Old and New Testaments, they deigned to appear, is not to be deemed contrary to religion, or the Law of God. Who so ignorant as to believe that such forms are express images of the Deity?—forms, as the pastor will teach, which only express some attribute or action ascribed to God. Thus, Daniel describes "The Ancient of Days, seated on a throne, "and before him the books opened;" to signify his eternity and wisdom, by which he sees and judges all the thoughts and actions of men. (59) Angels, also, are represented under human form and winged, to give us to understand that they are actuated by benevolent feelings towards us, and are always prepared to execute the ministry of God to man: "They are all ministering spirits, "sent to minister for them, who shall receive the inheritance of salvation." (60) That attributes of the Holy Ghost are represented under the forms of a dove, and of tongues of fire, as we read in the Gospel (61) and in the Acts of the Apostles, (62) is a matter too well known to require lengthened exposition.

The same doctrine true with regard to angels;

Forms which represent the Holy Ghost;

(57) Isa. xl. 18. Acts vii. 40. (58) Deut. iv. 15. 16. (59) Dan. vii. 13. (60) Heb. i. 14. (61) Matt. iii. 16. Mark, i. 10. Luke, iii. 22. John, i. 32. (62) Acts, ii. 3.

But to make and honor the images of our Lord, of his <sup>the Saints,</sup> holy and virginal mother, and of the saints, all of whom <sup>and also the Redeemer.</sup> appeared in human form, is not only not forbidden by this commandment, but has always been deemed a holy practice, and the surest indication of a mind deeply impressed with gratitude towards them. This position derives confirmation from the monuments of the Apostolic age, the General Councils of the Church, and the writings of so many amongst the Fathers, eminent alike for sanctity and learning, all of whom are of one accord upon the subject. But the pastor will not content himself with shewing the lawfulness of the use of images in churches, and of paying them religious respect, when this respect is referred to their prototypes—he will do more—he will show that the uninterrupted observance of this practice up to the present time has been attended with great advantage to the faithful; as may be seen in the work of Damascene on images, (63) and in the seventh General Council, which is the second of Nice. (64)

But as the enemy of mankind, by his wiles and deceits, <sup>The lawful use of images.</sup> seeks to pervert even the most holy institutions, should the faithful happen at all to offend in this particular, the pastor, in accordance with the decree of the Council of Trent, will use every exertion in his power to correct such an abuse, and, if necessary, explain the decree itself to the people. He will also inform the ulettered, and those who may be ignorant of the proper use of images, that they are intended to instruct in the history of the Old and

(63) Lib. 4. de fid. orthod. cap. 17. (64) Nic. Syn. passim.

(65) Trid. Con. Sess. 25.

(66) De cultu & usu imaginum vid. Concil. Nicæn. 1. act. 7. Histor. tripart. lib. 6. c. 41. Eus. l. 8. Hist. Eccl. c. 14. Cyril. l. 6. contr. Jul. Aug. l. 1. de consensu Evang. c. 10. vid. item. sextam Synod. can. 82. & Conc. Rom. sub. Greg. III. & Cone. Gentiliac. Item et aliud Rom. sub Stephano III. Vid. etiam lib. de Rom. Pontif. in vita Sylvestri. Item Lactant. carm. de pass. Dom. Bæil orat. in S. Barlaham, Greg. Nyss. orat. in Theod. Prud. Hym. de S. Cas. & bym. de S. Hippolyt. Item apud Baron. Annal. Eccles. an. 57. num. 116. et deinceps. vid. iterum Aug. contra Faust. l. 22. c. 75.

New Testaments, and to revive the recollection of the events which they record; that thus excited to the contemplation of heavenly things we may be the more ardently inflamed to adore and love God. He will, also, inform the faithful that the images of the saints are placed in churches, not only to be honored, but that, also, admonished by their example, we may imitate their lives and emulate their virtues.

“I AM THE LORD THY GOD, MIGHTY, JEALOUS, VISITING “THE INIQUITY OF THE FATHERS UPON THE CHILDREN “TO THE THIRD AND FOURTH GENERATION OF THEM “THAT HATE ME, AND SHEWING MERCY UNTO THOU-“SANDS TO THEM THAT LOVE ME, AND KEEP MY COM-“MANDMENTS.”] In this concluding clause of the first com-

In these concluding words, two things demand explanation.

I.

The first is, that whilst, on account of the enormous guilt incurred by the violation of the first commandment, and the propensity of man towards its violation, the punishment is here properly proposed; it is also appended to all the other commandments. Every law enforces its observance by some sanction, by rewards and punishments; and hence the frequent and numerous promises of God, which are recorded in Scripture. To omit those which we meet almost in every page of the Old Testament, we read in the Gospel: “If thou wilt enter into life, keep the commandments;” (67) and again: “He that doth the will of my Father who is in heaven, he shall enter heaven;” (68) and also: “Every tree that doth not yield good fruit shall be cut down and cast into the fire;” (69) “Whosoever is angry with his brother shall be guilty of the judgment;” (70) “If you will not forgive men, neither will your Father forgive you your offences.” (71)

II.

The other observation is, that this divine sanction is to be proposed in a very different manner to the spiritual and to the carnal Christian: to the spiritual who is animated by the Spirit of God, (72) and who yields to him a willing and chearful obedience, it is, in some sort, glad tidings, and a strong proof of the divine goodness: in it he recognises the parental care of a most loving God, who, now by rewards, again by punishments, almost compels his creatures to adore and worship him. The spiritual man acknowledges the infinite goodness of God in vouchsafing to issue his commands to him, and to make use of his service to the glory of the divine name; and not only does he acknowledge the divine goodness, he also cherishes a strong hope that, when God commands what he pleases, he will also give strength to fulfil what he commands. But to the carnal man, who is not yet disenthralled from the spirit of servitude, and who abstains from sin more through fear of punishment than love of virtue, this sanction of the divine Law, which closes each of the commandments, is burdensome and severe. He is, therefore, to be supported by pious exhortation, and to be led, as it were, by the hand, in the path pointed out by the Law of God. These two classes of persons the pastor, therefore, will keep in view, as often as he has occasion to explain any of the commandments.

(67) Matt. xix. 17. (68) Matt. vii. 21. (69) Matt. iii. 10. & vii. 19.

(70) Matt. v. 23. (71) Matt. vi. 15.

The carnal and spiritual are, however, to be excited by two considerations, which are contained in this concluding clause, and are well calculated to enforce obedience to the divine Law. The one is, that when God is called "The Strong," the force of that appellation requires to be fully expounded to the faithful; because, unappalled by the terrors of the divine menaces, the flesh frequently indulges in the delusive expectation of escaping, in a variety of ways, the wrath of God and his menaced judgments. But, when deeply impressed with the awful conviction that God is "The Strong," the sinner will exclaim with David: "Whither shall I go from thy spirit? or whither shall I

They also contain two arguments for the observance of the Law.

I.

(72) Rom. viii. 14.

“flee from thy face?” (73) The flesh, also, distrusting the promises of God, sometimes magnifies the power of the enemy to such an extent, as to believe itself unable to withstand his assaults; whilst on the contrary, a firm and unshaken faith, which relies confidently on the strength and power of God, animates and confirms the hopes of man: it exclaims with the Psalmist: “The Lord is my “light and my salvation; whom shall I fear?” (74)

II. The second consideration is the jealousy of God.—Man is sometimes tempted to think, that God, indifferent whether we condemn or observe his Law, takes no concern in human affairs, an error which is the source of the greatest disorders; but when we believe that God is a jealous God, the reflection tends powerfully to restrain us within the limits of our duty towards him. The jealousy attributed to God does not, however, imply agitation of mind: it is that divine love and charity by which God will suffer no human creature to resist his sovereign will with impunity, and which “destroys all those who are disloyal to him.” (75) The jealousy of God therefore is the most impartial justice, the calmness of which is undisturbed by the least commotion, a justice which repudiates as an adulteress the soul which is corrupted by erroneous opinions and criminal passions; and in this jealousy of God, evincing as it does his boundless and incomprehensible goodness towards us, we recognise at once a source of pure and unmixed pleasure. It declares that the soul is his spouse, and what stronger tie of affection, or closer bond of union can bind him to us? God, therefore, when, frequently comparing himself to a spouse or husband, he calls himself a jealous God, demonstrates the excess of his love towards us.

Zeal in the service of God.

The pastor, therefore will here exhort the faithful, that they should be so warmly interested in promoting the worship and honor of God, as to be said with more propriety to be jealous of, rather than to love him; imitating the

(73) Ps. cxxxviii. 7. (74) Ps. xxvi. 1. (75) Ps. lxvii. 27.

example of Elias, who says of himself: "With zeal have I been zealous for the Lord God of Hosts;" (76) or rather of Jesus Christ himself, who says: "The zeal of thy house hath eaten me up." (77)

The pastor should also set forth the terrors denounced in the menaces of God's judgments—menaces which declare that he will not suffer sinners to run their iniquitous career with impunity; but will chastise them with the fondness of a parent, or punish them with the rigour of a judge; and which, on another occasion, are thus expressed by Moses: "Thou shalt know that the Lord thy God is a strong and faithful God, keeping his covenant and mercy to them that love him, and to them that keep his commandments, unto a thousand generations; and repaying forthwith them that hate him, so as to destroy them without further delay, immediately rendering to them what they deserve." (78) "You will not," says Josue, "be able to serve the Lord; for he is a holy God, and mighty and jealous, and will not forgive your wickedness and sins. If you leave the Lord and serve strange gods, he will turn and will afflict you, and will destroy you." (79) The faithful are also to be taught, that the punishments here threatened await the third and fourth generation of the impious and wicked; not that the children are always visited with the chastisements due to the delinquency of their parents, but that, although they and their children may go unpunished, their posterity shall not all escape the wrath and vengeance of the Almighty. Of this we have an illustration in the life of king Josias: God had spared him for his singular piety, and allowed him to be gathered to the tomb of his fathers in peace, that his eyes might not behold the evils of the times that were to befall Judah and Jerusalem, on account of the wickedness of his father Manassch; yet, after his decease,

The Law not to be violated with impunity.

Note.

(76) 3 Kings, xix. 10.
(78) Deut. vii. 9, 10.

(77) Ps. lxxviii. 10.—John, ii. 17.
(79) Josue, xxiv. 19, 20.

the divine vengeance so overtook his posterity, that even the children of Josias were not spared. (80)

An apparent contradiction reconciled.

The words of this commandment may perhaps seem to be at variance with the sentence pronounced by the prophet: "The soul that sins shall die;" (81) but the authority of S. Gregory, supported by the concurrent testimony of all the ancient fathers, satisfactorily reconciles this apparent contradiction: "Whoever," says he, "follows the bad example of a wicked father is also bound by his sins; but he, who does not follow the example of a wicked father, shall not at all suffer for the sins of the father. Hence it follows that a wicked son, who dreads not to superadd his own malice to the vices of his father, by which he knows the divine wrath to have been excited, is burdened not only with his own additional sins, but also with those of his wicked father—It is just that he who dreads not to walk in the footsteps of a wicked father, in presence of a rigorous judge, should be subjected in the present life to the punishment invoked by the crimes of his wicked parent." (82)

The mercy of God exceeds his justice.

That the goodness and mercy of God far exceed his justice is another observation, which the pastor will not fail to make to the faithful: he is angry to the third and fourth generation; but he bestows his mercy on thousands.

The wicked hate God.

The words: "Of them that hate me" display the grievousness of sin: what more wicked? what more detestable than to hate God, the supreme goodness and sovereign truth? This, however, is the crime of all sinners; for

The good are influenced by love in the observance of his Law.

as he who observes the commandments of God, loves God, (83) so he who despises his Law, and violates his commandments, is justly said to hate God. The concluding words: "And them that love me," point out the manner and motive of observing the Law of God: those who

(80) 2 Par. 36. iii. 6.—4 Kings, xxii. 20. (81) Ezech. xviii. 4.

(82) Extat locus Greg. lib. 15. moral. c. 31. Vid. Aug. epist. 75. D. Thom. 1. 2. q. 87. art. 8,

(83) John, xiv. 21.

observe the divine Law should be influenced in its observance by the same love and charity which they bear to God; a principle which applies with equal force and truth to the exposition and observance of all the other commandments.

---

THE SECOND COMMANDMENT.

---

“THOU SHALT NOT TAKE THE NAME OF THE LORD THY “GOD IN VAIN.” (1)

THIS precept is necessarily comprised in the former, which commands us to worship God in piety and holiness: He who is to be honored must also be spoken of with reverence and must forbid the contrary, according to these words of Malachy: “The son honoreth the father, and the servant his master: if then I be a Father, where is my honor?” (2) Yet, on account of the importance of the obligation which it imposes, God would make this law which commands his name to be honored, a distinct precept; and this he does in the clearest and simplest terms. This observation must have much influence in convincing the pastor, that on this point it is not enough to speak in general terms; that its importance is such as to require to be dwelt upon at considerable length, and to be explained to the faithful in all its bearings with distinctness, clearness, and accuracy. (3)

This commandment, why distinct from the first.

This assiduity on the part of the pastor cannot be deemed superfluous: there are not wanting those who are so Demands assiduous exposition.

(1) Exod. xx. 7.

(2) Malach. i. 6.

(3) De hoc precepto vid. D. Thom. 2. 2. q. 122. art. 3. item & 1. 2. q. 100. art. 5.

blinded by the darkness of error as not to dread to blaspheme his name, whom the angels glorify; and who are not deterred by the divine commandment from shamefully and daringly outraging his divine majesty, every day, or rather every hour and moment of the day. Who is ignorant that every assertion is accompanied with an oath? that every conversation teems with curses and imprecations? To such lengths has this impiety been carried, that one scarcely buys, or sells, or transacts ordinary business of any sort, without interposing the solemn pledge of an oath, and, even in matters the most unimportant and trivial, thousands of times rashly appealing to the most holy name of God! It therefore becomes more imperative on the pastor, not to neglect, carefully and frequently, to admonish the faithful of the grievousness and horror of this detestable crime.

Contains a negative and a positive precept.

But in the exposition of this commandment, the pastor will show, that, besides a negative, it also contains a positive precept commanding the performance of a duty, and will give to each a separate exposition.—In the first place, to facilitate the explanation of these matters, it is necessary to know what the precept commands, and what it prohibits. It commands us to honor the name of God, and when solemnly appealing to him by an oath, to do so with due reverence: it prohibits us to contemn the divine name, to take it in vain, or swear by it falsely, unnecessarily, or rashly. When therefore we are commanded to honor the name of God, the command, as the pastor will show, is not directed to the letters or syllables of which that name is composed, or in any respect to the mere name; but to the import of a word used to express the Omnipotent and Eternal Majesty of the Godhead, Trinity in unity. Hence we at once perceive the superstition of those amongst the Jews who, whilst they hesitated not to write, dared not to pronounce the name of God, as if the divine power consisted in the letters of which it is composed, and not in their signification.

Note.

In the annunciation of the divine precept, the word "name," although occurring in the singular number, "Thou shalt not take the name of God," is not to be understood to refer to any one name in particular: it extends to every name by which God is generally designated. He is called by many names, such as "the Lord," "the Almighty," "the Lord of Hosts," "the King of Kings," "the Strong," and by others of similar import, which we meet in Scripture; all of which are entitled to the same veneration.

The commandment refers to every name by which God is designated.

The pastor will also teach how the name of God is to be honored. Christians, whose tongues should every day celebrate the divine praises, are not to be ignorant of a matter so important, indeed so necessary to salvation. The name of God may be honored in a variety of ways; but all seem to be included under the following heads.— His name is honored, when we openly and confidently confess him to be our Lord and our God; and not only acknowledge but proclaim Christ to be the author of our salvation. It is also honored when we pay a religious attention to his Word, which announces to us his sovereign will; make it the subject of our daily meditation; and by reading or hearing it, study, according to our respective capacities and conditions of life, to become acquainted with its saving truths. Again, we honor and venerate the name of God, when from a sense of religious duty we celebrate his praises, and under all circumstances, whether prosperous or adverse, return him unbounded thanks; saying in the language of the prophet: "Bless the Lord, O my soul, and never forget all he hath done for thee." (4) Amongst the Psalms of David we have many, in which, animated with singular piety towards God, the Psalmist chants in sweetest strains the divine praises. We have also the admirable example of Job, who, when visited with the heaviest and most appalling calamities, never ceased, with lofty and unconquered soul, to give praise to God. When, therefore, we labour

The name of God, how honored.

I.

II.

III.

(4) Ps. ciii. 1.

under affliction of mind or body; when oppressed by misery and misfortune; let us instantly direct all our thoughts, and all the powers of our souls, to the praises of God, saying with Job: "Blessed be the name of the Lord." (5) The name of God is not less honored when we confidently invoke his assistance, either to relieve us from our afflictions, or to give us constancy and strength to endure them with fortitude. This is in accordance with his own wishes: "Call upon me," says he, "in the day of trouble: I will deliver thee, and thou shalt glorify me;" (6) and we have illustrious examples of such supplications in the sixteenth, forty third, and one hundred and eighteenth Psalms, and also in many other parts of Scripture.—Finally, we honor the name of God, when we solemnly call upon him to witness the truth of what we assert; and this solemn appeal differs much from the means of honoring the divine name already enumerated. Those means are in their own nature so good, so desirable, that our lives, day and night, could not be more happily or more holily spent than in such practices of piety: "I will bless the Lord," says David, "at all times, his praise shall be always in my mouth:" (7) but with regard to oaths, although in themselves lawful, they should seldom be used. The reason of this difference is, that oaths are constituted as remedies to human frailty, and a necessary means of establishing the truth of what we advance. As it is inexpedient to have recourse to medicine, unless when it becomes necessary, and as its frequent use is most pernicious; so, with regard to oaths, we should never recur to them, unless when there is weighty and just cause; and a frequent recurrence to them, far from being advantageous, is on the contrary highly prejudicial. Hence the excellent observation of S. Chrysostome: "Oaths were introduced amongst men, not at the beginning of the world but long after; when vice had overspread the earth; when the moral world was convulsed to its centre,

Oaths should seldom be taken.

(5) Job. i. 21.

(6) Ps. xlix. 15.

(7) Ps. xxxiii. 2.

and universal confusion reigned throughout; when, to complete the picture of human depravity, man debased the dignity of his nature by prostrating himself in degrading servitude to idols: then it was that God was appealed to as a witness of the truth, when, considering to what a height perfidy and wickedness had risen, it was with difficulty that man could be induced to credit the assertion of his fellow-man." (8)

But as in explaining this part of the commandment our chief object is, to teach the faithful the conditions necessary to render an oath reverential and holy, it is first to be observed, that to swear, whatever the form of the oath may be, is nothing else than to call God to witness: to say "God is my witness," and to swear by his holy name, are exactly the same. To swear by creatures, in order to gain credit for what we say, is an oath: to swear by the holy Gospels, by the cross, by the names or relics of the saints, and all such solemn attestations, are also oaths. Of themselves, it is true, such objects give no weight or authority to an oath: it derives its obligation from God, whose divine majesty shines forth in them: and hence to swear by the Gospel is to swear by God himself, whose revealed word it is. This holds equally true with regard to those who swear by the saints, who are the temples of God, who believed the truth of his Gospel, were faithful to its dictates, and diffused its doctrines amongst the remotest nations of the earth. This is also true of oaths uttered by way of execration, such as that of St. Paul: "I call God to witness upon my soul:" (9) by this form of oath we subject ourselves to God as the avenger of falshood. We do not, however, deny that some of these forms may be used without constituting an oath; but even in such cases it will be found useful to observe what has been said with regard to an oath, and to direct and regulate such forms by the same rule and standard.

Oaths are of two kinds, affirmatory and promissory: an are all the various sorts of oaths

Different sorts of oaths.
 I.

II.

III.

(8) Ad. pop. Antioch. hom. 26.

(9) 2 Cor. i. 23.

Oaths are affirmatory and promissory.

oath is affirmatory when, under its solemn sanction, we affirm any thing, past, present, or to come; such as the affirmation of the Apostle in his Epistle to the Galatians: "Behold! before God, I lie not." (10) An oath is promissory when we promise the certain performance of any thing; such as that of David, who swore to Bethsabee his wife, by the Lord his God, that Solomon should be heir to his kingdom and successor to his throne; (11) and this class of oaths also includes comminations.

Conditions of a lawful oath.

But although to constitute an oath it is sufficient to call God to witness, yet to constitute a holy and just oath many other conditions are required; and these it is the duty of the paster carefully to explain. The other conditions, as S. Jerome observes, (12) are briefly enumerated in these words of the prophet Jeremiah: "Thou shalt swear: as the Lord liveth, in truth and in judgment, and in justice;" (13) words which briefly sum up all the conditions, which constitute the perfection of an oath—truth, judgment, justice.

Truth.

Truth, then, holds the first place in an oath: what we swear must be true; that is, he who swears must believe what he swears to be true, founding his conviction not upon rash grounds or vain conjecture, but upon motives of undoubted credibility. Truth is a condition not less necessary as is obvious, in a promissory than in an affirmatory oath: he who promises must be disposed to perform and fulfil his promise at the appointed time. As no conscientious man will promise to do what he considers to be a violation of the commandments, and in opposition to the will of God; so, having promised and sworn to do what is lawful he will adhere with fidelity to the sacred and solemn engagement; unless, perhaps, change of circumstances should so alter the complexion of the case, that he could not stand to his promise without incurring the displeasure and enmity of God. That truth is necessary to a lawful

(10) Gal. i. 20. (11) 3 Kings, i. 17. (12) S. Hieron. in hunc locum

(13) Jerem. iv. 2.

oath David also declares, when, having asked who is worthy to sit in the tabernacle of the Most High, he answers: "He that sweareth to his neighbour, and deceiveth not." (14)

The second condition is judgment: an oath is not to be taken rashly and inconsiderately, but after mature deliberation and calm reflection. When about to take an oath, therefore, we should first consider whether it be or be not necessary; and whether the case, if well weighed in all its circumstances, be of sufficient importance to demand an oath. Many other circumstances of time, place, &c. are also to be taken into consideration; and in taking an oath we should never be influenced by love or hatred or any other passion, but by the nature and necessity of the case. Without this calm and dispassionate consideration, an oath must be rash and hasty; and of this character are the irreligious affirmations of those, who, on the most unimportant and trifling occasions, swear from the influence of bad habit alone. This criminal abuse is but too prevalent amongst buyers and sellers, of whom the latter, to sell at the highest price, the former to purchase at the cheapest rate, make no scruple to strengthen with an oath, their praise or dispraise of the goods in question. Judgment and prudence therefore are necessary, and hence Pope Gelasius, a pontiff of eminent piety, decreed that an oath should not be administered to children before their fourteenth year, because before that period their tender age is incompetent to perceive so acutely, and to balance so accurately, the nice distinctions of things.

The third and last condition of an oath is justice; a condition which in promissory oaths demands particular attention. Hence, if a person swear to do what is unjust or unlawful, he sins by taking the oath, and adds sin to sin by executing his promise. Of this the Gospel supplies an example. Herod bound himself by oath to grant the request of Herodias, as a reward for the pleasure which she

(14) Ps. xiv. 4.

afforded him by dancing : she demanded the head of John the baptist ; and Herod criminally adhered to the rash oath which he had sworn. (15) Such was also the oath taken by the Jews, who, as we read in the Acts of the Apostles, bound themselves by oath not to eat, until they had shed the blood of Paul. (16)

An oath accompanied with these conditions, lawful.

- I. An oath therefore accompanied, and guarded as it were by these conditions, is no doubt lawful, a position which is easily and satisfactorily established. The law of God, the purity and sanctity of which will not be questioned, (17) not only permits but commands such an oath to be taken : “ Thou shalt fear the Lord thy God,” says Moses, “ and shalt serve him only, and thou shalt swear
- II. “ by his name :” (18) “ All they” says David, “ shall be
- III. “ praised that swear by him.” (19) The inspired Volume also informs us, that the Apostles, whose bright example it cannot be unlawful for Christians to follow, sometimes made use of oaths : they are recorded in the Epistles of S. Paul. (20) Even the angels have sometimes sworn : “ The
- IV. “ angel,” says S. John in his Apocalypse, “ swore by him who lives for ever.” (21) In fine, God himself, the Lord of angels, has sworn, and, as we read in many passages of the Old Testament, has confirmed his promises with an oath. This he did to Abraham and to David ; (22) and of the oath sworn by the Almighty David says : “ The
- V. “ Lord hath sworn, and he will not repent : thou art a “ priest for ever according to the order of Melchisedech.” (23)
- VI. To him who considers the matter attentively and in all its bearings, its origin and its end, it can be no difficult matter to explain the reasons why the taking of an oath is not only lawful but even laudable. An oath has its origin in faith, by which we believe God to be the author of all truth, who cannot deceive or be deceived, “ to whose eyes

(15) Matt. xiv. 7.

(16) Acts xxiii. 12.

(17) Ps. xviii. 8.

(18) Deut. vi. 15.

(19) Ps. lxii. 12.

(20) 2 Cor. i. 23.

Philem. i. 8. 1 Thess. ii. 10.

(21) Apoc. x. 6.

(22) Heb. vi. 17.

Gen. xxii. 16. Exod. xxxiii. 1.

(23) Ps. cix. 4.

“all things are naked and open,”(24) who, in fine, superintends in an admirable manner all human affairs, whose providence governs the world: imbued with this faith we appeal to God as a witness of the truth, to whom it were wicked and impious not to yield implicit belief. With regard to the end of an oath, its scope and intent is to establish the justice and innocence of man, and to terminate disputes and contests: this is the doctrine of S. Paul in his Epistle to the Hebrews,(25) Nor does this doctrine at all clash with these words of the Redeemer, recorded in S. Matthew: “You have heard that it was said of old; “thou shalt not commit perjury, but thou shalt perform thy oaths to the Lord: but I say to you not to swear at all; neither by heaven, because it is the throne of God; “neither by the earth, because it is the footstool of his feet; neither by Jerusalem, because it is the city of the great king: neither shalt thou swear by thy head, because thou canst not make one hair white or black. Let your talk be yea, yea; no, no; and that which is over and above these is of evil.” (26) It cannot be asserted that these words condemn oaths universally and under all circumstances: we have already seen that the Apostles and even our Lord himself swore frequently: the object of the Redeemer was rather to reprove the perverse opinion of the Jews, which taught them to think that to justify the taking of an oath, its truth alone was sufficient. Hence even on the most trivial occasions they did not hesitate to make frequent use of oaths, and to exact them from others. This practice the Redeemer condemns and reprobates; teaching that an oath is never to be taken, unless necessity require so solemn a pledge. Oaths have been instituted as remedies for human frailty; and bespeaking, as it does, the inconstancy of him who takes, or the contumacy of him who exacts it, and who refuses to yield his assent without it, an oath has its source in the corruption of our nature, and can therefore be justified by necessity alone.

Objection.

Its solution

(24) Heb. iv. 13. (25) Heb. vi. 16. (26) Matt. v. 34, 35, 36, 37.

Explanation of the words of the Redeemer.

But to explain the words of the Redeemer—When our Lord says: “Let your speech be yea, yea: no, no,” (27) he evidently forbids the habit of swearing in familiar conversation and on trivial matters: he therefore admonishes us particularly against a habitual propensity to swearing; and this admonition the pastor will impress deeply and repeatedly on the minds of the faithful. That countless evils grow out of the unrestrained habit of swearing is a melancholy truth supported by the evidence of Scripture, and the testimony of the Holy Fathers. Thus we read in Ecclesiasticus: “Let not thy mouth be accustomed to “swearing; for in it there are many falls;” (28) and again: “A man that swareth much shall be filled with “iniquity, and a scourge shall not depart from his “house.” (29) In the works of S. Basil, and also in the treatise of S. Augustine against lying, the pastor will find abundant matter on this subject. (30)

Negative part of the command-
ment.

Having hitherto explained the positive, we now come to explain the negative part of the commandment. By it we are forbidden to take the name of God in vain; and he who, not guided by prudent deliberation, but hurried on by rashness, dares to take an oath, is guilty of a grievous sin. This the very words of the commandment declare: “Thou shalt “not take the name of the Lord thy God in vain.” In these words the Almighty would seem to assign the reason why a rash oath is so grievous a crime:—it derogates from the Majesty of him whom we profess to recognise as our Lord and our God. This commandment, therefore, forbids to swear falsely, because he who does not hesitate to appeal to God to witness falsehood, offers a grievous injury to the divine Majesty, charging him either with ignorance, as though the truth could be concealed from his all-seeing eye, or with injustice and depravity, as though the Eternal Truth could bear testimony to falsehood.

(27) Matt. v. 37. (28) Eccl. xxiii. 9. (29) Eccl. xxiii. 12.

(30) Basil. in Psal. 14. ad hæc verba: qui jurat proximo suo, & Aug. lib. de mendac. c. 14. Vid. 12. q. 2. c. primum est.

Amongst false swearers are to be numbered not only those who affirm as true what they know to be false, but also those who swear to what is really true, believing it to be false. (31) The essence of a lie consists in speaking contrary to one's conviction; and such persons, therefore, as swear to what they believe to be false, are evidently guilty of a lie, and therefore of perjury. On the same principle, he who swears to that which he thinks to be true, but which, although he swears according to his conviction, is really false, also incurs the guilt of perjury; unless he has used moral diligence to arrive at the truth. He who binds himself by oath to the performance of any thing, not intending to fulfil his promise, or having had the intention neglects its performance, is also guilty of perjury; and this equally applies to those who, having bound themselves to God by vow, neglect its fulfilment.

How violated.
I. & II.

III.

IV.

Note.

V.

VI.

VII.

VIII.

This commandment is also violated, if justice, which is one of the three conditions of an oath, be wanting; and hence he who swears to commit a mortal sin, to perpetrate murder, for instance, violates this commandment, although he should have really intended to commit the crime, and his oath should have possessed what we before pointed out as a necessary condition of every oath, that is, truth. To these are to be added oaths sworn through a sort of contempt; such as an oath not to observe the Evangelical counsels of celibacy and poverty. None, it is true, are obliged to embrace these counsels, but by swearing to their non-observance, they are contemned and violated. This commandment is also sinned against, and the second condition of an oath, which is "judgment," is violated by swearing on slight grounds and mere conjecture, although what is sworn be true, and believed to be so by him who swears; because, notwithstanding its truth, it still involves a sort of falsehood; for he who swears with such indifference exposes himself to extreme danger of perjury. To swear by false gods is likewise to swear

(31) Lev. xix. 12.

falsely: what more opposed to truth than to appeal to lying and false deities as to the true God? (32)

- IX. But as the Scripture, when it prohibits perjury, adds: "Thou shalt not prophane the name of thy God," (33) it therefore prohibits all irreverence not only to his name, but also to those things to which, in accordance with this commandment, reverence is due; such as the Word of God, the majesty of which has been recognised and revered not only by the pious, but also sometimes by the impious, as we read in Judges of Eglon, king of the Moabites. (34)
- X. But he who, to support heresy and impiety, wrests the Sacred Scriptures from their genuine and true meaning, is guilty of the most flagrant irreverence towards the Divine Word; and of this we are admonished by these words of the prince of the Apostles: "There are some things hard to be understood, which the unlearned and unstable wrest, as they do also the other Scriptures, to their own destruction." (35) It is also a shameful irreverence of the Scripture, to pervert the words and sentences which it contains, and which should be mentioned with due reverence, to some prophane purpose, such as scurrility, fable, vanity, flattery, detraction, superstition, satire, and the like. Such prophanation of the Divine Word the Council of Trent commands to be severely reprehended. (36) In the next place, as they who under severe affliction implore the assistance of God, so they, who invoke not his aid, deny him due honor; and these David rebukes when he says: "They have not called upon the Lord, they trembled for fear where there was no fear." (37) Still more enormous is the guilt of those who, with impure and impious lips, dare to curse or blaspheme the holy name of God, that name which is to be blessed and praised above measure by all his creatures, or even the names of the Saints who reign with him in glory. Shuddering, as it were, at its very mention, the Sacred Scrip-

(32) Vid. Aug. epist. 54. (33) Lev. xix. 12. (34) Judges, iii. 20.

(35) Pet. iii. 16. (36) Sess. 4. in fine. (37) Ps. xiii. 5. & lii. 26.

tures sometimes express the crime of which they are guilty, by the word "benediction." (38)

As, however, the dread of punishment has often a powerful effect in checking the licentiousness of crime, the pastor, in order the more effectually to excite, and the more easily to induce to an observance of this commandment, will diligently explain the remaining words, which are, as it were, its appendix, and which run thus: "FOR THE LORD WILL NOT HOLD HIM GUILTY THAT SHALL TAKE THE NAME OF THE LORD HIS GOD IN VAIN." (39)

Sanction of this precept

In the first place the pastor will teach, that in the annexation of threats to the violation of this commandment reason discovers the wisest ends: it demonstrates at once the grievousness of sin and the goodness displayed in our regard by a beneficent God, who, far from desiring the death of the sinner, deters by these salutary threats from incurring his severity, doubtless in order that we may experience his kindness rather than his anger. The pastor will urge this consideration, a consideration to be dwelt on with indefatigable earnestness, in order that the faithful may be made sensible of the grievousness of the crime, may detest it still more, and may employ increased care and caution to avoid its commission.

Its wisdom to be developed by the pastor.
I.

He will also observe how prone Christians are to this sin, since God has not only issued a command for its prevention, but has also enforced this command by so severe a sanction. The advantages to be derived from this consideration are indeed incredible: as nothing is more injurious than a listless security, so the knowledge of our own weakness is attended with the most salutary consequences. He will next observe that the punishment, which awaits the violation of this commandment, is not fixed and determinate: the threat is general: it declares that he who is guilty of the violation shall not escape unpunished. The chastisements, therefore, with which we are every day visited, should impress upon our minds the enormity

II.

III.

(38) 3 Kings, xxi. 13.—Job, i. 11. and ii. 9.

(39) Exod. xx. 7.

of this crime. They admonish us, in language the most intelligible, that the violation of this commandment cannot pass with impunity; that the heaviest punishments will overtake him who prophanes the name of God; a consideration which it is hoped must excite to future vigilance.

Practical conclusion.

Deterred therefore by a holy and salutary dread, the faithful should use every exertion to avoid the violation of this commandment: if “for every idle word that men shall speak, they shall render an account on the day of judgment;” (40) how severe the account which they shall have to render, whose crime involves the awful guilt of contemning the name of the Eternal God!

(40) Matt. xii. 56.

---

THE THIRD COMMANDMENT.

---

“REMEMBER THAT THOU KEEP HOLY THE SABBATH DAY.
 “SIX DAYS SHALT THOU LABOUR AND SHALT DO ALL “THY WORKS; BUT ON THE SEVENTH DAY IS THE SAB-“BATH OF THE LORD THY GOD: THOU SHALT DO NO “WORK ON IT, THOU NOR THY SON, NOR THY DAUGH-“TER, NOR THY MAN-SERVANT, NOR THY MAID-SERVANT “NOR THY BEAST, NOR THE STRANGER THAT IS WITHIN “THY GATES: FOR IN SIX DAYS THE LORD MADE HEAVEN “AND EARTH, AND THE SEA, AND ALL THINGS THAT ARE “IN THEM, AND RESTED ON THE SEVENTH DAY: THERE-“FORE THE LORD BLESSED THE SEVENTH DAY: AND “SANCTIFIED IT.” (1)

What this commandment prescribes,

THIS commandment, as is required by the natural order, prescribes the external worship which is due to God, and is, as it were, a consecutory of the preceding commandment.

(1) Exod. xx. 8.

If we sincerely and devoutly yield internal worship to God, guided by the faith and hope we have in him, we cannot but honor him with external worship and thanksgiving: (2) this duty, we cannot easily discharge whilst occupied in worldly affairs; and hence the necessity of appointing a fixed time for its performance. As, therefore, this commandment, if duly observed, is productive of much fruit, it is of the highest importance that the pastor use the utmost diligence in its exposition. The word "Remember," with which the commandment commences, must animate him to the zealous performance of this duty: if the faithful are commanded to "remember" this commandment, it becomes the duty of the pastor to recall it frequently to their recollection.

Importance of its exposition,

The importance of its observance may be inferred from the consideration, that a faithful compliance with its injunctions facilitates the observance of all the other commandments. Amongst the other works of piety by which the Sabbath is to be sanctified, the faithful are bound to assemble in the Church to hear the divine word: when they have thus learned the justifications of the Lord, they will be prompted to the faithful and willing observance of his holy Law. Hence the sanctification of the Sabbath is very often enforced in Scripture, as may be seen in Exodus, (3) Leviticus, (4) Deuteronomy, (5) and in the prophecies of Isaias, (6) Jeremiah, (7) and Ezekiel, (8) all of which contain this precept which commands the observance of the Sabbath. (9) Princes and magistrates are to be admonished and exhorted to lend the sanction and support of their authority to the pastors of and observance.

Note,

(2) Vid. Trid. decret. de ciborum delæctu et festis diebus, sess. ult. sub finem. Item D. Thom. 2. 2. q. 122. art. 4. item de consecrat. dist. 3. multis capitib. (3) Exod. xvi. 20, 31. (4) Lev. xvi. 19, 23, 26. (5) Deut. v. (6) Isa. lvi. 58, 66. (7) Jerem. 17. (8) Ezeck. xx. 22, 23, 46. (9) De præd. verb. Dei, vid. Trid. sess. 5. c. 2. vide & singulare hac de re libellum S. Caroli Borrom in actis Eccles. Mediol. vide etiam acta eccles. Bononiens.

the Church, particularly in upholding and extending the worship of God, and in commanding obedience to the spiritual injunctions of the pastor.

Its exposition: in what it differs from the other commandments:

With regard to the exposition of this commandment, the faithful are to be carefully taught in what it accords with, and in what it differs from the others, in order that they may understand why Christians observe not the Sabbath but the Lord's day. The point of difference is evident: the other commandments of the Decalogue are precepts of the natural law, obligatory at all times and unalterable, and hence, after the abrogation of the Law of Moses, all the commandments contained in the two tables are observed by Christians, not however because their observance is commanded by Moses, but because they accord with the law of nature and are enforced by its dictate: whereas this commandment, if considered as to the time of its fulfilment, is not fixed and unalterable, but is susceptible of change, and belongs not to the moral but ceremonial Law. Neither is it a principle of the natural law: we are not instructed by the natural law to worship God on the Sabbath, rather than on any other day. The Sabbath was kept holy from the time of the liberation of the people of Israel from the bondage of Pharaoh: the obligation was to cease with the abrogation of the Jewish worship, of which it formed a part; and it therefore was no longer obligatory after the death of Christ. Having been, as it were, images which shadowed the light and the truth, these ceremonies were to disappear at the coming of that light and truth, which is Christ Jesus. Hence S. Paul, in his Epistle to the Galatians, when reproving the observers of the Mosaic rites says: "you observe days and months and times and years; I am afraid of you lest perhaps I have laboured in vain amongst you;" (10) sentiments which are also to be found in his Epistle to the Colossians. (11) On the difference between this and the other commandments these observations will suffice.

(10) Galat. iv. 10.

(11) Col. ii. 16.

As to their accordance, it consists not in rites and ceremonies, but in as much as this commandment, in common with the others, expresses a moral obligation, founded on the law of nature. The worship of God and the practice of religion, which it comprises, have the natural law for their basis: the unbidden impulse of nature prompts us to give some time to the worship of God; and this is a truth demonstrated by the unanimous consent of all nations who, accordingly, consecrated festivals to the public solemnities of religion. As nature requires some time to be given to necessary relaxation, to sleep, and to the repose and refreshment of the body; so she also requires, that some time be devoted to the mind, to refresh and invigorate its energies by heavenly contemplation. Hence the necessity of consecrating some time to the worship of the Deity and to the practice of religion, duties which, doubtless, form part of the moral law. The Apostles therefore resolved to consecrate the first day of the week to the divine worship, and called it "the Lord's day:" S. John in his Apocalypse makes mention of "the Lord's day;" (12) and the Apostle commands collections to be made "on the first day of the week," (13) that is, according to the interpretation of S. Chrysostome, on the Lord's day; and thus we are given to understand that even then the Lord's day was kept holy in the church.

In what it agrees with them.

An illustration.

The Jewish Sabbath when and by whom changed to the "Lords day."

In order that the faithful may know what they are to do, what to avoid, on the Lord's day, it will not be found foreign to his purpose, if the pastor, dividing the commandment into four parts, explain each part with minute accuracy. In the first place, then, he will explain generally the meaning of these words: "Remember that thou keep holy the Sabbath day." The word "remember"

This commandment divided into four parts:
I.

(12) Apoc. i. 10.

(13) Chrysost. hom. 15. in Corinth. Amb. item & Theophylact. vid. etiam. Can. Apost. c. 67. Ignat. Epist ad Magnes. Just. apol. 2. Tertul. in apol. c. 16. & de Coron. milit. c. 3. & de idol. c. 14. & Cyp. epist. 33. Clement. Alex. lib. 5. Strom. satis ante finem. Orig. hom. 7. in Exod.

- is appropriately made use of at the beginning of the commandment, to signify that the sanctification of that particular day belonged to the ceremonial law. Of this it would seem to have been necessary to admonish the people, for, although the law of nature commands us to give religious worship to God, it fixes no particular day
- II. for the performance of that duty. They are also to be taught, that from these words we may learn how we should employ our time during the week; that we are to keep constantly in view the Lord's day, on which we are, as it were, to render an account to God for the manner in which we have spent the week; and that therefore our occupations and conduct should be such as not to be unacceptable in the sight of God, or, as it is written, be to us "an occasion of grief, and a scruple of heart." (14)
- III. Finally, we are taught, and the instruction demands our serious attention, that there are but too many circumstances which may lead to a forgetfulness of this commandment, such as the evil example of others who neglect its observance, and an inordinate love of amusements, which frequently withdraw from the holy and religious observance of the Lord's day.

Meaning of the word
"Sabbath."

We now come to the meaning of the word "Sabbath." Sabbath is a Hebrew word: it signifies cessation: to keep the Sabbath, therefore, means to cease from labour; and in this sense the seventh day was called the "Sabbath," (It is so called by God in Exodus) because, having finished the creation of the world, God rested from all the work which he had done. (15) Not only the seventh day, but, in honor of that day, the entire week was subsequently called "the Sabbath;" and in this meaning of the word, the Pharisee says in S. Luke: "I fast twice in a Sabbath." (16) Thus much will suffice with regard to the signification of the word "Sabbath."

In the words of the commandment, the sanctification of (14) 1 Kings xxv. 31.

(15) Gen. ii. 3. Exod. xx. 21. Deut. v. 12.

(16) Luke xviii. 12.

The Sabbath is a cessation from bodily labour and worldly business, as is clear from the following words: "Thou shalt do no work on it." This alone, however, does not comprise the meaning of the commandment: if it did, it would have been sufficient to say in Deuteronomy, "observe the day of the Sabbath;" (17) but it is added, "and sanctify it;" and these additional words prove that the Sabbath is a day sacred to religion, set apart for works of piety and exercises of devotion. The Sabbath, therefore, we sanctify by devoting it to duties of piety and religion; and this is evidently the Sabbath, which Isaias, calls "delightful;" (18) when thus spent, it is the delight of God and of his faithful servants. If then to this religious and holy observance of the Sabbath we add works of mercy, the rewards proposed to our piety in the same chapter are numerous and most important. (19) The true and proper meaning, therefore, of this commandment tends to this, that we take special care to set apart some fixed time, when, disengaged from bodily labour, and undisturbed by worldly cares, we may devote our whole being, soul and body, to the religious worship of God.

Sanctification of the Sabbath.

The true meaning of the precept.

The other part of the precept declares that the seventh day was consecrated by Almighty God to his worship: "Six days," says he, "shalt thou labour, and do all thy works;" but on "the seventh day is the Sabbath of the Lord thy God;" that is to say, the Sabbath is consecrated to the Lord, and on that day we are to render him the duties of religion, and to know that the seventh day is a sign of his rest. The Sabbath was consecrated to the worship of God, because it must have proved inconvenient to leave to a rude people the choice of a time of worship, lest, perhaps, they may be led to imitate the idolatrous customs of Egypt. The seventh day was, therefore, chosen for the worship of God, and its dedication to that end is complete with mystery. Hence in Exodus, (20) and in Second part of the commandment: its meaning.

The Sabbath why fixed for the divine worship.

(17) Deut. v. 12.

(18) Isa. lviii. 13.

(19) Isa. lviii. 6.

(20) Exod. xxxi. 13.